THE HOUSE of representatives 329 to 78 gives the president four thousand, eight hundred and eighty million dollars, to be spent in accordance with his best judgment, to fight depression and unemployment.

In early days, the little "small change" eighty million dollars, tacked on at the end of the large figure, would have astounded the country, for in those days millions were respectable units. Now our government unit is the billion, one thousand millions. When will the trillion start its career? The printing press could bring it.

CONGRESS IS told that 9,000,000 workers are idle. They want work but there is none for them.

Besides the nine million idle workers, 7,400,000 children were on relief rolls last year. This is a real depression, and if it is possible to "buy ourselves out of it," the money will be well spent.

At least, President Roosevelt makes good his statement, "nobody shall starve in the United States."

CUBA WILL be proud to hear about one of her daughters, Carolina Diaz, a Cuban mother forty years old, in one of the lifeboats with her ten-year-old son. Sailors and a male passenger in the boat were rendered nearly unconscious by the freezing wind and water. The boat seemed doomed. Carolina Diaz, determined that her son should not be lost, seized an oar, guided the boat, kept it from swamping. She ought to have a monument.

LOUISVILLE ROAD AGREEMENT MADE

Officials Decide All Questions About Street Extension

Final agreement on all questions involved in the widening, repaving and extension of Louisville avenue from the river to the Dixie Overland highway has been reached in a conference between city officials, the state highway department and the federal bureau of public roads, according to an announcement made Saturday morning by Mayor Arnold Bernstein.

Following is the mayor's statement:

"Resolutions adopted by the city council of Monroe this morning met all requirements of the federal system of public roads and of the Louisiana highway commission, requisite to the paving of Louisville avenue from the new bridge to the Dixie-Overland highway at its intersection with the Sterlington road.

"At a special session of the city council, attended by engineers of the state and federal departments, the city approved the contracts necessary to insure the pavement of Louisville avenue from the new bridge to the Dixie-Overland highway at the intersection with the Sterlington road, as provided by the state.

"The contract price is $183,000; that, with the works spent on the approaches of the bridge and with the amount that will be spent on the Sicard over-pass which Mr. Ives gives assurance will be done will certainly employ a great many working men here in Monroe.

"Mr. Ives assures us that outside of superintendents and technical men, that all labor will be employed from the parish of Ouachita."

Attending the conference were Mayor Bernstein, Commissioners Breard and Swayze, City Attorney H. H. Russell, City Engineer W. I. Neel and Engineer Ives of the Louisiana highway commission representing the bureau of public roads.

Mayor Bernstein announced his satisfaction with the culmination of the project and his confidence "that the road referred to would be completed by the time the new bridge is completed in order to afford the complete highway through the city of Monroe."

Wilentz Expects Hauptmann To Break And Confess His Guilt

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 26.—(AP)—A New York policeman, returned from Germany with relatives of the late Isador Fisch to testify at the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann for murder, has also given the state new handwriting evidence, it was learned tonight, to be used against the Bronx carpenter.

As Hauptmann's counsel moved to bolster Hauptmann's main hope—an alibi—the state announced that Lieut. Arthur Johnson of the New York City police, recently returned from Germany, had brought back several samples of Hauptmann's handwriting.

"We want not only a conviction of this man," said Attorney General Wilentz, "but we want to pile evidence upon evidence so convincingly that Hauptmann will break under it and make a full statement of guilt."

To this a member of Hauptmann's counsel said:

"We are more confident that ever that Hauptmann will be acquitted."

Lieut. Johnson also brought back for possible appearances on the witness stand relatives of the dead Isador Fisch—the man Hauptmann by implication accused of the Lindbergh baby murder—who will testify that Fisch died in poverty. This testimony will be used in rebuttal to tear down defense claims that Fisch was the

Heavy Reinforcements Reported Arriving At Jehol Border

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

PEIPING, China, Jan. 26.—A new Japanese offensive at Chahar was feared in Peiping tonight as dispatches from Kalgan reported heavy reinforcements were arriving at the Jehol-Chahar border.

The death toll in the week's fighting along the frontier was estimated at nearly 300.

The advices purportedly came from Sung Chen-Yuan, Chinese governor of Chahar whose troops, the Japanese charged, penetrated into Jehol and precipitated the Japanese push which, authorities said, was designed to clear the disputed border area of Chinese marauders.

Previously, however, the Japanese military command at Kalgan was quoted as saying the disputed area, consisting of approximately 30 square miles outside the northern spur of the great wall, has been cleared of Chinese and quiet prevailed.

Rengo (Japanese) News Agency dispatches from Chahar to Shanghai said Sung would discuss settlement of the Sino-Japanese difficulties with Gen. Miyotaro Sugihara, commanding Japanese troops in Jehol, either at Peiping or at Chengtefu, Jehol.

(The Chinese national government at Nanking also received reports that settlement was imminent. Officials, professing ignorance of the details, expressed hopes "for an early settlement of the dispute at the border in order to avoid aggravation of an already complicated situation.")

ROGERS HAS HIS SAY

PASADENA, Cal., Jan. 26.—(Special)—Glad congress give Mr. Roosevelt permission to spend that four billion eight hundred million, himself. Just imagine if they had decided they would spend it themselves. That would be an awful lot of money if you was paying it, but when you are just borrowing it, it ain't so much.

Everybody in Washington seems to be apologizing to each other. In Washington they just generally figure that one hatred offsets the other, and they are both even.

Huey Long Declares Foes Plotted Death

MOHAWK TRAGEDY SURVIVORS TELL DIFFERENT TALES

U. S. Quizzes Crew Members To Get At Bottom Of Sea Disaster

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Survivors of the Mohawk disaster still shaken by the tragedy that took 46 lives, offered sharply conflicting testimony today on the liner's reputedly crippled steering gear, previously blamed for the collision.

Graphic stories were told of frightened passengers plunging from the ice covered decks of the liner into the sea; of the terrific impact; of life boats tangled in ropes because of ice; of the bitter bitter cold and suffering.

In the customs building, Captain Edmund Wang of the Norwegian freighter Talisman, whose bow crushed the steel-sheathed side of the Ward chartered Mohawk, was the first witness before a U. S. steamship inspection service inquiry seeking to determine the cause of the collision off the New Jersey coast Thursday night. Late today the inquiry was adjourned until Monday.

U. S. Attorney Martin Conboy secretly questioned members of the crews of the vessels at the federal building, sending some of the witnesses afterward to the other probe. He would not comment on the possibility of a grand jury investigation.

"She (the Mohawk) was sheering in toward us," Captain Edmund Wang of the Talisman told the U. S. steamboat inspection board. "It must have been his steering gear. I couldn't think of a sea-faring man making such a maneuver. I said, 'I bet his steering gear is gone.'"

COLDWATER FLOOD ROLLS EASTWARD

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

MARKS, Miss., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Spreading out its rampaging waters over an ever-widening area, the Coldwater river, which has already laid a vast expanse of water over portions of four counties in north Mississippi, tonight rolled on toward Crowder, 15 miles east of here, with water released through breaks in levees south of here yesterday.

As refugees were unloaded by the scores at the edge of the flood water here, the situation at Crowder necessitated the sending of more boats to rescue those still marooned.

The drive was put through by rescuers in 20 motorboats.

From Crenshaw to Sledge the water dropped about three feet. It was falling slowly near Marks and Darling.

The spread of water south of here was accelerated by the thawing of snow and ice.

7 PERSONS FILE BALLOT PETITIONS

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Seven persons in civil district court here today filed petitions seeking to compel Registrar of Voters R. J. Gregory to inscribe their names on the registration rolls.

The men asserted deputy registrars had refused to place their names on the rolls when they had appeared at the registration offices, although the men were qualified to be registered.

The men gave their names as: Cyril M. Cann, William Earl Canan, Alvin West, Benjamin A. Montgomery, Jacob Rohrbacker, Frank J. Tripoli and Clarence C. Wendt, all of New Orleans.

A hearing is scheduled here Monday in civil district court in a similar case petitioned by Allen F. Chappuis, of New Orleans.

Witness Tells Story Of How Alleged Scheme Was Frustrated

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Under cloak of martial law Senator Huey P. Long today conducted a dramatic court "inquiry" into what he boldly charged was a plot by a group of hostile public officials to "kill him."

The hearing before the East Baton Rouge district court produced elements of stark melodrama as Long unraveled what he said was a plot to waylay and kill him.

The "inquiry" climaxed a period of tense excitement in the Louisiana capital inaugurated by seizure of the parish courthouse late yesterday by a group of 300 grim anti-Long men.

The courthouse invasion prompted Governor Oscar K. Allen to proclaim martial law throughout East Baton Rouge parish, including the city of Baton Rouge.

Militiamen were rushed to the capital last night under terms of a modified martial law order issued by the governor to quell what he described as "armed insurrection against the duly elected and appointed officials." Late today the governor augumented the original proclamation with a full martial law edict.

The court hearing came to an abrupt end when Long announced that he was unable to find six "conspirator witnesses." He stated it would be resumed February 1, and immediately made plans to return to Washington.

Long produced a witness who related details of what he said was a plan to wreck the senator's automobile so that "50 or 70 men could come up and kill him." The senator then named a group of public officials, including sheriffs, the district attorney of East Baton Rouge parish and others as the alleged plotters.

Declaring the proceeding halted for the time being, Long said it was a "mysterious circumstance" why persons of their prominence could not be found to testify.

Heavily guarded by state police and national guardsmen who surrounded the statehouse under military mobilization orders Long said he was "going pretty soon."

He didn't say just when. He had just finished attempting to show that the alleged murder conspirators had tried to find out when he left on a recent automobile trip to New Orleans in an alleged endeavor to run his car off the road and shoot him.

Establishing a court in the unoccupied supreme court's room in the statehouse with Judge J. D. Womack, whom he recently had appointed to the East Baton Rouge district court, presiding, Long directed his attorney-general to call for an inquiry into the reputed "murder conspiracy."

The Louisiana political dictator set up the court after moving swiftly to concentrate national guardsmen in the state capital following yesterday's seizure of the courthouse by citizens enraged at what they said were plans of state police to arrest scores of their number.

Long charged, and attempted to substantiate with witness testimony, that a group of public officials and citizens had plotted to kill him, had arranged with a man to give them information about the senator's movements, and had given him weapons, ammunition and gas bombs to carry out the alleged conspiracy.

He named as the conspirators—and also as the witnesses who "could not be found"—District Attorney John Fred Odom, of East Baton Rouge parish; his assistant, Fred S. LeBlanc; Sheriff Henry Sherburne of Iberville

MOODIE'S FATE IN HANDS OF JURISTS

BISMARCK, N. D., Jan. 26.—(AP)—The future political life of North Dakota's governor, Thomas H. Moodie, was placed in the hands of five supreme court justices today.

Claim and counter-claim of the eligibility of Moodie were finally submitted to the court with a declaration by Attorney General P. O. Sathre that "whatever the decision will be, it will be a decision that will square itself with eternal justice."

Moodie, relaxed, sat in his office a floor below.

"Whatever their decision may be, will be acceptable to me," Moodie declared. "The facts are in now. The truth has been presented to them."

ALLEN PROCLAIMS MARTIAL LAW IN CAPITAL PARISH

Governor Accuses Standard Oil Company Of Fomenting Trouble

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Governor O. K. Allen today issued a formal proclamation declaring that "conditions of violence, insurrection and disorder" existed in Baton Rouge and commanded the state militia to "preserve law and order in the city of Baton Rouge and the parish of East Baton Rouge."

The proclamation was issued as the senator's "court investigation" into what he said was a plot to "murder" him was preparing to start in the state supreme court chambers.

Governor Allen's proclamation charged that "a situation of armed insurrection against the duly elected and appointed officials has broken out." It said the oil company "declined to do anything to prevent the same."

The proclamation was issued while throngs of uniformed members of the state militia guarded the state house inside and out.

"Executive Department,

"Baton Rouge.

"Whereas, in the parish of East Baton Rouge and the city of Baton Rouge, a situation of armed insurrection against the duly elected and appointed officials has broken out, and armed men threaten to usurp the functions of orderly government in that parish, and

PECULIAR COURT TEST ARRANGED

Teacher Asks For Bigger Fine So High Tribunal Can Act

The peculiar circumstance of a defendant asking that his fine be raised to more than 10 times the amount originally fixed by the judge occurred in district court here Saturday when J. B. Thornhill, former assistant district attorney, requested Judge David I. Garrett to increase the fine against his client, Chester Crumm, from $10 to more than $300. This action was taken in order that the case might be carried to the supreme court. Judge Garrett raised the fine to $301.

Mr. Crumm is principal of the school at Cypress. The charge against him was said to have grown out of the whipping of three boys in which he was said to have used three switches.

In passing sentence last week Judge Garrett said that discipline in the schools probably would be improved by the use of corporal punishment.

INSANITY BLAMED FOR 4 KILLINGS

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—(AP)—The temporary insanity of a young teacher was blamed today for a wild rampage that cost four lives.

A jury closed Coroner Frank Walsh's "saddest inquest" with a verdict holding Henry W. Arden, 27, unemployed language instructor, responsible for "three murders and one suicide while temporarily insane."

Arden brooding over his crippled condition and disgruntled because the relief allotment for himself and his mother, Ruth, was to be cut, slew Miss Alice Mae Irwin, comely relief case worker, in his home yesterday. He and his mother hastened to the Chicago avenue relief station and sprayed the office with pistol bullets. Miss Caroline Wallace, supervisor, was slain. Niels Nielson and Miss Hazel Dugan were wounded. Then Arden ended the gory episode by killing his mother and committing suicide.

GRADY WILHITE BADLY WOUNDED BY BOB BENSON

CHARGE IS PREFERRED

Altercation Said To Have Grown Out Of Business Difficulty

Grady Wilhite, 27, saw mill foreman, was shot and critically wounded by R. P. (Bob) Benson, 59, timber contractor, Saturday afternoon about 3 o'clock on Trenton street, West Monroe. The shooting took place after Wilhite reputedly struck Benson a blow with his fist, following an alleged disagreement over wages Wilhite was said to have demanded of Benson, and which the latter was said to have stated he did not owe Wilhite.

Wilhite approached Benson as the latter came out of his office and demanded the money he said was due him, according to witnesses. A few words passed between the men, and Benson turned and started walking away, it was stated. Wilhite then struck Benson on the side of his face, knocking him between two cars parked at the curb, and the latter then drew his .38 caliber revolver and shot Wilhite, it was reported.

The bullet penetrated Wilhite's body from just behind one hip and came out on the opposite side of his body, after passing through the intestines, it was stated.

Wilhite was carried in an ambulance to St. Francis sanitarium. He was given a blood transfusion last night.

SCOUTS ARE BUSY OBTAINING NAMES

About 200 Signatures Now On List To Be Sent To President

Boy Scouts from various Monroe troops, working in pairs, had a busy time Saturday soliciting signatures to messages that are to be sent to President Roosevelt on his fifty-third birthday.

More than 100 signatures had been obtained Saturday morning and an almost equal number in the afternoon. The plan back of the message is to raise additional funds for the Monroe Junior Charity league and the national movement to control infantile paralysis, as a testimonial to the president. Some misunderstanding developed about the use of the funds, it was reported by some of the Boy Scout solicitors. Refusal to sign the message was made by some of the business men approached because they believed the money to be raised would go to the telegraph companies who are sponsoring the plan.

Manager Perkins of the Postal Telegraph, Manager Dawson of the Western Union and Mrs. Prioleau Ellis, of the Junior Charity league, made it clear that this was wholly erroneous.

Every penny of the 25 cents paid by each person signing the message will go to the funds for afflicted chil-

ORDER SUSPENDED BY SUPREME COURT

BATON ROUGE, Jan. 26.—(AP)—An order issued by Judge W. Carruth Jones, of the East Baton Rouge parish district court, January 14 authorizing Sheriff Robert L. Pettit of East Baton parish to name six deputies, was suspended by four associate justices of the state supreme court Saturday.

The four justices signed an order temporarily suspending the verdict of Judge Jones and directed the district judge, Sheriff Pettit and the six deputies to show cause next Wednesday why the order of the district court should not be set aside.

The four justices signed the order suspending the district court's edict after a petition seeking this was filed with the state supreme court in the name of Governor O. K. Allen, Attorney General Gaston L. Porterie, Louis F. Guerre, superintendent of the state bureau of criminal identification, and the "East Baton Rouge police jury."

The petition asserted the names of the six deputies had not been approved by the bureau of criminal identification in accordance with act 27 of 1934. The petition asserted this act repealed article 764 of the code of practice, which authorized district judges to authorize the appointment of deputy sheriffs.

Crowd Nearly Mobs State Employe Who Reported That Citizens Were Assembling To Resist Huey Long

Ordered to report at Baton Rouge for duty, Company G, rifle unit of the Louisiana national guard, of Monroe, was mobilizing last night preparatory to leaving for the state capital this morning. Captain L. F. Rolleigh, commander of the company, declined to discuss the mobilization. It was learned, however, that the troopers were ordered to entrain last night but were unable to do so because of train schedules. Sixty-seven men were reputedly called for duty.

CLINTON, LA., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Several hundred men assembled at the courthouse here tonight after reports were circulated that this section would be placed under martial law tomorrow or Monday. "We will be ready for them, and we will be ready to stay until the last ditch," said Mayor J. C. Decuir. A skeleton group of the armed men prepared to stay here all night, assembled around the courthouse.

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 26.—(AP)—A bloody battle was narrowly averted here late today when a citizens' army surrendered to Huey Long's state soldiery in a hair raising spectacle that left one man unexplainably wounded and resulted in a free-for-all fight with spectators.

For a tense 30 minutes today the Square Deal association citizens' group of 100 armed men deployed in battle formation on the parish airfield against a crack troop of 75 national guardsmen from Baton Rouge, which is under martial law.

The citizens were entrenched behind automobiles near the woods. The militiamen, flat on the ground, deployed for a quarter of a mile toward the revolters against Long's dictatorship.

During the tenseness that preceded the surrender of the citizens and their technical arrest, George N. Allessi, 36, of Independence, La., a member of the

BOURGEOIS ESCAPES

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Earnest J. Bourgeois, who commanded the citizens' army against Huey Long's national guardsmen today, was believed to have escaped capture. About half of the citizens' army surrendered, others dashed by the militia in speeding automobiles and others left the field of battle through the woods.

Tangipahoa parish police jury, was wounded by buckshot above the heart, in the abdomen and in the back. His condition was serious.

After the citizens were captured and dispersed, several hundred spectators gathered around the airport.

Suddenly someone shouted:

"There he is!" There's the spy!"

The infuriated crowd, composed of men, women and children, surged toward a man whom they took to be the person who informed national guardsmen that the citizens were mustering a troop.

They closed in on him, tore his clothes, beat him unmercifully and stomped on him as he lay bleeding on the ground.

Guardsmen rushed in and dragged him away, then shot gas guns at the crowd to disperse it. The beaten man was identified as Otto Hardenstein, a state employe.

As the battle threatened on the outskirts of the town, a group of mothers headed by Mrs. J. A. Tucker, wife of a physician here, appealed to Governor O. K. Allen to rescind his martial law order "to spare young boys from the possible necessity of shooting down their fellow citizens and of risking their own lives."

"We hold you responsible for any loss of life or interference with citizens' rights," the petition concluded.

The battle scene was enacted before and after a succession of events that rocked the foundation of Louisiana.

KINGFISH LEAVES FOR WASHINGTON

Troopers Guard Huey As He Hurries Away From New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Escorted by uniformed national guardsmen and bodyguards in civilian clothes, Senator Huey P. Long left New Orleans shortly before 10 o'clock tonight for Washington aboard the Crescent limited.

Mrs. Long and their daughter Rose, accompanied the senator.

Long's departure was marked by a mild disturbance in the lobby of his hotel during which a reporter for the New Orleans Times-Picayune was beaten by two bodyguards. The reporter, Mortimer M. Kreeger, said he was struck when he attempted to question the senator.

Long was driven from his hotel to the station in his personal car. As he stepped from his automobile several guardsmen and men in plain clothes leaped from other machines and quickly formed a cordon about the senator's automobile. Surrounded by a circle of men four or five deep, Long walked from the car to the station.

As he strode into the station he shouted an inquiry concerning the whereabouts of his wife and daugh-

ASSERTS HAMILTON WAS FATALLY SHOT

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

ST. PAUL, Jan. 26.—(AP)—From a member of the Dillinger gang now in custody came a disclosure today that Dillinger's long sought lieutenant, John Hamilton, was fatally wounded last April by police at St. Paul.

The informant's story was substantiated by a letter written by John Dillinger to Hamilton's sweetheart, Patricia Cherrington. Both said two police intercepted Hamilton when he tried to run a police gauntlet at St. Paul on April 22, 1934, and wounded the gangster mortally in the exchange of shots.

Hamilton was rushed to Chicago, police were told, and was kept alive for four days. He was buried in a Chicago suburb.

The author of the story claimed to have accompanied Hamilton in the fatal fray. Except that he may have been a former Ohio convict, the informant's identity was not disclosed.

The advices purportedly came from Sung Chen-Yuan, Chinese governor of Chahar whose troops, the Japanese charged, penetrated into Jehol and precipitated the Japanese push which, authorities said, was designed to clear the disputed border area of Chinese marauders.

Previously, however, the Japanese military command at Kalgan was quoted as saying the disputed area, consisting of approximately 30 square miles outside the northern spur of the great wall, has been cleared of Chinese troops.

Rengo (Japanese) News Agency dispatches from Chahar to Shanghai said Sung would discuss settlement of the Sino-Japanese difficulties with Gen. Miyotaro Sugihara, commanding Japanese troops in Jehol, either at Peiping or at Chengteh, Jehol.

The Chinese national government at Nanking also received reports that settlement was imminent. Officials, professing ignorance of the details, expressed hopes "for an early settlement of the dispute at the border in order to avoid aggravation of an already complicated situation."

ROGERS HAS HIS SAY

PASADENA, Cal., Jan. 26.—(Special)—Glad congress gave Mr. Roosevelt permission to spend that four billion eight hundred million, himself. Just imagine if they had decided they would spend it themselves. That would have been a fine lot of money if you was paying it, but when you are just borrowing it, it's too much.

Everybody in Washington seems to be apologizing to each other. In Washington they figure that one apology offsets one hatred offsets the other. And we are always the other.

Yours,

Huey Long Declares Foes Plotted Death

U. S. Quizzes Crew Members To Get At Bottom Of Sea Disaster

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Survivors of the Mohawk disaster still shaken by the tragedy that took 46 lives, offered sharply conflicting testimony today on the liner's reputedly crippled steering gear, previously blamed for the collision.

Graphic stories were told of frightened passengers plunging from the ice covered decks of the liner into the sea; of the terrific impact; of life boats tangled in ropes because of ice; of the bitter bitter cold and suffering.

In the customs building, Captain Edmund Wang of the Norwegian freighter Talisman, whose bow crushed the steel-sheathed side of the Ward chartered Mohawk, was the first witness before a U. S. steamship inspection service inquiry seeking to determine the cause of the collision off the New Jersey coast Thursday night. Late today the inquiry was adjourned until Monday.

U. S. Attorney Martin Conboy secretly questioned members of the crews of the vessels at the federal building, sending some of the witnesses afterward to the other probe. He would not comment on the possibility of a grand jury investigation.

"She (the Mohawk) was sheering in toward us," Captain Edmund Wang of the Talisman told the U. S. steamboat inspection board. "It must have been his steering gear. I couldn't think of a sea-faring man making such a maneuver. I said, 'I bet his steering gear is gone.'"

COLDWATER FLOOD ROLLS EASTWARD

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

MARKS, Miss., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Spreading out its rampaging waters over an ever-widening area, the Coldwater river, which has already laid a vast expanse of water over portions of four counties in north Mississippi, tonight rolled on toward Crowder, 15 miles east of here, with water released through breaks in levees south of here yesterday.

As refugees were unloaded by the scores at the edge of the flood water here, the situation at Crowder necessitated the sending of more boats to rescue those still marooned.

The drive was made by relief workers in 20 motorboats.

From Crenshaw to Sledge the water dropped about three feet. It was falling slowly near Marks and Darling.

7 PERSONS FILE BALLOT PETITIONS

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Seven persons in civil district court today filed petitions seeking to compel Registrar of Voters R. J. Gregory to inscribe their names on the registration rolls.

The men asserted deputy registrars had refused to place their names on the rolls when they appeared at the registration offices, although the men were qualified to be registered.

The men gave their names as: Cyril M. Cann, William Earl Canan, Alvin West, Benjamin A. Montgomery, Jacob Rohrbacker, Frank J. Tripoli and Clarence C. Wendt, all of New Orleans.

A hearing is scheduled here Monday in civil district court in a similar case previously filed by Allen F. Chappuis, of New Orleans.

Witness Tells Story Of How Alleged Scheme Was Frustrated

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Under cloak of martial law Senator Huey P. Long today conducted a dramatic court "inquiry" into what he boldly charged was a plot by a group of hostile public officials to "kill him."

The hearing before the East Baton Rouge district court produced elements of stark melodrama as Long unraveled what he said was a plot to waylay and kill him.

The "inquiry" climaxed a period of tense excitement in the Louisiana capital inaugurated by seizure of the parish courthouse late yesterday by a group of 300 grim anti-Long men.

The courthouse invasion prompted Governor Oscar K. Allen to proclaim martial law throughout East Baton Rouge parish, including the city of Baton Rouge.

Militiamen were rushed to the capital last night under terms of a modified martial law order issued by the governor to quell what he described as "armed insurrection against the duly elected and appointed officials." Late today the governor augmented the original proclamation with a full martial law edict.

The court hearing came to an abrupt end when Long announced that he was unable to find six "conspirator witnesses". He stated it would be resumed February 1, and immediately made plans to return to Washington.

Long produced a witness who related details of what he said was a plan to wreck the senator's automobile so that "50 or 70 men could come up and kill him." The senator then named a group of public officials, including sheriffs, the district attorney of East Baton Rouge parish and others as the alleged plotters.

Declaring the proceeding halted for the time being, Long said it was a "mysterious circumstance" why persons of their prominence could not be found to testify.

Heavily guarded by state police and national guardsmen who surrounded the statehouse under military mobilization orders Long said he was "going pretty soon."

He didn't say just when. He had just finished attempting to show that the alleged murder conspirators had tried to kill him on a recent automobile trip to New Orleans in an alleged endeavor to run his car off the road and shoot him.

Establishing a court in the unoccupied supreme court's room in the statehouse with Judge J. D. Womack, whom he recently had caused to be named to the East Baton Rouge district court, presiding, Long directed his attorney-general to call for a trial to inquire into the reputed "murder conspiracy."

The Louisiana political dictator set up the court after moving swiftly to concentrate national guardsmen in the state capital following yesterday's seizure of the courthouse by citizens enraged at what they said were plans of state police to arrest scores of their number.

Long charged, and attempted to substantiate with witness testimony, that a group of public officials and citizens had plotted to kill him, had arranged with a man to give them information about the senator's movements, and had given him weapons, ammunition and gas bombs to carry out the alleged conspiracy.

He named as the conspirators—and also as the witnesses who "could not be found"—District Attorney John Fred Odom, of East Baton Rouge parish, his assistant, Fred S. LeBlanc; Sheriff Henry Sherburne of Iberville

MOODIE'S FATE IN HANDS OF JURISTS

BISMARCK, N. D., Jan. 26.—(AP)—The future political life of North Dakota's governor, Thomas H. Moodie, was placed in the hands of five supreme court justices today.

Claim and counter-claim of the eligibility of Moodie were finally submitted to the court with a declaration by Attorney General P. O. Sathre that "whatever the decision will be, it will be a decision that will square itself with eternal justice."

Moodie, relaxed, sat in his office a floor below.

"Whatever their decision may be, it will be acceptable to me," Moodie declared. "The facts are in now. The truth has been presented to them."

ALLEN PROCLAIMS MARTIAL LAW IN CAPITAL PARISH

Governor Accuses Standard Oil Company Of Fomenting Trouble

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Governor O. K. Allen today issued a formal proclamation declaring that "conditions of violence, insurrection and disorder" existed in Baton Rouge and commanded the state militia to "preserve law and order in the city of Baton Rouge and the parish of East Baton Rouge."

The proclamation was issued as the senator's "court investigation" into what he said was a plot to "murder" him was preparing to start in the state supreme court chambers.

Governor Allen's proclamation charged that "a situation of armed insurrection against the duly elected and appointed officials has broken out." It said the oil company "declined to do anything to prevent the same."

The proclamation was issued while throngs of uniformed members of the Louisiana militia guarded the state house inside and out.

The text of Governor Allen's proclamation follows:

"Executive Department,
"Baton Rouge.

"Whereas, in the parish of East Baton Rouge and the city of Baton Rouge, a situation of armed insurrection against the duly elected and appointed officials has broken out, and armed men threaten to usurp the functions of orderly government in that parish, and

PECULIAR COURT TEST ARRANGED

Teacher Asks For Bigger Fine So High Tribunal Can Act

The peculiar circumstance of a defendant asking that his fine be raised to more than 10 times the amount originally fixed by the judge occurred in district court here Saturday when J. B. Thornhill, former assistant district attorney, requested Judge David I. Garrett to increase the fine against his client, Chester Crumm, from $10 to more than $300. This was done in order that the case might be carried to the supreme court. Judge Garrett raised the fine to $301.

Mr. Crumm is principal of the school at Cypress. The charge against him was said to have grown out of the whipping of three boys in which he was said to have used three switches.

In passing sentence last week Judge Garrett said that discipline in the schools probably would be improved by the use of corporal punishment,

INSANITY BLAMED FOR 4 KILLINGS

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—(AP)—The temporary insanity of a young teacher was blamed today for a wild rampage that cost four lives.

A jury closed Coroner Frank Walsh's "saddest inquest" with a verdict holding Henry W. Arden, 27, unemployed language instructor, responsible for "three murders and one suicide while temporarily insane."

Arden brooding over his crippled condition and disgruntled because the relief allotment for himself and his mother, Ruth, was to be cut, slew Miss Alice Mae Irwin, comely relief case worker, in his home yesterday. He then hastened to the Chicago avenue relief station and sprayed the office with pistol bullets. Miss Caroline Wallace, supervisor, was slain. Niels Nielson and Miss Hazel Dugan were wounded. Then Arden ended the gory episode by killing his mother and committing suicide.

GRADY WILHITE BADLY WOUNDED BY BOB BENSON

CHARGE IS PREFERRED

Altercation Said To Have Grown Out Of Business Difficulty

Grady Wilhite, 27, saw mill foreman, was shot and critically wounded by R. P. (Bob) Benson, 59, timber contractor, Saturday afternoon about 3 o'clock on Trenton street, West Monroe. The shooting took place after Wilhite reputedly struck Benson a blow with his fist, following an alleged disagreement over wages Wilhite was said to have demanded of Benson, and which the latter was said to have stated he did not owe Wilhite.

Wilhite approached Benson as the latter came out of his office and demanded the money he said was due him, according to witnesses. A few words passed between the men, and Benson turned and started walking away, it was stated. Wilhite then struck Benson on the side of his face, knocking him between two cars parked at the curb, and the latter then drew his 38 caliber revolver and shot Wilhite, it was reported.

The bullet penetrated Wilhite's body from just behind one hip and came out on the opposite side of his body, after passing through the intestines, it was stated.

Wilhite was carried in an ambulance to St. Francis sanitarium. He was given a blood transfusion last night.

SCOUTS ARE BUSY OBTAINING NAMES

About 200 Signatures Now On List To Be Sent To President

Boy Scouts from various Monroe troops, working in pairs, had a busy time Saturday soliciting signatures to messages that are to be sent to President Roosevelt on his fifty-third birthday.

More than 100 signatures had been obtained Saturday morning and an almost equal number in the afternoon. The plan back of the message is to raise additional funds for the Monroe Junior Charity league and the national movement to control infantile paralysis, as a testimonial to the president. Some misunderstanding developed about the use of the funds, it was reported by some of the Boy Scout solicitors. Refusal to sign the message was made by some of the business men approached because they believed the money to be raised would go to the telegraph companies who are sponsoring the plan.

Manager Perkins of the Postal Telegraph, Manager Dawson of the Western Union and Mrs. Prioleau Ellis, of the Junior Charity league, made it clear that this was wholly erroneous.

Every penny of the 25 cents paid by each person signing the message will go to the funds for afflicted chil-

ORDER SUSPENDED BY SUPREME COURT

BATON ROUGE, Jan. 26.—(AP)—An order issued by Judge W. Carruth Jones, of the East Baton Rouge parish district court, January 14 authorizing Sheriff Robert L. Pettit of East Baton parish to name six deputies, was suspended today by order of the state supreme court late Saturday.

The four justices signed an order temporarily suspending the verdict of Judge Jones and directed the district judge, Sheriff Pettit and the six deputies to show cause next Wednesday why the order of the district court should not be set aside.

The four justices signed the order suspending the district court's edict after a petition seeking this was filed in the supreme court in the name of Governor O. K. Allen, Attorney General Gaston L. Porterie, Louis F. Guerre, superintendent of the state bureau of criminal identification, and the "East Baton Rouge police jury."

The petition asserted the names of the six deputies had not been approved by the bureau of criminal identification in accordance with act 27 of 1934. The petition asserted this act repealed article 764 of the code of practice, which authorized district judges to authorize the appointment of deputy sheriffs.

Man Mysteriously Shot In Clash At Capital's Airport

Crowd Nearly Mobs State Employe Who Reported That Citizens Were Assembling To Resist Huey Long

Ordered to report at Baton Rouge for duty, Company G, rifle unit of the Louisiana national guard, of Monroe, was mobilizing last night preparatory to leaving for the state capital this morning. Captain L. F. Rolleigh, commander of the company, declined to discuss the mobilization. It was learned, however, that the troopers were ordered to entrain last night but were unable to do so because of train schedules. Sixty-seven men were reputedly called for duty.

CLINTON, LA., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Several hundred men assembled at the courthouse here tonight after reports were circulated that this section would be placed under martial law tomorrow or Monday. "We will be ready for them, and we are ready to stay until the last ditch," said Mayor J. C. Decuir. A skeleton group of the armed men prepared to stay here all night, assembled around the courthouse.

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 26.—(AP)—A bloody battle was narrowly averted here late today when a citizens' army surrendered to Huey Long's state soldiery in a hair raising spectacle that left one man unexplainably wounded and resulted in a free-for-all fight with spectators.

For a tense 30 minutes today the Square Deal association citizens' group of 100 armed men deployed in battle formation on the parish airfield against a crack troop of 75 national guardsmen from Baton Rouge, which is under martial law.

The citizens were entrenched behind automobiles near the woods. The militiamen, flat on the ground, deployed for a quarter of a mile toward the revolters against Long's dictatorship.

During the tenseness that preceded the surrender of the citizens and their technical arrest, George N. Allessi, 36, of Independence, La., a member of the Tangipahoa parish police jury, was wounded by buckshot above the heart, in the abdomen and in the back. His condition was serious.

After the citizens were captured and dispersed, several hundred spectators gathered around the airport.

Suddenly someone shouted:

"There he is!" There's the spy!"

The infuriated crowd, surging together, men, women and children, surged toward a young man whom they took to be the person who informed national guardsmen that the citizens were mustering a troop.

They closed in on him, tore his clothes, beat him unmercifully and stomped on him as he lay bleeding on the ground.

Guardsmen rushed in and dragged him away, then shot gas guns at the crowd to disperse it. The beaten man was identified as Otto Hardenstein, a state employe.

As the battle threatened on the outskirts of the town, a group of women headed by Mrs. J. A. Tucker, wife of a physician here, appealed to Governor O. K. Allen to rescind his martial law order "to spare young boys from the possibility of shooting down their fathers, and brothers from sacrificing their own lives."

"We hold you responsible for any loss of life or interference with citizens' rights," the petition concluded, "before and after a succession of events that rocked the foundation of Louisiana."

Additional national guardsmen were mobilized tonight. Company E, 156th Infantry, of Shreveport, was given orders to go to Baton Rouge.

BOURGEOIS ESCAPES

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Earnest J. Bourgeois, who commanded the citizens' army against Huey Long's national guardsmen today, was believed to have escaped capture. About half of the citizens' army surrendered, the others dashed by the militia in speeding automobiles and others left the field of battle through the woods.

KINGFISH LEAVES FOR WASHINGTON

Troopers Guard Huey As He Hurries Away From New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Escorted by uniformed national guardsmen and bodyguards in civilian clothes, Senator Huey P. Long left New Orleans shortly before 10 o'clock tonight for Washington aboard the Crescent limited.

Mrs. Long and their daughter Rose, accompanied the senator.

Long's departure was marked by a mild disturbance in the lobby of his hotel during which a reporter for the New Orleans Times-Picayune was beaten by two bodyguards. The reporter, Mortimer M. Kreeger, said he was struck when he attempted to question the senator.

Long was driven from his hotel to the station in his personal car. As he stepped from his automobile several guardsmen, in uniform, and plain clothes leaped from other machines and quickly formed a cordon about the senator's automobile. Surrounded by a circle of men four or five deep, Long walked from the car to the station.

As he strode into the station he shouted an inquiry concerning the whereabouts of his wife and daughter.

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

ST. PAUL, Jan. 26.—(AP)—From a member of the Dillinger gang now in custody came a disclosure today that Dillinger's long sought lieutenant, John Hamilton, was fatally wounded last April by police at St. Paul.

The informant's story was substantiated by a letter written by John Dillinger to Hamilton's sweetheart, Patricia Cherrington. Both said two police intercepted Hamilton as he and Dillinger drove a car near St. Paul on April 22, 1934, and wounded the gangster mortally in the exchange of shots.

Hamilton was rushed to Chicago, police were told, and was kept alive for four days. He was buried in a Chicago suburb.

The author of the story claimed to have accompanied Hamilton in the fatal fray. Except that he may have been a former Ohio convict, the informant's identity was not disclosed.

NEW ONSLAUGHT OF COLD SEEN

Eastern States Brace For Fresh Weather Attack Saturday

(By Associated Press)

The storm-ridden eastern states braced for a fresh onslaught of zero weather and snow Saturday night as winter pursued a ravaging way.

Floods broadened the sphere of misery in north Mississippi, where the cost was counted as 27 human lives and five to ten million dollars property loss.

Snowslides wrecked homes and swelling rivers sent whole communities fleeing to higher ground in British Columbia.

Bitter gales lashed over Europe, sweeping small fishing craft to sea and damaging trees and buildings in Britain. The Norwegian ship "Ganga" was blown out of Blyth harbor and disappeared; the Norwegian steamer "Roydo" was wrecked on the western Scottish coast.

Down in central America the temperature broke to 44 degrees above zero at Tugucigalpa, Honduras, and two deaths were attributed to the unprecedented cold. Warning of an approaching hurricane emptied the bay at La Ceiba of all vessels, which headed for the open sea.

Pennsylvania, scarcely recovered from a 40-hour blizzard, got some relief from the severe cold but prepared for a new storm reported on its way to the central and eastern parts of the state. Heavy snows fell in northern Pennsylvania. Snow fell generally over West Virginia where one death was caused by a coasting accident.

The crest of the Coldwater river flood in Mississippi moved down upon Lambert, and the tragic exodus from threatened homes went on. At Marks, Miss., 500 homeless were in the soup line, and the refugees and other victims of the river's rampage were estimated as high as 25,000. A state prison farm housing 500 negroes four miles south of Lambert was in the zone of danger.

ARTHUR JOHNSON GIVES STATE NEW KIDNAP EVIDENCE

In this connection came a dispatch from Montreal stating that Edward J. Reilly, chief defense counsel, had wired for details of a Montreal man's statement that he had seen Fisch in Montreal, with a child, shortly after the kidnaping.

Michael Barry, a former newsstand owner, signed an affidavit before a Montreal notary last week that he thought he saw Fisch in Montreal with a child "closely resembling" the Lindbergh baby about 15 days after the kidnaping. Barry said he had not mentioned the incident until now "because friends advised me to keep quiet."

Another Montrealer, John Harrow, owner of a tailor shop and small hotel, came forward today, the Montreal dispatches said, with a story similar to that told by Barry.

Harrow "positively identified" a picture of Fisch as that of a man he saw with several other men in a United States car about the time Barry is supposed to have seen Fisch.

He said the car drove up before his hotel and after the occupants, who seemed very nervous, had discussed something in a low tone the man he believes was Isador Fisch came forward and asked to see a room. He said he had a woman and child with him. Finally the woman carried the child into the hotel, screening his face. They refused to sign the register, Harrow said.

During a conversation Harrow said he distinctly heard the woman address the man as "Isador."

Harrow said the picture of Fisch "nearly knocked me off my chair, because I remember every feature of the man's face because of his odd behaviour." He said he was sure the man had spoken with a German accent.

Reilly, in New York over the week-end, said that certain "surprise" witnesses would be called to weld the "ironclad" alibi the defense is seeking to prove for Hauptmann.

A dog—the proverbial "man's best friend"—will be an important factor in the testimony of one of Reilly's witnesses.

The witness, said Reilly today, will be called to the stand "at the first opportunity" after the trial, in recess over the week-end, resumes Monday.

The man's story will be that on the night of the kidnaping, March 1, 1932, he had gone to White Plains, N. Y., from his home in the Bronx—where Hauptmann also lived—in search of a police dog.

Returning unsuccessful in his search, the man saw an automobile at a filling station, and in the car was a dog so similar to the one he had been hunting that he thought it was his own.

The witness, said Reilly, will say that he approached the car and told the man in the car that he believed the dog was his. The man in the car denied it, saying the dog was owned by a friend.

The witness then threatened to have the man in the car arrested, and even went so far as to have the man write his name on a paper, together with his address.

The name the man wrote was "Richard Bruno Hauptmann," and the man who wrote it, the witness will swear, was Hauptmann.

The witness will say that he is able to recall the exact night on which this episode over a dog occurred because, on returning home later he heard over the radio the first alarm concerning the Lindbergh baby kidnaping.

Reilly, week-ending in Brooklyn where he conferred during the day with the defendant's wife, said he had two other new witnesses whose testimony would help the prisoner's case, but that he has had difficulty in gaining their consent to take the stand. He did not explain what their objections were.

As the defense, now launched on the presentation of its own case after weeks of testimony for the state, made plans for the presentation of its alibi case, the state laid equally determined strategy to break down the defendant when he resumes the stand for cross-examination Monday.

The lawyers for the state have expressed confidence that Hauptmann will lose the remarkable self-control he has shown throughout all the months since his arrest.

The little red memorandum book of Hauptmann's, which Attorney General David T. Wilentz shoved under his nose as he shouted questions at the pale defendant yesterday was the first of several surprises the state has prepared.

In that book appeared the word "boat," written "b-o-a-d," apparently in Hauptmann's hand, just as it was written and spelled in the note which "John" gave to Dr. John F. Condon in St. Raymond's cemetery, the Bronx, on the night of April 2, 1932, when he took the $50,000 ransom.

There was something else, too, which must have heightened Hauptmann's dread as Wilentz pounded away at him. At the prosecution table the "brains" of the state were busy setting up the groundwork for fresh attacks on the story he proffered in defense of the charge he kidnaped the baby, collected the ransom, and used a major share of it to speculate in the stock market.

ASKS RESERVOIRS TO AVOID FLOODS

Wilson Says Hearings Will Be Called On Prevention Plan

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—(AP)—The immediate construction of seven reservoirs, to prevent future flood ravages like those bringing "tragic deaths" and "extreme suffering" in northwestern Mississippi was urged today by Representative Whittington, Democrat, Mississippi.

This work, he said, would cost about $50,000,000. He recommended that it be included in the $4,880,000,000 public works-relief program.

Whittington's suggestion came after a statement by Chairman Wilson, Democrat, Louisiana, of the house flood control committee that hearings would be called promptly on his measure to authorize $250,000,000 appropriation for flood control work and for use in emergencies for flood protection wherever human lives and property are endangered.

Wilson said in many parts of the country cities could be protected permanently from the menace of floods by expenditure of only a few thousand dollars in each locality.

Army engineers, he said, already have passed upon numerous projects that could be started immediately. These, he observed, would be of value in providing jobs as well as security for communities against flood waters.

"I know of no public work that would result in greater benefit to the life and the property and that would more generally promote the public interest than the reservoir system for flood control along the Yazoo-Tallachatchie-Coldwater river system in Mississippi," Whittington said.

Army engineers, he said, have recommended construction of seven reservoirs along these rivers and the Yocono, Skuna and the Yalabusha rivers as "the most practicable and economical solution of the flood control problem in the area.

"The tragic deaths, the extreme suffering, the widespread destitution and the enormous damages of the highest and most destructive flood in the history of Coldwater river in both the hills and delta of Mississippi," Whittington said, "emphasizing the imperative necessity of the immediate construction of an adequate and comprehensive flood control project to prevent the repetition of such disasters."

Man Arrested Here As Hotel Swindler

A man who gave his name to police as Elmer Siegfreid, and who had registered at Hotel Virginia under the name of Robert Schneider, was arrested by police about 6:40 a. m. Saturday morning after he was said to have departed from the hotel without paying for his lodging.

The man was said to have stated as he left the hotel, carrying his suitcase, that he would return for a package he had left with the desk clerk. The package, a cardboard carton, contained empty boxes, and the man's suitcase contained rocks, it was stated. He was overtaken and detained shortly after he left the hotel.

Police booked the man, who is about 55 years of age, with the charge of "common cheat and swindler." He had $45.52 on his person.

NEW ONSLAUGHT OF COLD SEEN

Eastern States Brace For Fresh Weather Attack Saturday

(By Associated Press)

The storm-ridden eastern states braced for a fresh onslaught of zero weather and snow Saturday night as winter pursued a ravaging way.

Floods broadened the sphere of misery in north Mississippi, where the cost was counted as 27 human lives and five to ten million dollars property loss.

Snowslides wrecked homes and swelling rivers sent whole communities fleeing to higher ground in British Columbia.

Bitter gales lashed over Europe, sweeping small fishing craft to sea and damaging trees and buildings in Britain. The Norwegian ship "Ganga" was blown out of Blyth harbor and disappeared; the Norwegian steamer "Roydo" was wrecked on the western Scottish coast.

Down in central America the temperature broke to 44 degrees above zero at Tugucigalpa, Honduras, and two deaths were attributed to the unprecedented cold. Warning of an approaching hurricane emptied the bay at La Ceiba of all vessels, which headed for the open sea.

Pennsylvania, scarcely recovered from a 40-hour blizzard, got some relief from the severe cold but prepared for a new storm reported on its way to the central and eastern parts of the state. Heavy snows fell in northern Pennsylvania. Snow fell generally over West Virginia where one death was caused by a coasting accident.

The crest of the Coldwater river flood in Mississippi moved down upon Lambert, and the tragic exodus from threatened homes went on. At Marks, Miss., 500 homeless were in the soup line, and the refugees and other victims of the river's rampage were estimated as high as 25,000. A state prison farm housing 500 negroes four miles south of Lambert was in the zone of danger.

Cooperative Meals Cost Students 13 Cents Each

MANHATTAN, Kan., Jan. 26.—(AP)—A plan to provide meals for 13 cents and three hours of work a week has been worked out at the Kansas State college here.

Meal tickets sell for nine dollars and include 68 meals, 17 being served each week.

A balanced diet has been worked out by Mrs. Bessie Brooks West, of the institutional economics department.

ASKS RESERVOIRS TO AVOID FLOODS

Wilson Says Hearings Will Be Called On Prevention Plan

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—(AP)—The immediate construction of seven reservoirs, to prevent future flood ravages like those bringing "tragic deaths" and "extreme suffering" in northwestern Mississippi was urged today by Representative Whittington, Democrat, Mississippi.

This work, he said, would cost about $50,000,000. He recommended that it be included in the $4,880,000,000 public works-relief program.

Whittington's suggestion came after a statement by Chairman Wilson, Democrat, Louisiana, of the house flood control committee that hearings would be called promptly on his measure to authorize $200,000,000 appropriation for flood control work and for use in emergencies for flood protection wherever human lives and property are endangered.

Wilson said in many parts of the country cities could be protected permanently from the menace of floods by expenditure of only a few thousand dollars in each locality.

Army engineers, he said, already have passed upon numerous projects that could be started immediately. These, he observed, would be of value in providing jobs as well as security for communities against flood waters.

"I know of no public work that would result in greater benefit to the life and the property and that would more generally promote the public interest than the reservoir system for flood control along the Yazoo-Tallachatchie-Coldwater river system in Mississippi," Whittington said.

Army engineers, he said, have recommended construction of seven reservoirs along these rivers and the Yocono, Skuna and the Yalabusha rivers as "the most practicable and economical solution of the flood control problem in the area.

"The tragic deaths, the extreme suffering, the widespread destitution and the enormous damages of the highest and most destructive flood in the history of Coldwater river in both the hills and delta of Mississippi," Whittington said, "emphasizing the imperative necessity of the immediate construction of an adequate and comprehensive flood control project to prevent the repetition of such disasters."

Man Arrested Here As Hotel Swindler

A man who gave his name to police as Elmer Siegfreid, and who had registered at Hotel Virginia under the name of Robert Schneider, was arrested by police about 6:40 a. m. Saturday morning after he was said to have departed from the hotel without paying for his lodging.

The man was said to have stated as he left the hotel, carrying his suitcase, that he would return for a package he had left with the desk clerk. The package, a cardboard carton, contained empty boxes, and the man's suitcase contained rocks, it was stated. He was overtaken and detained shortly after he left the hotel.

Police booked the man, who is about 55 years of age, with the charge of "common cheat and swindler." He had $45.52 on his person.

In this connection came a dispatch from Montreal stating that Edward J. Reilly, chief defense counsel, had wired for details of a Montreal man's statement that he had seen Fisch in Montreal, with a child, shortly after the kidnaping.

Michael Barry, a former newsstand owner, signed an affidavit before a Montreal notary last week that he thought he saw Fisch in Montreal with a child "closely resembling" the Lindbergh baby about 15 days after the kidnaping. Barry said he had not mentioned the incident until now "because friends advised me to keep quiet."

Another Montrealer, John Harrow, owner of a tailor shop and small hotel, came forward today, the Montreal dispatches said, with a story similar to that told by Barry.

Harrow "positively identified" a picture of Fisch as that of a man he saw with several other men in a United States car about the time Barry is supposed to have seen Fisch.

He said the car drove up before his hotel and after the occupants, who seemed very nervous, had discussed something in a low tone the man he believes was Isador Fisch came forward and asked to see a room. He said he had a woman and child with him. Finally the woman carried the child into the hotel, screening his face. They refused to sign the register, Harrow said.

During a conversation Harrow said he distinctly heard the woman address the man as "Isador."

Harrow said the picture of Fisch "nearly knocked me off my chair, because I remember every feature of the man's face because of his odd behaviour." He said he was sure the man had spoken with a German accent.

Reilly, in New York over the week-end, said that certain "surprise" witnesses would be called to weld the "ironclad" alibi the defense is seeking to prove for Hauptmann.

A dog—the proverbial "man's best friend"—will be an important factor in the testimony of one of Reilly's witnesses.

The witness, said Reilly today, will be called to the stand "at the first opportunity" after the trial, in recess over the week-end, resumes Monday.

The man's story will be that on the night of the kidnaping, March 1, 1932, he had gone to White Plains, N. Y., from his home in the Bronx—where Hauptmann also lived—in search of a police dog.

Returning unsuccessful in his search, the man saw an automobile at a filling station, and in the car was a dog so similar to the one he had been hunting that he thought it was his own.

The witness, said Reilly, will say that he approached the car and told the man in the car that he believed the dog was his. The man in the car denied it, saying the dog was owned by a friend.

The witness then threatened to have the man in the car arrested, and even went so far as to have the man write his name on a paper, together with his address.

The name the man wrote was "Richard Bruno Hauptmann," and the man who wrote it, the witness will swear, was Hauptmann.

The witness will say that he is able to recall the exact night on which this episode over a dog occurred because, on returning home later he heard over the radio the first alarm concerning the Lindbergh baby kidnaping.

Reilly, week-ending in Brooklyn where he conferred during the day with the defendant's wife, said he had two other new witnesses whose testimony would help the prisoner's case, but that he has had difficulty in gaining their consent to take the stand. He did not explain what their objections were.

As the defense, now launched on the presentation of its own case after weeks of testimony for the state, made plans for the presentation of its alibi case, the state laid equally determined strategy to break down the defendant when he resumes the stand for cross-examination Monday.

The lawyers for the state have expressed confidence that Hauptmann will lose the remarkable self-control he has shown throughout all the months since his arrest.

The little red memorandum book of Hauptmann's, which Attorney General David T. Wilentz shoved under his nose as he shouted questions at the pale defendant yesterday was the first of several surprises the state has prepared.

In that book appeared the word "boat," written "b-o-a-d," apparently in Hauptmann's hand, just as it was written and spelled in the note which "John" gave to Dr. John F. Condon in St. Raymond's cemetery, the Bronx, on the night of April 2, 1932, when he took the $50,000 ransom.

There was something else, too, which must have heightened Hauptmann's dread as Wilentz pounded away at him. At the prosecution table the "brains" of the state were busy setting up the groundwork for fresh attacks on the story he proffered in defense of the charge he kidnaped the baby, collected the ransom, and used a major share of it to speculate in the stock market.

ERA SCHOOL IS WELL ATTENDED

1,483 Persons Are Now Attending Classes, Miss Peevy Says

Adult pupils totaling 1,483 are now attending school in Ouachita parish under the ERA teaching program, it was stated Saturday by Miss Ellen Peevy, principal of this work in this parish. These pupils are being taught by 46 teachers, who have classes ranging from 13 to 75.

One of the negro teachers succeeded in enrolling such a large class that she was unable to handle it. After it had been announced that she would teach she received enrollments for 120 persons. As this number was considered entirely too large, the class was divided and another teacher was given 60 of the pupils. Since then the first teacher's class has continued to grow and now has a membership of about 75.

Pupils are taking their work seriously and most of them are making good progress, Miss Peevy said. She considers the work even more successful than was anticipated. Because of the increasing number of persons who are desirous of attending the adult classes, it is likely that an effort will be made to obtain authorization for additional teachers in this parish.

This parish originally was allotted 24 teachers, but shortly after these teachers had organized classes the allotment was increased to 46. In order to qualify as an instructor for one of the classes it was necessary for a teacher to be certified by the ERA representative as being in need of work and by the parish superintendent of schools as having the necessary educational requirements.

SCHOOL OFFICIAL WILL VISIT HERE

Assistant State Supervisor Elementary Grades To Make Survey

Miss Helene Sliffe, assistant state supervisor of elementary schools, will spend all of this week in Ouachita parish for the purpose of making a survey of the schools, according to information received by Mrs. Chrissie B. Williams, assistant parish superintendent in charge of elementary schools.

This will be the first time Miss Sliffe has visited the schools here within three years. There are three assistant supervisors and they visit the schools of the different parishes in turn.

Several parishes in the fifth congressional district have recently employed supervisors of elementary schools, working under the direction of the parish school superintendents. Of the 14 parishes in the district, seven now have such workers. These parishes and their respective supervisors are: Catahoula, C. C. Elkins; Franklin, Miss Bertha Green; Lincoln, R. L. Seegars; Madison, Mrs. W. B. Eisely; Morehouse, Miss Maggie Haws; Ouachita, Mrs. Chrissie B. Williams, and Union, Miss Irene Clark. Miss Clark was a teacher in West Monroe until she recently accepted the position in Union parish.

A STAMPING CORNER
By W. J. KIRBY

Citizens of Bastrop are now engaged in a city-wide collection of stamps. No, no, Hortense, they are not going to mount them in an album. Every person is asked to donate one or more postage stamps, these to be converted into cash and the proceeds to go to the President's Birthday Ball. Only mint stamps are wanted. In addition to his heart being wrapped in the Warm Springs Foundation, President Roosevelt is also a collector, so the two tie up together.

Perhaps the most outstanding foreign issue of 1934 was the German "Nothilfe" or charity issue. This issue consists of nine adhesive stamps and a postal card, each with a surtax for charity. The stamps depict different vocations of the present—merchant, blacksmith, bricklayer, miner, draughtsman, reaper, chemist, stonecutter and student.

Roumania issued a pretty set of two stamps last year for the National Fruit Exhibition, their chief use being as propaganda of the use of fruits. The 1-leu depicts a child, mouth open, holding up her hand for a bunch of grapes. At the foot of the stamp, which is yellow-green, appears the words in Roumanian "Grapes bring Healthiness." On the 2-lei, which is a red-brown in color, a lady is shown holding a basket of various kinds of fruit. The words, also in Roumanian, "Consume as much Fruit as Possible," appear beneath the design. Both bear the words "Romania Saptamana Fructelor," at the top.

News from Washington states that the first stamps to be issued by the United States in 1935 will be a series of 23 revenues, ranging in value from one cent to $1,000, and having a total face value of more than $1,700.00. They are to evidence the payment of the new tax on silver, and are expected to make their appearance in the near future.

Rumors persist that the Presidential series of stamps talked about for so long, will make their appearance in the near future, but no official notice has been given as yet. Opinions vary as to the number of denominations to be issued and as to whose portraits will appear. However, it is generally conceded that several new faces will be seen in this series.

Dame rumor also has it that a 3-cent stamp will be issued for Memorial Day, but no positive statement can be secured from the postoffice department. President Roosevelt, himself an ardent stamp collector, is said to favor the issue. A stamp commemorating the glories of the U. S. frigate Constitution (Old Ironsides) is said to also have received the sanction of the White House and is expected to be issued on Navy Day, October 27.

Indications also point to the issuance of a Boy Scout stamp, it to be issued at the time of the Scout jamboree at Washington during the summer. A commemorative is said to have been promised for the tercentenary of the state of Connecticut, and a series of three stamps for the state of Texas is rumored to be in the offing. Personally I doubt the issuance of this set, but indications point to another big year for collectors of United States stamps.

February 15 has been set for the first day of sale of the new Philippine pictorial set. These may be secured at face value from the Philippine Trade Commissions, 928 Barr Bldg., Washington, D. C. The complete set will cost $6.67, while the first eight values may be bought for 39 cents or the first ten for 67 cents. Remittance should be by cash or money order with postage for return. This is the most beautiful set Uncle Sam has ever issued for the step-child in the Pacific.

SALVATION ARMY DRIVE PLANNED

Major Figgins Announces New Plan For This Year's Campaign

A new movement in the campaign to raise funds to finance the activities of the Salvation Army here this year was announced Saturday by Major A. B. Figgins, in charge of the local post. He issued the following statement:

"On account of various financial campaigns by other organizations, it was thought best for the local officials of the Salvation Army to put on what was called a quiet campaign for funds. The Salvation Army sent out many appeals to friends through the mail. At the present time about $500 in cash and pledges has come in in answer to these letters.

"It is estimated that it will require at least $[illegible] to carry on the regular and welfare program of the army for the year. We are anxious that all of this amount be raised within the next few days so that we can make our plans accordingly for the year's work.

"Those desiring to contribute should mail to Major A. B. Figgins, box 621, Monroe, La., and should make the check payable to the Salvation Army. F. F. Millsaps, president of the Ouachita National bank, is treasurer of the Army's home service fund and will also receive funds to be deposited to that account."

NEGROES TO HOLD MARDI GRAS HERE

Most Colorful Event Of Three Days Will Be King's Arrival

Preparations for the fifth annual celebration of Mardi Gras by the negroes of the surrounding communities were under way here yesterday, following an announcement by Frank Perkins, president of the X. Y. Z. club, which is sponsoring the affair, that the celebration this year would be bigger than ever.

For the past few years, the negroes, in their own way, have celebrated the coming of the King of Mardi Gras and the show will be a more colorful one this year, lasting three days.

In addition to their usual program of welcoming the arrival of the king, who comes down the Ouachita river on a barge, accompanied by his attendants, to the dock at the foot of Pine street, where his hosts await him, and the feasting that follows, the X. Y. Z. club this year plans to obtain the use of Casino park to carry out their elaborate plans.

Starting on February 12, it is the present plan to go in for athletic games, dancing, floor shows, feasting, and big carnival attractions at Casino park. The athletic events will include wrestling and boxing and other sport attractions.

The biggest event of all, however, will be the coming of the king. After the arrival of the king, a big parade will form and march toward the park for further festivities.

In order to create more interest in the events, prizes will be awarded to persons entering the best float in the parade, to persons wearing the best costumes, to the best actors in the floor show and to outstanding participants in the athletic events, it was said.

W. L. Workman Again Is Visitor In City

Former Captain W. L. Workman, former head of the Salvation Army in Monroe, who retired last year, and was succeeded by Major A. B. Figgins, is again a visitor in Monroe, after having returned from a trip in which he visited in Ohio, Georgia and Florida.

Captain Workman thinks it likely that he will locate here permanently. On his trip he did not see any town that was as well lighted or in which there appeared to be as much activity as in Monroe, he said.

Fred Workman, son of the former Salvation Army official, who attended school here, is now employed as a clerk in the Regis hotel in Mexico City.

ERA SCHOOL IS WELL ATTENDED

1,483 Persons Are Now Attending Classes, Miss Peevy Says

Adult pupils totaling 1,483 are now attending school in Ouachita parish under the ERA teaching program, it was stated Saturday by Miss Ellen Peevy, principal of this work in this parish. These pupils are being taught by 46 teachers, who have classes ranging from 13 to 75.

One of the negro teachers succeeded in enrolling such a large class that she was unable to handle it. After it had been announced that she would teach she received enrollments for 120 persons. As this number was considered entirely too large, the class was divided and another teacher was given 60 of the pupils. Since then the first teacher's class has continued to grow and now has a membership of about 75.

Pupils are taking their work seriously and most of them are making good progress, Miss Peevy said. She considers the work even more successful than was anticipated. Because of the increasing number of persons who are desirous of attending the adult classes, it is likely that an effort will be made to obtain authorization for additional teachers in this parish.

This parish originally was allotted 24 teachers, but shortly after these teachers had organized classes the allotment was increased to 46. In order to qualify as an instructor for one of the classes it was necessary for a teacher to be certified by the ERA representative as being in need of work and by the parish superintendent of schools as having the necessary educational requirements.

SCHOOL OFFICIAL WILL VISIT HERE

Assistant State Supervisor Elementary Grades To Make Survey

Miss Helene Sliffe, assistant state supervisor of elementary schools, will spend all of this week in Ouachita parish for the purpose of making a survey of the schools, according to information received by Mrs. Chrissie B. Williams, assistant parish superintendent in charge of elementary schools.

This will be the first time Miss Sliffe has visited the schools here within three years. There are three assistant supervisors and they visit the schools of the different parishes in turn.

Several parishes in the fifth congressional district have recently employed supervisors of elementary schools, working under the direction of the parish school superintendents. Of the 14 parishes in the district, seven now have such workers. These parishes and their respective supervisors are: Catahoula, C. C. Elkins; Franklin, Miss Bertha Green; Lincoln, R. L. Seegars; Madison, Mrs. W. B. Eisely; Morehouse, Miss Maggie Haws; Ouachita, Mrs. Chrissie B. Williams, and Union, Miss Irene Clark. Miss Clark was a teacher in West Monroe until she recently accepted the position in Union parish.

A STAMPING CORNER
By W. J. KIRBY

Citizens of Bastrop are now engaged in a city-wide collection of stamps. No, no, Hortense, they are not going to mount them in an album. Every person is asked to donate one or more postage stamps, these to be converted into cash and the proceeds to go to the President's Birthday Ball. Only mint stamps are wanted. In addition to his heart being wrapped in the Warm Springs Foundation, President Roosevelt is also a collector, so the two tie up together.

Perhaps the most outstanding foreign issue of 1934 was the German "Nothilfe" or charity issue. This issue consists of nine adhesive stamps and a postal card, each with a surtax for charity. The stamps depict different vocations of the present—merchant, blacksmith, bricklayer, miner, draughtsman, reaper, chemist, stonecutter and student.

Roumania issued a pretty set of two stamps last year for the National Fruit Exhibition, their chief use being as propaganda of the use of fruits. The 1-leu depicts a child, mouth open, holding up her hand for a bunch of grapes. At the foot of the stamp, which is yellow-green, appears the words in Roumanian "Grapes bring Healthiness." On the 2-lei, which is a red-brown in color, a lady is shown holding a basket of various kinds of fruit. The words, also in Roumanian, "Consume as much Fruit as Possible," appear beneath the design. Both bear the words "Romania Saptamana Fructelor," at the top.

News from Washington states that the first stamps to be issued by the United States in 1935 will be a series of 23 revenues, ranging in value from one cent to $1,000, and having a total face value of more than $1,700.00. They are to evidence the payment of the new tax on silver, and are expected to make their appearance in the near future.

Humors persist that the Presidential series of stamps, talked about for so long, will make their appearance in the near future, but no official notice has been given as yet. Opinions vary as to the number of denominations to be issued and as to whose portraits will appear. However, it is generally conceded that several new faces will be seen in this series.

Dame rumor also insists that a 3-cent stamp will be issued for Memorial Day, but no positive statement can be secured from the post-office department. President Roosevelt, himself an ardent stamp collector, is said to favor the issue. A stamp commemorating the glories of the U. S. frigate Constitution (Old Ironsides) is said to also have received the sanction of the White House, and is expected to be issued on Navy Day, October 27.

Indications also point to the issuance of a Boy Scout stamp, it to be issued at the time of the Scout jamboree at Washington during the summer. A commemorative is said to have been promised for the tercentenary of the state of Connecticut, and a series of three stamps for the state of Texas is rumored to be in the offing. Personally, I doubt the issuance of this set, but indications point to another big year for collectors of United States stamps.

February 15 has been set for the first day of sale of the new Philippine pictorial set. These may be secured at face value from the Philippine Trade Commissions, 928 Barr Bldg., Washington, D. C. The complete set will cost $6.67, while the first eight values may be bought for 39 cents, or the first ten for 67 cents. Remittance should be by cash or money order, with postage for return. This is the most beautiful set Uncle Sam has ever issued for the step-child in the Pacific.

SALVATION ARMY DRIVE PLANNED

Major Figgins Announces New Plan For This Year's Campaign

A new movement in the campaign to raise funds to finance the activities of the Salvation Army here this year was announced Saturday by Major A. B. Figgins, in charge of the local post. He issued the following statement:

"On account of various financial campaigns by other organizations, it was thought best by the local officials of the Salvation Army to put on what was called a quiet campaign for funds. The Salvation Army sent out many appeals to friends through the mail. At the present time about $1,000 in cash and pledges has come in in answer to these letters.

"It is estimated that it will require at least $5,000 to carry on the religious and welfare program of the army for the year. We are anxious that a sizeable amount be raised within the next few days so that we can make our plans accordingly for the year's work.

"Those desiring to contribute should mail to Major A. B. Figgins, box 624, Monroe, La., and should make the checks payable to the Salvation Army. F. F. Millsaps, president of the Ouachita National bank, is treasurer of the Army's home service fund and will also receive funds to be deposited to that account."

NEGROES TO HOLD MARDI GRAS HERE

Most Colorful Event Of Three Days Will Be King's Arrival

Preparations for the fifth annual celebration of Mardi Gras by the negroes of the surrounding communities were under way here yesterday, following an announcement by Frank Perkins, president of the X. Y. Z. club, which is sponsoring the affair, that the celebration this year would be bigger than ever.

For the past few years, the negroes, in their own way, have celebrated the coming of the King of Mardi Gras and the show will be a more colorful one this year, lasting three days.

In addition to their usual program of welcoming the arrival of the king, who comes down the Ouachita river on a barge, accompanied by his attendants, to the dock at the foot of Pine street, where his hosts await him, and the feasting that follows, the X. Y. Z. club this year plans to obtain the use of Casino park to carry out their elaborate plans.

Starting on February 12, it is the present plan to go in for athletic games, dancing, floor shows, feasting, and big carnival attractions at Casino park. The athletic events will include wrestling and boxing and other sport attractions.

The biggest event of all, however, will be the coming of the king. After the arrival of the king, a big parade will form and march toward the park for further festivities.

In order to create more interest in the events, prizes will be awarded to persons entering the best float in the parade, to persons wearing the best costumes, to the best actors in the floor show and to outstanding participants in the athletic events, it was said.

W. L. Workman Again Is Visitor In City

Former Captain W. L. Workman, former head of the Salvation Army in Monroe, who retired last year, and was succeeded by Major A. B. Figgins, is again a visitor in Monroe, after having returned from a trip in which he visited in Ohio, Georgia and Florida.

Captain Workman thinks it likely that he will locate here permanently. On his trip he did not see any town that was as well lighted or in which there appeared to be as much activity as in Monroe, he said.

Fred Workman, son of the former Salvation Army official, who attended school here, is now employed as a clerk in the Regis hotel in Mexico City.

We Learn By Experience

Intelligent parents do not do the home work for their children engaged in school studies. They may help the children get at the home work and encourage them to do it, and even make some leading suggestions that will develop the thought of the young folks in working out the hardest problems. But a parent who would deliberately sit down and do the child's lessons for him would not be showing good sense.

If a Supreme Being would work out all our problems for us, we would be deprived of the discipline that we should receive from getting our own answers.

If a child should go to school a thousand years with some one doing his lessons for him, he would learn little or nothing. If a person should live in this world a thousand years with some one taking all the responsibilities, meeting all his problems and overcoming all his difficulties for him, he would learn very little about life. His character would likely be soft and mushy.

We have observed a man who contends that he gives all power to the Deity he worships or says he worships. "Whatever God wants me to do, I do. I couldn't help myself, for God is all powerful. If God wants me to work, I shall be compelled to work. I could not help myself."

That fellow has not had a job since he adopted that philosophy twenty years ago.

"Give your child plenty of exercise and fresh air," says the physician. Suppose the parent should reply, "I want to make life easy for my child, so I will take the exercise and fresh air for him." Anybody could see the absurdity of that kind of reasoning.

We need developing experiences. We need to meet certain conditions ourselves and overcome them in order to strengthen ourselves. If your mother had learned your arithmetic for you, you would not know how to add, subtract, multiply and divide. If your father had learned to swim for you, you would go down like a rock in the water.

No individual should be deprived of his trials and his experiences. To do so would be like taking a child's school books away from him and telling him to hunt and fish during the school year. If schools were run for children who prefer to study rather than to hunt and fish, play with dolls, shoot marbles, fly kites and what have you, our educational system would be nothing to bother about.

We should see to it that the child is not loaded down too heavily with studies. We should endeavor to prevent the human being from being weighed down too heavily with difficulties; we should try to ease him along so that he will not break and give up, just as we should encourage the children so that they will not become disheartened about their tasks.

Life is all right, if we do not take it too seriously, and do take it seriously enough. This is a sphere to work in, to play in, to learn in.

WHEN DOES LIFE BEGIN?

The author of a best seller concludes that life begins at forty, an answer which will be accepted as incredible by young folks just out of school who look about them, find the prospect fair and rashly conclude that they are just on the threshold of great adventure.

It is probable that no single answer will be acceptable and that the best of life's offerings come at varying times. For Alexander the Great, Shelly and Keats life was over and done with, and immortality attained, before youth had more than passed.

But on the other extreme there are Cato, who learned Greek at eighty; Goethe, who was the same age when he completed "Faust"; Teophrastus, who at ninety began his "Characters of Men," while Titian at ninety-eight painted his historic "Battle of Lepanto," and Tennyson at eighty-three penned "Crossing the Bar."

All of these instances of virility and artistic power in advanced years do not, however, belong to departed ages. At the age of seventy-three, Frederick J. Waugh, American artist, has painted "Tropic Seas," which has won the Carnegie Institute's popularity prize.

But these are all exceptions to a fairly general rule which finds men and women of advanced years in a pitiable condition of poverty and despair. They constitute one of the most important of society's responsibilities, one whose fulfillment will constitute a fair basis for judgment of the true character of our civilization.

Primitives train monkeys to climb and get fruit for them, so the idea of sending men to congress isn't new.

Home helps: A splendid way to make a husband stay at home at night is to stay there with him.

It pays to be honest. And it costs.

JUST A SPICE OF DANGER

A doctor has prescribed beer and cheese for some of his young patients.

When baby did not seem to care
For any form of infant fare,
When, told to eat,
He stamped his feet,
Our hearts were filled with fear.
But when we called the doctor in
He told us, with a cheerful grin,
"He's quite all right
But every night,
He needs some cheese and beer."

He did not like the stuff at first
But presently he raised a thirst;
A little draft
Of beer he quaffed,
And ate a bite of cheese.
And after that, each passing day,
He never trifled with his tray
But wore a smile
Of joy the while
He wolfed the stuff with ease.

Believe it or believe it not,
The kid each day more lusty got,
And drained his stein
With every sign
Of infantile enjoyment;
But, now he's getting on in years,
I cannot help but harbor fears
That tippling rum
May yet become
His principal employment.

America Sets Example

By BRUCE CATTON

The "I'm Alone" case seems to be settled, finally and forever.

Maybe you'd forgotten all about it. If so, that's the significant thing about the whole business.

It was almost six years ago, during prohibition, that two U. S. coast guard cutters opened fire on the Canadian schooner "I'm Alone" in the Gulf of Mexico. They sank her. One of her crew drowned. Two were saved and put in irons.

Stop a moment and think what might have happened if the "I'm Alone" had been a Russian fishing schooner and the coast guard ship a Japanese destroyer. Or if the encounter had taken place in the Adriatic between a Yugo-Slav merchantman and an Italian cruiser.

There would have been immediate sword-rattling and diplomatic passages, ultimatums, and probably a world crisis. And war would have hovered menacingly in the background.

• • •

But no one mentioned, or even thought of war when the coast guard sank the "I'm Alone." The affair was considered on both sides in a light reflecting its importance, which was really small. Canadians were not up on their hind legs screaming about their "national honor." Americans were not breaking out with the flag and demanding pledges that Canada use all her resources to enforce American prohibition.

For the feeling that runs across the long undefended border between the United States and Canada is a cordial and friendly one. So here was a regrettable incident which ought to be discussed in friendly fashion and adjusted as fairly as possible.

It has taken six years to settle the affair. Now a final adjustment seems imminent. Chief Justice Duff of Canada and Supreme Court Justice Van Devanter of the United States have examined all the evidence, and recommend that the United States apologize to Canada and pay $25,000 in damages to members of the crew and their dependents.

• • •

There seems no reason why our government should not immediately accept these findings, and make good on the affair with willing good grace.

When a genuinely friendly feeling exists between two countries, there is little trouble in adjusting satisfactorily almost any dispute. When there is no such feeling, no machinery can guarantee peaceful settlement.

Both countries should be happy in a condition that permits such settlement of vexing cases like that of the "I'm Alone."

Unfortunately, in a jealous and bitter world, we're practically alone.

New Deal In Washington

By Rodney Dutcher

WASHINGTON.—One of those disturbing New Deal family affairs such as in the past have turned NRA and AAA upside down is now demoralizing the sector ruled by Secretary Ickes.

Efforts to smooth off the waters made turbulent by the Burlew affair have been strenuous and unsuccessful. Despite a stalemate, the chief characters retain to nervous where-do-we-go-from-here attitude and find themselves unable to relax.

Occupants of the Interior-PWA building, with its countless bureaus and commissions, merely went through the motions of work for at least three days after public reports appeared that the White House sought removal by Ickes of two of his most trusted and powerful aides, Administrative Assistant Ebert K. Burley and Chief Investigator Louis R. Glavis.

Nearly everyone and everything were distinctly upset.

Ickes, Burlew, and Glavis sought desperately to learn who had "leaked" the story. What they really wanted to find out was that the yarn hadn't been spilled out of the White House by Mrs. Roosevelt and Louis Howe.

The more they investigated, the farther they seemed to be from finding out anything of the sort. And that didn't make them feel any better, either.

• • •

Ickes "In the Grease"

So Ickes sent Burlew and Glavis off for a few days of rest, apparently hoping that the tension would die down and that nothing very terrible would be happening.

But the doughty "Honest Harold" continues to be bedeviled. Despite flat denials from all quarters, he is known as the fellow who defied the wishes of the Roosevelts.

His enemies have gleefully sharpened their pitchforks. Some of his friends have come to tell him that Burlew is a handicap whose activities and continued presence are personally injurious to him.

And the unpopularity of Burlew and Glavis among subordinates has boiled over into the light now that many of them, emboldened by the thought that the White House is on their side, feel free to air their opinions.

• • •

Burlew Holds Trumps

But Burlew has acquired such a grip on the affairs of PWA, Interior, and other Ickes assignments that it probably would be impossible to replace him adequately. Ickes, aside from his confidence in the man, feels that keenly.

No one recalls any close parallel for the situation. For it has been made obvious that the White House shares the general embarrassment.

Burlew is fighting hard to retain his job and nobody is forgetting—though some may have forgotten for a time—that he is in a position to charge Mrs. Roosevelt with what he considers undue interference in the personnel affairs of subsistence homesteads.

Those who know the First Lady well love and admire her and approve her many warm-hearted activities, but they fear enemies might be able to arose prejudice against her by aspersions at her active interest in her favorite New Deal activities.

• • •

Headache For F. R.

Some who know Ickes well have added to the White House embarrassment by expressing belief that the secretary would resign if pressed too hard as to Burlew and Glavis. Roosevelt wouldn't want that.

In fact, there's every reason to suspect that the whole matter has given him an acute headache.

Which, incidentally, is shared by certain members of congress who hoped to do something to Burlew at this session, but have now been scared off by the thought that the issue seems to rest between Ickes and the president.

The best guessers feel that Burlew, after a little while, will be given some change of assignment—or duties. Then the colored messengers in the department, who now call him "King Burlew," may have to find another nickname.

• • •

Glavis, according to New Dealers who deplore Burlew, is another matter. Local legend would have you believe Louis has listened to every telephone conversation and rifled every government desk in town, but he is a conscientious detective and Burlew's foes would be happy if they could get him out from under Burlew's authority.

Some of the same New Dealers sympathize deeply with Ickes, who has been thrown into a hot spot just as his future importance in the work relief scheme was becoming questionable and his Tri-Boro Bridge fight with Robert Moses in New York was being widely interpreted here as only an attemp tto do a little job for Jim Farley.

Frigidaire Dealers To Attend Showing Of Latest Products

The Standard Office Supply company, dealers here for Frigidaire corporation, subsidiary of General Motors, yesterday received an invitation from H. W. Newell, vice-president in charge of sales, to attend a confidential pre-showing of 1935 products and advertising and sales plans.

The showing will be held on January 28 in Dallas, Texas, where Frigidaire's district headquarters are located.

"In the invitation from Frigidaire headquarters in Dayton," the local dealers said, "it was stated that Frigidaire believes 1935 will be a bell-ringer for improved business and that the new products and plans actually are sensational in their scope. This information, coming from the world's largest produced of refrigeration and air conditioning equipment, indicates the belief in general business improvement held by our organization."

A. K. Kilpatrick will be accompanied to the pre-showing by the following members of his organization; L. P. Abernathy, L. A. Lay and D. B. Nichols.

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

WHERE CANADIANS LOOK NORTH TO UNITED STATES. The Detroit river, flowing from Lake St. Clair to Lake Erie, is the international boundary of the United States and Canada at that point, following a westerly and southerly course between the two lakes. On the south bank of the river is Windsor, Canada, whose citizens must look north across the river to the suburbs of Detroit to see the United States. There are a few other curious crooks of the boundary that would make this condition possible, but none where a large Canadian city is directly south of the line. However more than half the people of Canada live south of the United States because the northernmost boundary is latitude 49 degrees and the great majority of Canadians live south of that line.

WINE STEWARD WHO NEVER TOOK A DRINK—Walter Madigan, wine steward of the Gotham hotel in New York, works 12 hours a day surrounded by all varieties of tempting wines and liquors, yet he never takes a drink. In fact, he has never swallowed a drop of alcoholic beverage in his life. He does his tasting and testing of liquors by merely nosing them or rolling a few drops on his tongue. Madigan's aversion to drink was caused during his childhood when he witnessed the pathetic spectacle of too much drink.

HAMBONE'S MEDITATIONS

By Alley

Lights of New York

By Paul Harrison

NEW YORK.—The weirdest entertainment in town right now begins each midnight, except Monday and Tuesday, in a small room over a saloon in East 28th street. The establishment belongs to Frank Hughes, a softspoken Irishman and a patron of the theater. Performers are a group of youngsters called the Phantom Players and they have a repertory of Grand Guignol dramas that are as macabre as anything you've seen.

You walk past Mr. Hughes' long bar, up a flight of rickety steps, and into a black room with black tables and black cloths. Albert Johnson designed the stage, which is small but effective. Forty customers make a capacity house. They witness two or three short plays, in an evening, such as "The Slab," in which a murderer is locked in a morgue with the body of his victim and a bottle of absinthe. He goes mad and commits the crime all over again.

Another item is called "A Kiss in the Dark." In that one, a woman decapitates one of her boy friends. Then there's "Apache," in which a gent gets tossed into the Seine. After a couple of hours of that, Mr. Hughes' patrons no longer are sipping for pleasure, but are gulping copiously to steady their nerves. It's quite a successful enterprise.

Dinner For 8

Crosby Gaige, the Broadway producer, gave a little dinner party the other evening to Constance Cummings, Benn Levy, Samson Raphaelson and some other people connected with his new comedy hit, "Accent on Youth." Gaige planned, and cooked the eight-course dinner, all by himself. Piece de resistance was goulash cooked in ale a la Gaige, and he took six curtain calls on it.

Past And Present

Blackouts: Brian Donlevy, in "Life Begins at 8:40," was Leyendecker's famous collar model and he's getting no end of attention from the chorus girls . . . Leslie Howard, back on Broadway, calls himself "an actor by accident." Bob Hope, though, might never have been a star comedian if he hadn't tried to make a serious speech at a church party in Cleveland. It was just too funny. . . . American actress who has played the most parts, Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, retired and now living in Virginia. . . . Wealthiest actor, David Warfield, likewise retired . . . Wealthiest actress, Maxine Elliott, living in France . . . Playwright who earned the most money: not Eugene O'Neill, but Winchell Smith.

Most unusual hobby of an actor: meteorology, by James MacColl, of "Life Begins." Collects weather charts and painstakingly works out forecasts in his dressing room . . . Cecilia Loftus, who after all is only 58 would like to slay all reminiscent dodderers who delight in reminding her that they saw her on the stage 40 years ago . . . Most modest actress, Helen Broderick, headline comedienne. Saves her money because, she says, "they'll catch on to me any minute." Says that, too, that no one actress save Katharine Cornell could draw so much as a fly into a theater these days.

• • •

Footlight Babel

Ruth Weston must be the only actress who can speak Swahili. When she tired of being a Junior Leaguer, and before she decided to try the stage, she used to go hunting in Africa with her papa . . . William Gaxton, who's half Spanish, speaks Chinese and a little Japanese. Picked them up in San Francisco, where he spent his boyhood.

A couple of years ago, in London, Gaxton disguised himself as a Japanese and delivered a technical address in that language on Diesel engines before the Engineers' club. Gaxton knew nothing of Diesel engines, but the engineers knew nothing of Japanese. A technician, in on the plot, pretended to translate, and made it a very successful lecture.

The Japan Radio Broadcasting association has announced monthly fees for radio receivers will be reduced on April 1 throughout Japan from 75 sen to 50 sen, a decrease for the nation in radio costs of about 5,000,000 yen a year.

We Learn By Experience

Intelligent parents do not do the home work for their children engaged in school studies. They may help the children get at the home work and encourage them to do it, and even make some leading suggestions that will develop the thought of the young folks in working out the hardest problems. But a parent who would deliberately sit down and do the child's lessons for him would not be showing good sense.

If a Supreme Being would work out all our problems for us, we would be deprived of the discipline that we should receive from getting our own answers.

If a child should go to school a thousand years with some one doing his lessons for him, he would learn little or nothing. If a person should live in this world a thousand years with some one taking all the responsibilities, meeting all his problems and overcoming all his difficulties for him, he would learn very little about life. His character would likely be soft and mushy.

We have observed a man who contends that he gives all power to the Deity he worships or says he worships. "Whatever God wants me to do, I do. I couldn't help myself, for God is all powerful. If God wants me to work, I shall be compelled to work. I could not help myself."

That fellow has not had a job since he adopted that philosophy twenty years ago.

"Give your child plenty of exercise and fresh air," says the physician. Suppose the parent should reply, "I want to make life easy for my child, so I will take the exercise and fresh air for him." Anybody could see the absurdity of that kind of reasoning.

We need developing experiences. We need to meet certain conditions ourselves and overcome them in order to strengthen ourselves. If your mother had learned your arithmetic for you, you would not know how to add, subtract, multiply and divide. If your father had learned to swim for you, you would go down like a rock in the water.

No individual should be deprived of his trials and his experiences. To do so would be like taking a child's school books away from him and telling him to hunt and fish during the school year. If schools were run for children who prefer to study rather than to hunt and fish, play with dolls, shoot marbles, fly kites and what have you, our educational system would be nothing to bother about.

We should see to it that the child is not loaded down too heavily with studies. We should endeavor to prevent the human being from being weighed down too heavily with difficulties; we should try to ease him along so that he will not break and give up, just as we should encourage the children so that they will not become disheartened about their tasks.

Life is all right, if we do not take it too seriously, and do take it seriously enough. This is a sphere to work in, to play in, to learn in.

WHEN DOES LIFE BEGIN?

The author of a best seller concludes that life begins at forty, an answer which will be accepted as incredible by young folks just out of school who look about them, find the prospect fair and rashly conclude that they are just on the threshold of great adventure.

It is probable that no single answer will be acceptable and that the best of life's offerings come at varying times. For Alexander the Great, Shelly and Keats life was over and done with, and immortality attained, before youth had more than passed.

But on the other extreme there are Cato, who learned Greek at eighty; Goethe, who was the same age when he completed "Faust"; Teophrastus, who at ninety began his "Characters of Men," while Titian at ninety-eight painted his historic "Battle of Lepanto," and Tennyson at eighty-three penned "Crossing the Bar."

All of these instances of virility and artistic power in advanced years do not, however, belong to departed ages. At the age of seventy-three, Frederick J. Waugh, American artist, has painted "Tropic Seas," which has won the Carnegie Institute's popularity prize.

But these are all exceptions to a fairly general rule which finds men and women of advanced years in a pitiable condition of poverty and despair. They constitute one of the most important of society's responsibilities, one whose fulfillment will constitute a fair basis for judgment of the true character of our civilization.

Primitives train monkeys to climb and get fruit for them, so the idea of sending men to congress isn't new.

Home helps: A splendid way to make a husband stay at home at night is to stay there with him.

It pays to be honest. And it costs.

More Truth Than Poetry

JUST A SPICE OF DANGER

A doctor has prescribed beer and cheese for some of his young patients.

When baby did not seem to care
For any form of infant fare,
When, told to eat,
He stamped his feet,
Our hearts were filled with fear.
But when we called the doctor in
He told us, with a cheerful grin,
"He's quite all right
But every night,
He needs some cheese and beer."

He did not like the stuff at first
But presently he raised a thirst;
A little draft
Of beer he quaffed,
And ate a bite of cheese,
And after that, each passing day,
He never trifled with his tray
But wore a smile
Of joy the while
He wolfed the stuff with ease.

Believe it or believe it not,
The kid each day more lusty got,
And drained his stein
With every sign
Of infantile enjoyment;
But, now he's getting on in years,
I cannot help but harbor fears
That tippling rum
May yet become
His principal employment.

America Sets Example

By BRUCE CATTON

The "I'm Alone" case seems to be settled, finally and forever.

Maybe you'd forgotten all about it. If so, that's the significant thing about the whole business.

It was almost six years ago, during prohibition, that two U. S. coast guard cutters opened fire on the Canadian schooner "I'm Alone" in the Gulf of Mexico. They sank her. One of her crew drowned. Two were saved and put in irons.

Stop a moment and think what might have happened if the "I'm Alone" had been a Russian fishing schooner and the coast guard ship a Japanese destroyer. Or if the encounter had taken place in the Adriatic between a Yugo-Slav merchantman and an Italian cruiser.

There would have been immediate sword-rattling and diplomatic passages, ultimatums, and probably a world crisis. And war would have hovered menacingly in the background.

* * *

But no one mentioned, or even thought of war when the coast guard sank the "I'm Alone." The affair was considered on both sides in a light reflecting its importance, which was really small. Canadians were not up on their hind legs screaming about their "national honor." Americans were not breaking out with the flag and demanding pledges that Canada use all her resources to enforce American prohibition.

For the feeling that runs across the long undefended border between the United States and Canada is a cordial and friendly one. So here was a regrettable incident which ought to be discussed in friendly fashion and adjusted as fairly as possible.

It has taken six years to settle the affair. Now a final adjustment seems imminent. Chief Justice Duff of Canada and Supreme Court Justice Van Devanter of the United States have examined all the evidence, and recommend that the United States apologize to Canada and pay $25,000 in damages to members of the crew and their dependents.

* * *

There seems no reason why our government should not immediately accept these findings, and make good on the affair with willing good grace.

When a genuinely friendly feeling exists between two countries, there is little trouble in adjusting satisfactorily almost any dispute. When there is no such feeling, no machinery can guarantee peaceful settlement.

Both countries should be happy in a condition that permits such settlement of vexing cases like that of the "I'm Alone."

Unfortunately, in a jealous and bitter world, we're practically alone.

New Deal In Washington

By Rodney Dutcher

WASHINGTON.—One of those disturbing New Deal family affairs such as in the past have turned NRA and AAA upside down is now demoralizing the sector ruled by Secretary Ickes.

Efforts to smooth off the waters made turbulent by the Burlew affair have been strenuous and unsuccessful. Despite a stalemate, the chief characters retain to nervous where-do-we-go-from-here attitude and find themselves unable to relax.

Occupants of the Interior-PWA building, with its countless bureaus and commissions, merely went through the motions of work for at least three days after public reports appeared that the White House sought removal by Ickes of two of his most trusted and powerful aides, Administrative Assistant Ebert K. Burley and Chief Investigator Louis R. Glavis.

Nearly everyone and everything were distinctly upset.

Ickes, Burlew, and Glavis sought desperately to learn who had "leaked" the story. What they really wanted to find out was that the yarn hadn't been spilled out of the White House by Mrs. Roosevelt and Louis Howe.

The more they investigated, the farther they seemed to be from finding out anything of the sort. And that didn't make them feel any better, either.

* * *

Ickes "In the Grease"

So Ickes sent Burlew and Glavis off for a few days of rest, apparently hoping that the tension would die down and that nothing very terrible would be happening.

But the doughty "Honest Harold" continues to be bedeviled. Despite flat denials from all quarters, he is known as the fellow who defied the wishes of the Roosevelts.

His enemies have gleefully sharpened their pitchforks. Some of his friends have come to tell him that Burlew is a handicap whose activities and continued presence are personally injurious to him.

And the unpopularity of Burlew and Glavis among subordinates has boiled over into the light now that many of them, emboldened by the thought that the White House is on their side, feel free to air their opinions.

* * *

Burlew Holds Trumps

But Burlew has acquired such a grip on the affairs of PWA, Interior, and other Ickes assignments that it probably would be impossible to replace him adequately. Ickes, aside from his confidence in the man, feels that keenly.

No one recalls any close parallel for the situation. For it has been made obvious that the White House shares the general embarrassment.

Burlew is fighting hard to retain his job and nobody is forgetting—though some may have forgotten for a time—that he is in a position to charge Mrs. Roosevelt with what he considers undue interference in the personnel affairs of subsistence homesteads.

Those who know the First Lady well love and admire her and approve her many warm-hearted activities, but they fear enemies might be able to arose prejudice against her by aspersions at her active interest in her favorite New Deal activities.

* * *

Headache For F. R.

Some who know Ickes well have added to the White House embarrassment by expressing belief that the secretary would resign if pressed too hard as to Burlew and Glavis. Roosevent wouldn't want that.

In fact, there's every reason to suspect that the whole matter has given him an acute headache.

Which, incidentally, is shared by certain members of congress who hoped to do something to Burlew at this session, but have now been scared off by the thought that the issue seems to rest between Ickes and the president.

The best guessers feel that Burlew, after a little while, will be given some change of assignment—or duties. Then the colored messengers in the department, who now call him "King Burlew," may have to find another nickname.

* * *

Glavis, according to New Dealers who deplore Burlew, is another matter. Local legend would have you believe Louis has listened to every telephone conversation and rifled every government desk in town, but he is a conscientious detective and Burlew's foes would be happy if they could get him out from under Burlew's authority.

Some of the same New Dealers sympathize deeply with Ickes, who has been thrown into a hot spot just as his future importance in the work relief scheme was becoming questionable and his Tri-Boro Bridge fight with Robert Moses in New York was being widely interpreted here as only an attemp tto do a little job for Jim Farley.

And on top of that came the supreme court decision knocking out the oil law Ickes was trying so hard to enforce!

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

WHERE CANADIANS LOOK NORTH TO UNITED STATES—The Detroit river, flowing from Lake St. Clair to Lake Erie, is the international boundary of the United States and Canada at that point, following a westerly and southerly course between the two lakes. On the south bank of the river is Windsor, Canada, whose citizens must look north across the river to the suburbs of Detroit to see the United States. There are a few other curious crooks of the boundary that would make this condition possible, but none where a large Canadian city is directly south of the line. However more than half the people of Canada live south of the United States because the northernmost boundary is latitude 49 degrees and the great majority of Canadians live south of that line.

WINE STEWARD WHO NEVER TOOK A DRINK—Walter Madigan, wine steward of the Gotham hotel in New York spends 12 hours a day surrounded by all varieties of tempting wines and liquors, yet he never takes a drink. In fact, he has never swallowed a drop of alcoholic beverage in his life. He does his tasting and testing of liquors by merely nosing them or rolling a few drops on his tongue. Madigan's aversion to drink was caused during his childhood when he witnessed the pathetic spectacle of too much drink.

HAMBONE'S MEDITATIONS

By Paul Harrison

NEW YORK.—The weirdest entertainment in town right now begins each midnight, except Monday and Tuesday, in a small room over a saloon in East 28th street. The establishment belongs to Frank Hughes, a softspoken Irishman and a patron of the theater. Performers are a group of youngsters called the Phantom Players, and they have a repertory of Grand Guignol dramas that are as macabre as anything you've seen.

You walk past Mr. Hughes' long bar, up a flight of rickety steps, and into a black room with black tables and black cloths. Albert Johnson designed the stage, which is small but effective. Forty customers make a capacity house. They witness two or three short plays, in an evening, such as "The Slab," in which a murderer is locked in a morgue with the body of his victim and a bottle of absinthe. He goes mad and commits the crime all over again.

Another item is called "A Kiss in the Dark." In that one, a woman decapitates one of her boy friends. Then there's "Apache," in which a gent gets tossed into the Seine. After a couple of hours of this, Mr. Hughes' patrons no longer are sipping for pleasure, but are gulping copiously to steady their nerves. It's quite a successful enterprise.

Dinner For 8

Crosby Gaige, the Broadway producer, gave a little dinner party the other evening to Constance Cummings, Benn Levy, Samson Raphaelson and some other people connected with his new comedy hit, "Accent on Youth." Gave, served, and cooked the eight-course dinner, all by himself. Piece de resistance was goulash cooked in ale, a la Gaige, and he took six curtain calls on it.

Past And Present

Blackouts: Brian Donlevy, in "Life Begins at 8:40," was Leydendecker's famous collar model and he's getting no end of attention from the chorus girls . . . Leslie Howard, back on Broadway, calls himself "an actor by accident." Bob Hope, though, might never have been a star comedian if he hadn't tried to make a serious speech at a church party in Cleveland. It was just too funny. . . . American actress who has played the most parts: Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, retired and now living in Virginia. . . . Wealthiest actor, David Warfield, likewise retired . . . Wealthiest actress: Maxine Elliott, living in France . . . Playwright who earned the most money: not Eugene O'Neill, but Winchell Smith.

Most unusual hobby of an actor: meteorology, by James MacColl, of "Life Begins," Collects weather charts and painstakingly works out forecasts in his dressing room . . . Cecilia Loftus, who after all is only 58, would like to slay all reminiscent dodderers who delight in reminding her that they saw her on the stage 40 years ago . . . Most modest actress Helen Broderick, headline comedienne. Saves her money because, she says, "they'll catch on to me any minute." Says that, too, that no one actress save Katharine Cornell could draw so much as a fly into a theater these days.

Footlight Babel

Ruth Weston must be the only actress who can speak Swahili. When she tired of being a Junior Leaguer, and before she decided to try the stage, she used to go hunting in Africa with her papa . . . William Gaxton, who's half Spanish, speaks Chinese and a little Japanese. Picked them up in San Francisco, where he spent his boyhood.

A couple of years ago, in London, Gaxton disguised himself as a Japanese and delivered a technical address in that language on Diesel engines before the Engineers' club. Gaxton knew nothing of Diesel engines, but the engineers knew nothing of Japanese. A technician, in on the plot, pretended to translate, and made it a very successful lecture.

The Japan Radio Broadcasting association has announced monthly fees for radio receivers will be reduced on April 1 throughout Japan from 75 sen to 50 sen, a decrease for the nation in radio costs of about 5,000,000 yen a year.

ALLEN ORDERS MARTIAL LAW

parish; Deputy Sheriff Fred C. Parker of East Baton Rouge; Fred O'Rourke, Square Deal association committeeman whom Long described as the "chief agent of the Standard Oil"; Sheriff Sidney Dubroca of West Baton Rouge; and Dallas Gross, Baton Rouge citizen.

Powers Higginbotham, Baton Rouge commissioner of streets and parks, also was named by Long as one of the conspirators. He was reported as one of the "missing witnesses," but later appeared at the hearing and was subjected to a gruelling examination by the senator.

Long presented as his chief witness a man who said he was Sidney Songy, who recited details of the supposed plot, and said he was the man weapons and gas bombs were given to, and that he had participated at a conference of the alleged conspirators at which the details assertedly were discussed.

The dictator endeavored to back up Songy's testimony with evidence by Brig.-Gen. Louis F. Guerre, superintendent of state police and national guard commander, and W. R. M. Whitens, East Baton Rouge deputy sheriff, that weapons found in Songy's car came from the offices of the East Baton Rouge and Ibberville sheriffs.

The proceeding was conducted in the form of an inquiry requested by Attorney-General Gaston L. Porterie on allegation to Judge Womack that a "crime or misdemeanor has been committed in his jurisdiction and that no complaint or declaration thereof had been made before any judge or justice of the peace."

The attorney-general referred to Long's claimed conspiracy. He said he appeared as an inquirer into the facts of the case so that further proceedings might be held later after the taking of depositions.

Higginbotham, whose status as a member of the Baton Rouge commission was abolished by Long recently, but who retained the headship of the streets and parks department without voting privilege, was the only alleged conspirator who testified. He did not admit anything, and Long accused him of poor memory.

The court was held in a tense atmosphere. Heavy forces of state police guards protected Long in all his movements, and carefully searched all spectators for weapons.

Militiamen paraded over the statehouse grounds and tropped through capitol corridors. Detachments from seven national guard companies were assembled in Baton Rouge after mobilization in various sections of the state.

The essence of the "conspiracy" testimony was:

That the group of officials and citizens named allegedly engaged Songy to "tip them off" on whether Long had machine guns in his hotel suite.

That Songy was given weapons and gas bombs and instructions to block Long's automobile on the highway with his machine until a corps of armed men arrived to "kill the dictator."

That the weapons were given to him by Deputy Sheriff Fred C. Parker and Fred O'Rourke.

The call for the meeting was signed by Judge J. D. Womack, recently appointed by the Long-Allen administration for the East Baton Rouge district court. The meeting was opened by Attorney General Gaston L. Porterie.

Smartly dressed and heavily guarded as he enumerated his charges before the hearing, Long declared the state authorities had been "defied" by the several hundred armed men who seized the courthouse last night.

Long read accounts from newspapers describing the meeting in the courthouse.

"In other words," he said, "the state authorities have been defied. Not only those convicted by their own statements of conspiracy.

"So we have called these proceedings, your honor, for the removal from office and prosecution if the facts warrant it of these men."

Judge Womack spoke as Long concluded his talk. "The courthouse here has been forcibly taken over by several hundred armed persons," he said.

Judge Womack said that he had found armed men at the entrance to his office in the courthouse.

"One of these men armed with a Winchester rifle was asked if the court would be admitted. He finally granted permission. A few minutes thereafter, the court desiring to transact legal business, left the courthouse and was insulted. The custodian of the courthouse had a gun pressed against his stomach."

"These are things the court knows. The sheriff made no attempt to preserve order. I think it is high time for the state of Louisiana to step in."

Long had said he planned to call as witnesses reporters who witnessed the gathering at the courthouse yesterday, but since Judge Womack's remark he did not think it necessary. Long called for the reading of the list of witnesses.

The name of Fred C. Parker, Fred O'Rourke, John Appel, Powers Higginbotham, John Fred Odom, Fred LeBlanc and Dallas Gross were called.

None of the witnesses was present.

"I expect the bureau of identification and investigation has not made returns yet," Long concluded.

Long said he thought these witnesses should be given the earliest "opportunity to state their case on these charges."

The court recessed for a few minutes, awaiting the arrival of General L. F. Guerre, head of the state bureau of criminal identification and investigation.

After the recess General Guerre was placed on the witness stand. Long asked him what he knew of the "conspiracy."

"In your room in the Heidelberg, I saw a man who gave his name as Sidney Songy--"

"Wait a minute," Long said. "I want to skip that right now."

"I was called into conference," General Guerre said.

"What did you do then?"

"I called over long distance. I spoke to the general manager who informed me the grenade was delivered to Harold Bomby of New Orleans, their agent. The superintendent of police at New Orleans informed me that grenade was in a lot delivered to the sheriffs of East Baton Rouge and Iberville."

"That is Sheriff Robert L. Pettit of East Baton Rouge and Sheriff Henry Sherburne of Iberville?" Long asked.

"Yes."

"It was reported that they heard the bureau was going to make certain arrests. They didn't intend to allow us to serve warrants on certain persons in the courthouse," Guerre said.

"Did you go to see these people at the courthouse?"

"No, sir."

"Who were the men you sent out to get information?"

"It was brought to me by Mr. Deberetton and the assessor or assistant assessor."

General Guerre brought in a sack he said was taken from Songy which he said he was informed had been sent to the sheriff of East Baton Rouge parish by the state penitentiary at Angola, to return two pairs of handcuffs.

He said it was addressed to the sheriff's office.

Assistant Attorney General George Wallace was sworn in as a witness. He testified that Judge W. Carruth Jones of East Baton Rouge parish had issued an order giving the sheriff the right to appoint as many deputies as he needed.

"Did the order contain any mention of a law which makes it mandatory for deputy sheriffs to be approved by the state bureau of identification and investigation?"

"The order did not concede the constitutionality of the act."

"Did you hear that the sheriff was arming men in a murder conspiracy?"

"I did."

"Fred Parker?"

"Yes."

"He just gave them a blank order?"

"Yes."

"The supreme court last night signed an order staying the district court authority for the sheriff to name unlimited deputies, setting January 30 for a hearing."

"And Sheriff Pettit, under the Jones' order, could name as many gangsters as deputies as he pleased?"

"As many as he deemed necessary."

He said Sheriff Pettit had submitted a list of 13 deputies to him and that he had immediately approved seven and later two more. He said he had not disapproved any.

"Did he hand you Fred Parker's name?"

"No."

"Did you suggest he submit any more names?"

"Yes."

"Why did you turn down five names?"

"I didn't think they were fit to serve."

"General, have you been attempting to find these witnesses?"

"I have my men looking for them."

Joe Bates, a state police officer, was called to the stand.

"Yes."

"What's been your luck trying to locate these prominent men?"

"So far I haven't been able to locate them."

Songy, testifying of his "arrest" Thursday night, said he was taken to the house of Fred O'Rourke.

"You had a little conversation?" Senator Long asked him.

"Yes, they all patted me on the shoulder and congratulated me for keeping my mouth shut."

"What did my friend John Fred Odom say?"

"He said not to talk. He said they were going to take me to the police station and set me free."

"What'd they do about the money they were going to give you?"

"I haven't got it."

Songy said he went to the courthouse meeting yesterday.

"What did you do?"

"I asked Mr. Parker when they were going to fight and he said they weren't ready yet. He said the officers were coming in."

"What officers? The state officers?"

"Yes."

"What else did they plan?"

"They said they would get you in Washington."

An officer came into the court and whispered to Long.

"Oh," said Long, "so Mr. Odom isn't in town. I hope he has a pleasant journey."

Songy told of having been arrested with the gas bombs, a shotgun, a pistol and shells in his automobile "after he notified Mr. Parker that you were to leave town and he was to take his men and get you on the road."

"What did they find in your car?" Long asked.

"Hand me that gun," Long said. He looked at it and laughed.

"You were brought to the police station?"

"Yes, it was 9:15 or 9:20. I was brought in Chief (King) Strenzke's office. He asked me if I would like to use the telephone. I called Mr. Fred Parker's house and told his wife I was in trouble. She said she was sorry."

"Did Mr. (Fred) LeBlanc (assistant district attorney) come in?"

"Yes. Mr. Roland Kizer (local attorney) came in. He said my wife phoned him and told him I was in trouble."

"Where were you going when you were arrested?"

"To Mr. Higginbotham's house."

He referred to Powers Higginbotham, whose office as member of the Baton Rouge municipal council as commissioner of streets and parks Long had abolished at the December session of the legislature.

"Why did you meet at Dallas Gross' house? Who told you to go there?"

"Fred Parker."

"What were they to do?"

"They told me to go find out whether you had machine guns up there."

He said Henry Sherburne, Sidney Dubroca, Fred Parker and others were at the meeting.

"Who seemed to be the big man?"

"Mr. Fred Parker and Mr. Fred O'Rourke."

"These gas bombs, where'd you get 'em?"

"From Fred C. Parker, Jr."

"Where?"

"At Peacock Inn."

"Where shells, sack, bombs come from?"

"Mr. Parker."

"Where you get six-shooter?"

"Mr. (Fred) O'Rourke."

"He's the Standard Oil man?"

"Yes. I gave him my smaller gun for his .45."

"What was the object of the exchange?"

"I said I could do more damage with a bigger gun."

"The purpose was to kill Huey Long?"

"Yes."

"Did you attend meeting on Wednesday night when this thing came up and give us the whole story?"

"I was at my home. That was Wednesday, the 23rd. Mr. Fred Parker came by my home and he said we want you go find out when the senator leaves."

After testifying about being asked to find out about the machine guns, Songy was asked by Long:

"They were to come up and do the murder of Huey Long that night provided it was safe?"

"Yes."

"Why didn't they?"

"I told them I didn't know whether it was safe."

"Why did they pick you?"

"Because they knew I was friendly with Joe Messina."

"And everybody knows Joe Messina goes around with me?"

"Yes."

"You had contacted Mr. Messina and General Guerre?"

"Yes."

"And they told you to go right along?"

"Yes."

"That Wednesday night you kept them from coming there by telling them you didn't know whether I had machine guns or not?"

"Yes."

"What happened the next day?"

"They told me to make sure I got the right information."

"I contacted Mr. Messina and he brought me up to your room on the seventh floor. I explained to you everything. I told you what was going to take place and how it was going to take place. They wanted me to take my car and block your car."

"How many men were to do this job?"

"Between 50 and 75."

"Did I undertake to dismiss you?"

"Yes. I went and made telephone calls so others could listen on extension."

"Who'd you call?"

"I called Mr. Fred Parker. I phoned him four times."

"Senator James A. Noe listened to one. We had a stenographer listen to one. What happened in these conversations?

"He said he was waiting on more men and waiting for you to leave."

"What did you tell him?"

"I said I would call him back."

"Then you came to see me again?"

"Yes."

"And I still wanted to doubt you?"

"Yes."

"You went back and called others?"

"Yes."

"You called him to John Fred Odom's house?"

"Yes."

"You went to see Mr. Parker again?"

"Yes."

"What you get?"

"The gas bombs and shells."

"Did I have any doubts about it then?"

"No."

"I got serious?"

"Yes."

"We were in a terrible sweat to keep from getting killed and keep from killing them?"

"Yes."

"Then we decided to arrest you?"

"Yes."

"You started to Mr. Higginbotham?"

"Yes."

"What happened?"

"I was arrested. The chief paroled me."

"What did your attorney, Mr. Roland Kizer say?"

"He said to keep my mouth shut. We're gonna get him yet."

"Did they suggest you leave town?"

AT CAPITOL TODAY

Joe Morrison, Helen Twelvetrees, Conrad Nagel as they appear in Paramount's new melodrama, "One Hour Late," at the Capitol today only. "One Hour Late" is an excellent combination of entertainment elements, sprightly comedy and suspenseful drama, to bring the picture to an exciting climax. These elements coupled with the romance and new songs introduced by Joe Morrison, will satisfy any audience.

THE NATION'S NO. 1 HONEYMOONERS

Meeting reporters for the first time since they were married and consenting to pose for their first photograph together, Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger took up housekeeping in an apartment in New York city after a week-end honeymoon. Boettiger, former Chicago newspaperman, and Mrs. Boettiger, the former Mrs. Anna Dall, daughter of President Roosevelt, were noncommittal about their romance and plans for the future. Here they are shown at the interview. (Associated Press Photo).

ROOSEVELT ACTS TO AVERT FIGHT

President Moves To Head Off Opposition To Work Relief Bill

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—(AP)—In a move to head off rising opposition to the $4,880,000,000 public works bill, word was sent to congress today from the White House that President Roosevelt himself would allocate the fund.

Democrats and Republicans in the senate were objecting to the vast power the bill would give the president to delegate authority to subordinates. A White House conference was held between President Roosevelt and Senator Byrnes, Democrat, South Carolina, one of the executive's close advisors.

At the White House it was said authoritatively Mr. Roosevelt personally would administer the fund instead of Secretary Ickes who handled the first $3,300,000,000 program.

It was added that existing government agencies would handle allocations made by presidential direction. Under such procedure, Ickes as secretary of interior would direct only allotments to that department.

Senate Republicans held a conference on the relief program and agreed to contest sections of the measure which would give President Roosevelt wide discretion in the use of the fund.

They will meet again after the senate appropriations committee acts on the measure and determine then what attitude they will take toward the bill when it comes up for consideration probably late next week.

TO ENLARGE HOME

Plans have been drawn by J. W. Smith and assocates, architects, and bids will be opened February 14, for construction of a large addition to the home of O. A. Morgan on L street.

TIRE RE-TREADING FIRM FORMED HERE

Organization of a new tire retreading firm in Monroe was announced here Saturday. The firm was organized by J. N. Knowles, wholesale distributor of automotive supplies and tires for many years, and K. S. Elliott, who has traveled over the entire south for several major tire companies for 15 years.

The tire re-treading method used by the new firm here consists of entirely removing the old, worn tread and replacing it with a new and powerful non-skid tread that lasts practically as long as the original tread, a representative of the firm said. It is known as "safety tire re-treading."

According to reports from many sections of the country, re-treading is being done by a large proportion of owners of fleets of automobiles and trucks, with a large saving of money. The cost of equipment for this work runs into thousands of dollars, a representative of the firm said.

DOWNS VISITS CITY

Rev. J. R. Downs, superintendent of the Home of the Good Samaritan, located on the Winnsboro road, was able to visit the city Saturday, although he had not fully recuperated from injuries received in an automobile accident which happened in front of the home. He suffered three broken ribs.

Cypress School Wins Honors In Contests

Cypress school won first place, Eureka won second place and Drew won third place in the writing contest conducted during the third six-week period of school, results compiled at the office of T. O. Brown, parish superintendent of schools, showed Saturday. Averages scored by the schools were 1.7, 5.7 and 6.3, respectively.

Other schools which ranked well were Ouachita parish grammar school fourth; Mt. Vernon, fifth; Okaloosa, sixth, and Crosley school in West Monroe, seventh.

Cypress won first place in the second grade, third place in the third grade, first place in the fourth grade, second place in the fifth grade, first place in the sixth grade and second place in the seventh grade.

Negro Is Arrested On Charges Of Forgery

Lonnie Dade, negro, who lives about six miles north of Cheniere, was arrested by the sheriff's department Saturday on a warrant charging him with forging the name of Isaac Green, negro, to a check for $19.44, and cashing the check. Dade confessed guilt of the charge after his arrest, Sheriff Coverdale said.

The negro was said to have obtained Green's check from the Brown Paper mill by using a forged order for the check, and to have forged Green's name a second time when he used the name in endorsing the check. A fictitious name, John White, was written on the check below the forged endorsement.

parish; Deputy Sheriff Fred C. Parker of East Baton Rouge; Fred O'Rourke, Square Deal association committeeman whom Long described as the "chief agent of the Standard Oil"; Sheriff Sidney Dubroca of West Baton Rouge; and Dallas Gross, Baton Rouge citizen.

Powers Higginbotham, Baton Rouge commissioner of streets and parks, also was named by Long as one of the conspirators. He was reported as one of the "missing witnesses," but later appeared at the hearing and was subjected to a gruelling examination by the senator.

Long presented as his chief witness a man who said he was Sidney Songy, who recited details of the supposed plot, and said he was the man weapons and gas bombs were given to, and that he had participated at a conference of the alleged conspirators at which the details assertedly were discussed.

The dictator endeavored to back up Songy's testimony with evidence by Brig.-Gen. Louis F. Guerre, superintendent of state police and national guard commander, and W. R. M. Whitens, East Baton Rouge deputy sheriff, that weapons found in Songy's car came from the offices of the East Baton Rouge and Ibberville sheriffs.

The proceeding was conducted in the form of an inquiry requested by Attorney-General Gaston L. Porterie on allegation to Judge Womack that a "crime or misdemeanor has been committed in his jurisdiction and that no complaint or declaration thereof had been made before any judge or justice of the peace."

The attorney-general referred to Long's claimed conspiracy. He said he appeared as an inquirer into the facts of the case so that further proceedings might be held later after the taking of depositions.

Higginbotham, whose status as a member of the Baton Rouge commission was abolished by Long recently, but who retained the headship of the streets and parks department without voting privilege, was the only alleged conspirator who testified. He did not admit anything, and Long accused him of poor memory.

The court was held in a tense atmosphere. Heavy forces of state police guards protected Long in all his movements, and carefully searched all spectators for weapons.

Militiamen paraded over the statehouse grounds and tropped through capitol corridors. Detachments from seven national guard companies were assembled in Baton Rouge after mobilization in various sections of the state.

The essence of the "conspiracy" testimony was:

That the group of officials and citizens named allegedly engaged Songy to "tip them off" on whether Long had machine guns in his hotel suite.

That Songy was given weapons and gas bombs and instructions to block Long's automobile on the highway with his machine until a corps of armed men arrived to "kill the dictator."

That the weapons were given to him by Deputy Sheriff Fred C. Parker and Fred O'Rourke.

The call for the meeting was signed by Judge J. D. Womack, recently appointed by the Long-Allen administration for the East Baton Rouge district court. The meeting was opened by Attorney General Gaston L. Porterie.

Smartly dressed and heavily guarded as he enumerated his charges before the hearing, Long declared the state authorities had been "defied" by the several hundred armed men who seized the courthouse last night.

Long read accounts from newspapers describing the meeting in the courthouse.

"In other words," he said, "the state authorities have been defied. Not only those convicted by their own statements of conspiracy.

"So we have called these proceedings, your honor, for the removal from office and prosecution if the facts warrant it of these men."

Judge Womack spoke as Long concluded his talk. "The courthouse here has been forcibly taken over by several hundred armed persons," he said.

Judge Womack said that he had found armed men at the entrance to his office in the courthouse.

"One of these men armed with a Winchester rifle was asked if the court would be admitted. He finally granted permission. A few minutes thereafter, the court desiring to transact legal business, left the courthouse and was insulted. The custodian of the courthouse had a gun pressed against his stomach."

"These are things the court knows. The sheriff made no attempt to preserve order. I think it is high time for the state of Louisiana to step in."

Long had said he planned to call as witnesses reporters who witnessed the gathering at the courthouse yesterday, but since Judge Womack's remark he did not think it necessary. Long called for the reading of the list of witnesses.

The name of Fred C. Parker, Fred O'Rourke, John Appel, Powers Higginbotham, John Fred Odom, Fred LeBlanc and Dallas Gross were called.

None of the witnesses was present.

"I expect the bureau of identification and investigation has not made returns yet," Long concluded.

Long said he thought these witnesses should be given the earliest "opportunity to state their case on these charges."

The court recessed for a few minutes, awaiting the arrival of General L. F. Guerre, head of the state bureau of criminal identification and investigation.

After the recess General Guerre was placed on the witness stand. Long asked him what he knew of the "conspiracy."

"In your room in the Heidelberg. I saw a man who gave his name as Sidney Songy—"

"Wait a minute," Long said. "I want to skip that right now."

"I was called into conference," General Guerre said.

"What did you do then?"

"I called over long distance. I spoke to the general manager who informed me the grenade was delivered to Harold Bomby of New Orleans, their agent. The superintendent of police at New Orleans informed me that grenade was in a lot delivered to the sheriffs of East Baton Rouge and Iberville."

"That is Sheriff Robert L. Pettit of East Baton Rouge and Sheriff Henry Sherburne of Iberville?" Long asked.

"Yes."

"It was reported that they heard the bureau was going to make certain arrests. They didn't intend to allow us to serve warrants on certain persons in the courthouse," Guerre said.

"Did you go to see these people at the courthouse?"

"No, sir."

"Who were the men you sent out to get information?"

"It was brought to me by Mr. Deberetton and the assessor or assistant assessor."

General Guerre brought in a sack he said was taken from Songy which he said he was informed had been sent to the sheriff of East Baton Rouge parish by the state penitentiary at Angola, to return two pairs of handcuffs.

He said it was addressed to the sheriff's office.

Assistant Attorney General George Wallace was sworn in as a witness. He testified that Judge W. Carruth Jones of East Baton Rouge parish had issued an order giving the sheriff the right to appoint as many deputies as he needed.

"Did the order contain any mention of a law which makes it mandatory for deputy sheriffs to be approved by the state bureau of identification and investigation?"

"Did you hear that the sheriff was arming men in a murder conspiracy?"

"I did."

"Fred Parker?"

"Yes."

"He just gave them a blank order?"

"Yes."

"The supreme court last night signed an order staying the district court authority for the sheriff to name unlimited deputies, setting January 30 for a hearing."

"And Sheriff Pettit, under the Jones' order, could name as many gangsters as deputies as he pleased?"

"As many as he deemed necessary."

He said Sheriff Pettit had submitted a list of 13 deputies to him and that he had immediately approved seven and later two more. He said he had not disapproved any.

"Did he hand you Fred Parker's name?"

"No."

"Did you suggest he submit any more names?"

"Yes."

"Why did you turn down five names?"

"I didn't think they were fit to serve."

"General, have you been attempting to find these witnesses?"

Joe Bates, a state police officer, was called to the stand.

"Yes."

"What's been your luck trying to locate these prominent men?"

"So far I haven't been able to locate them."

Songy, testifying of his "arrest" Thursday night, said he was taken to the house of Fred O'Rourke.

"You had a little conversation?" Senator Long asked him.

"Yes, they all patted me on the shoulder and congratulated me for keeping my mouth shut."

"What did my friend John Fred Odom say?"

"He said not to talk. He said they were going to take me to the police station and set me free."

"What'd they do about the money they were going to give you?"

"I haven't got it."

Songy said he went to the courthouse meeting yesterday.

"What did you do?"

"I asked Mr. Parker when they were going to fight and he said they weren't ready yet. He said the officers were coming in."

"What officers? The state officers?"

"Yes."

"What else did they plan?"

"They said they would get you in Washington."

An officer came into the court and whispered to Long.

"Oh," said Long, "so Mr. Odom isn't in town. I hope he has a pleasant journey."

Songy told of having been arrested with the gas bombs, a shotgun, a pistol and shells in his automobile "after he notified Mr. Parker that you were to leave town and he was to take his men and get you on the road."

"What did they find in your car?" Long asked.

"Hand me that gun," Long said. He looked at it and laughed.

"You were brought to the police station?"

"Yes, it was 9:15 or 9:20. I was brought in Chief (King) Strenzke's office. He asked me if I would like to use the telephone. I called Mr. Fred Parker's house and told his wife I was in trouble. She said she was sorry."

"Did Mr. (Fred) LeBlanc (assistant district attorney) come in?"

"Yes. Mr. Roland Kizer (local attorney) came in. He said my wife phoned him and told him I was in trouble."

"Where were you going when you were arrested?"

"To Mr. Higginbotham's house."

He referred to Powers Higginbotham, whose office as member of the Baton Rouge municipal council as commissioner of streets and parks Long had abolished at the December session of the legislature.

"Why did you meet at Dallas Gross' house? Who told you to go there?"

"Fred Parker."

"What were they to do?"

"They told me to go find out whether you had machine guns up there."

He said Henry Sherburne, Sidney Dubroca, Fred Parker and others were at the meeting.

"Who seemed to be the big man?"

"Mr. Fred Parker and Mr. Fred O'Rourke."

"From Fred C. Parker, Jr."

"Where?"

"At Peacock Inn."

"Where shells, sack, bombs come from?"

"Mr. Parker."

"Mr. (Fred) O'Rourke."

"He's the Standard Oil man?"

"Yes. I gave him my smaller gun for his .45."

"What was the object of the exchange?"

"I said I could do more damage with a bigger gun."

"The purpose was to kill Huey Long?"

"Yes."

"Did you attend meeting on Wednesday night when this thing came up and give us the whole story?"

"I was at my home. That was Wednesday, the 23rd. Mr. Fred Parker came by my home and he said we want you go find out when the senator leaves."

After testifying about being asked to find out about the machine guns, Songy was asked by Long:

"They were to come up and do the murder of Huey Long that night provided it was safe?"

"Yes."

"Why didn't they?"

"I told them I didn't know whether it was safe."

"Why did they pick you?"

"Because they knew I was friendly with Joe Messina."

"And everybody knows Joe Messina goes around with me?"

"Yes."

"You had contacted Mr. Messina and General Guerre?"

"Yes."

"And they told you to go right along?"

"Yes."

"That Wednesday night you kept them from coming there by telling them you didn't know whether I had machine guns or not?"

"Yes."

"What happened the next day?"

"They told me to make sure I got the right information."

"I contacted Mr. Messina and he brought me up to your room on the seventh floor. I explained to you everything. I told you what was going to take place and how it was going to take place. They wanted me to take my car and block your car."

"How many men were to do this job?"

"Between 50 and 75."

"Did I undertake to dismiss you?"

"Yes. I went and made telephone calls so others could listen on extension."

"Who'd you call?"

"I called Mr. Fred Parker. I phoned him four times."

"Senator James A. Noe listened to one. We had a stenographer listen to one. What happened in these conversations?

"He said he was waiting on more men and waiting for you to leave."

"What did you tell him?"

"I said I would call him back."

"Then you came to see me again?"

"Yes."

"And I still wanted to doubt you?"

"Yes."

"You went back and called others?"

"Yes."

"You called him to John Fred Odom's house?"

"Yes."

"You went to see Mr. Parker again?"

"Yes."

"What you get?"

"The gas bombs and shells."

"Did I have any doubts about it then?"

"No."

"I got serious?"

"Yes."

"We were in a terrible sweat to keep from getting killed and keep from killing them?"

"Yes."

"Then we decided to arrest you?"

"Yes."

"You started to Mr. Higginbotham?"

"Yes."

"What happened?"

"I was arrested. The chief paroled me."

"What did your attorney, Mr. Roland Kizer say?"

"He said to keep my mouth shut. We're gonna get him yet."

"Did they suggest you leave town?"

President Moves To Head Off Opposition To Work Relief Bill

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—(AP)—In a move to head off rising opposition to the $4,880,000,000 public works bill, word was sent to congress today from the White House that President Roosevelt himself would allocate the fund.

Democrats and Republicans in the senate were objecting to the vast power the bill would give the president to delegate authority to subordinates. A White House conference was held between President Roosevelt and Senator Byrnes, Democrat, South Carolina, one of the executive's close advisors.

At the White House it was said authoritatively Mr. Roosevelt personally would administer the fund instead of Secretary Ickes who handled the first $3,300,000,000 program.

It was added that existing government agencies would handle allocations made by presidential direction. Under such procedure, Ickes as secretary of interior would direct only allotments to that department.

Senate Republicans held a conference on the relief program and agreed to contest sections of the measure which would give President Roosevelt wide discretion in the use of the fund.

They will meet again after the senate appropriations committee acts on the measure and determine then what attitude they will take toward the bill when it comes up for consideration probably late next week.

TIRE RE-TREADING FIRM FORMED HERE

Organization of a new tire re-treading firm in Monroe was announced here Saturday. The firm was organized by J. N. Knowles, wholesale distributor of automotive supplies and tires for many years, and K. S. Elliott, who has traveled over the entire south for several major tire companies for 15 years.

The tire re-treading method used by the new firm here consists of entirely removing the old, worn tread and replacing it with a new and powerful non-skid tread that lasts practically as long as the original tread, a representative of the firm said. It is known as "safety tire re-treading."

According to reports from many sections of the country, re-treading is being done by a large proportion of owners of fleets of automobiles and trucks, with a large saving of money. The cost of equipment for this work runs into thousands of dollars, a representative of the firm said.

MAN INJURED IN FREAK ACCIDENT

Arkansan Says Wind Pulled Him From Car As Door Was Opened

J. W. Taylor, 47, wholesale and retail grocer, of Hamburg, Ark., was admitted to the Clinic Saturday for treatment of injuries received Friday when he fell from the seat of a moving automobile on a highway near Beasley, Texas, about 40 miles from Houston, near the gulf coast.

Taylor said that the accident took place when he opened the door of the car several inches, to slam it shut, and was "pulled" from the car by a strong wind whipping across a prairie.

Believing that a rattle in the door was caused by the door not being securely locked, Taylor said he opened it several inches and that the wind instantly forced the door backwards and pulled him from the car before he could release his grasp of the door.

M. F. Taylor, also of Hamburg, nephew of the injured man, was driving the car at a rate of about 40 miles an hour, it was stated. He quickly stopped the car.

Continuing on to Houston, and receiving treatment there Friday night, Taylor resumed his journey towards Hamburg Saturday morning, but decided later in the day to stop at a hospital. He was being treated for an injury to his head and right eye and severe bruises on his hands and knees.

Taylor said that at Orange, Texas, where he and his nephew stopped at a filling station for gasoline, an attendant inquired as to how he came to receive his "black eye." When told of the accident, the attendant related that a similar accident had happened in that area recently, involving a man who was driving when he attempted to slam his car door shut. This man was severely injured and his car was badly damaged, Taylor said the attendant related.

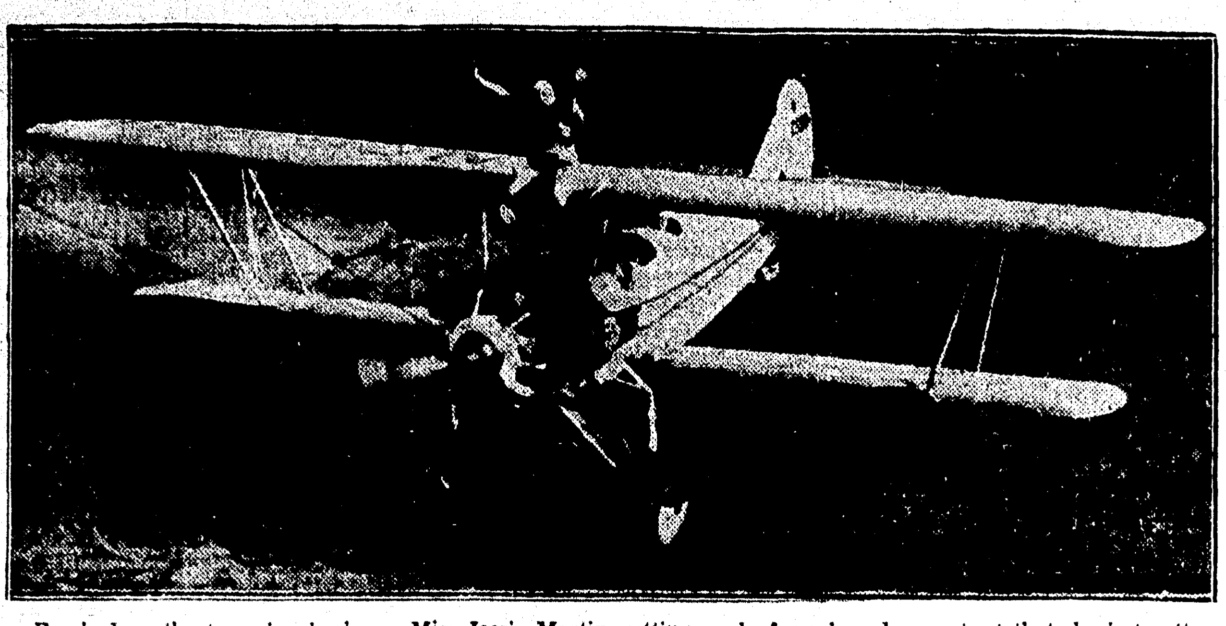
GETS READY FOR NEW STUNT



Perched on the top wing is shown Miss Jessie Martin getting ready for a brand new stunt that she is to attempt during the American Legion Flying Aces air circus at Selman field this afternoon. Miss Martin will stand on the top wing while the pilot puts the plane through several turns of a tailspin, a stunt that even Miss Martin has never attempted before. Miss Martin is known throughout the aviation world as one of its foremost women daredevils.

179 Persons Slated To Be Executed In United States

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

The gallows, the chair, the gas chamber and the firing squad—America's four horsemen of legal execution—have marked 179 persons for a macabre roundup.

Five who wear the brand of the condemned are women. Only the courts or executive clemency can save them now.

Mostly, the persons under death sentences are murderers. But not all. Eight are rapists. Five are kidnapers. One is an armed robber who took no money and killed no man.

Death sentences for kidnaping are an ougtrowth of public horror at the Lindbergh baby abduction. That crime of March 1, 1932, prompted the federal government and many states to fix for the first time a death penalty for kidnaping.

Walter McGee, desperately slapping at the noose a Kansas City jury ordered for him, was the first person to be sentenced to death for kidnaping. Though his crime—the kidnaping of Mary McElroy from her Kansas City home—was committed May 27, 1933, and he was arrested within a week, McGee's execution date has not been set.

An appeal in McGee's behalf was argued before the Missouri supreme court last week. His attorney referred to him as "an illiterate, ignorant farm hand" who received "the most unfair trial ever held in Missouri."

California has two men under death sentences for "kidnaping for the purpose of robbery." They are William E. Tanner and Harry C. Brooks, convicted of the abduction of a wealthy Los Angeles lawyer, Henry G. Bodkin.

Bodkin was tortured with lighted matches applied to his hands as Tanner and Brooks pressed him to tell where a large sum of money was hidden. No such cache existed, and they had to content themselves with $35 in cash and jewelry worth $2,000.

The kidnapers have appeals from their death sentences pending.

Florida's first death sentences under her new "Lindbergh law" named Millard Keith and Bonard Retherford. They kidnaped an old woman of Bonifay. For the $1.80 they finally got from her, they were sentenced to the chair.

The best known of the five women for whom the death penalty has been fixed, is Mrs. Eva Coo, the blond Oswego upstate New York roadhouse keeper whose resemblance to Ruth Snyder—who died in the electric chair—is so pronounced.

Eva Coo killed Harry Wright, a handy man, by striking him down with a mallet. Afterwards an automobile was "steamrollered" over Wright's form to make certain of his death. Mrs. Coo's appeal from the death sentence is set for hearing March 4.

The ascribed motive in the Coo case was the insurance money she intended to collect.

In the case of Illinois' condemned woman, Mrs. Gertrude Puhse, a 43-year-old mother of two children, the familiar "triangle" motive was given. Mrs. Puhse and a former Venice, Ill., policeman, Thomas J. Lehne, were sentenced to the chair for murdering Mrs. Puhse's husband, a steelworker. They are held at the Chester penitentiary pending the outcome of appeals.

Husband murder, not for freedom for a cold love as in the Illinois case but for her man's unfaithfulness, has placed Mrs. Nellie May Madison in the shadow of California's gallows. She killed Eric Madison, an auditor at a Hollywood film studio, because she believed he had transferred his love to another.

The other women under death sentences are a negro woman in West Virginia and Julia Moore, a Louisiana murderess.

Death is nearer the Moore woman than any of the others. Her death warrant, signed by Louisiana's governor O. K. Allen, fixes February 8 for the springing of the trap.

February 8 will be a "black Friday," with two triple hangings set for that date, and executions ordered also in California, Ohio and Alabama.

The Moore woman will be a principal in one of the "black Friday" triple hangings. She is booked to die with Cleve Cooper of Caddo parish (Shreveport) and Ed Dunn, for murder.

On the same day, in neighboring Mississippi, there is to be a triple hanging at DeKalb, in Kemper county. The three to die are Ed Brown, Yank Ellington and Henry Shields, negroes. They beat to death a farmer, Raymond Stewart, in his home.

On Friday of this week (February 1), Louisiana's best known prisoner must walk the last mile. He is Louis Kenneth Neu, the young night club singer and foemer seaman of Savannah, Ga., who murdered Sheffield Clark, a Nashville, Tenn., man, in September, 1933, in a New Orleans hotel room. Neu was arrested in New Jersey and confessed not only the Clark killing but also the slaying of a New Jersey man whom, like Clark, he robbed.

Neu's appeal for commutation to life imprisonment on a plea of insanity was recently denied.

Two others to die this week, also on Friday, are C. B. Dobbins, a Texas murderer now in the death house at Huntsville; and, at Folsom prison, in California, Harold P. Bieber.

On Wednesday, January 30, Ohio will avenge the murder of Mrs. Ruth Gilmore Steese, a Cleveland welfare worker who was abducted, robbed and slain, when it executes Peter Treadway. The condemned man, still insisting he is innocent, has lost all his appeals, including that to the governor for clemency. "The courts are in a better position to decide the case than I," said Governor Davey, denying the appeal.

The president of the United States and the chief justice have caused a delay in the execution of two death sentences.

President Roosevelt entered the case of Charles Harris, who was to have died in the District of Columbia's electric chair January 11 for the 1932 murder of "Milsie" Henry, a gambler. The president granted a 60-day reprieve pending an appeal.

Chief Justice Hughes took a precedent-setting action when, last January 4, he issued a stay of execution for 18-year-old Billy Prescott just a few hours before Prescott was to have been strapped to the chair to expiate a highway robbery murder.

The chief justice acted on the ground Prescott was rushed to trial five minutes after the appointment of a lawyer for him, in violation of the "due process of law" guarantee in the constitution.

Oklahoma's death row is the largest ever, with 16 tenants of whom four are negroes. Among the 16 is the only man in the United States under death sentence for an armed robbery in which no one was shot and no money taken. The man is Lloyd Grable, 37, with no previous crime record. He pleaded mistaken identity and has appealed.

There is irony in the case of James Hargus, a 24-year-old desperado of the "wild west" type, for whom June 14 is the designated death day. Hargus, who killed a Tulsa policeman, was saved for the chair after being critically wounded in a gunfight with officers. There is a .44 slug in his head. It passed through the brain from the right side, blinding an eye. One arm, torn by bullet wounds, has been amputated.

An argument over whether "knee action" improves an automobile put Robert Cargo, 20, in the Oklahoma death house. He settled the argument with a hatchet, killing an aged man, A. L. Luke.

Another Oklahoma condemned man who owes his life to the United States supreme court is Jess Hollins, called "The Friendless Negro." He was convicted for attacking a white girl. Word of his reprieve came as he knelt on his cell floor in prayer.

The Oklahoma penitentiary also holds one of the few Indians ever to be sentenced to death for murder. He carries the prosaic (for an Indian) name of John Williams. To other prisoners he is known as "Meat Head John." He is one of three persons convicted for a prison yard murder of another inmate.

Virginia's modest death row of two—a white man and a negro—was suddenly doubled last week when federal men in New York City captured Robert Mais and Walter Legenza, two men under sentence of death who had escaped.

Noah Newton, 37, the white man whose death date has been set for February 15, killed a former sweetheart "because she was meddlesome and jealous."

Alabama's list of five condemned men, all negroes, includes the names of Haywood Patterson and Clarence Norris, two of the "Scottsboro boys" whose death sentences are again being considered by the supreme court. They have been in jail four years for attacking a white woman on a freight train near Paint Rock, Ala.

By coincidence, two of New York's eight condemned prisoners were convicted of "insurance money" murders. Besides, Mrs. Coo, who sought to obtain insurance on her handyman, there is Alfred Giallarenzi, who is sentenced to die February 7 for plotting the death of Joseph Carlucci in Syracuse for Carlucci's insurance. The state charged he plotted with Carlucci's wife, and hired a third person to do the actual murder.

Massachusetts' quarter of condemned men includes the Millen brothers, Murton and Irving, and Abraham Faber, whose murder trial created much notice. They killed a policeman during a holdup. Norma Millen, daughter of a minister and wife of one of the brothers, was sentenced as an accessory to a short term.

Two of Iowa's five-who-are-to-be-hanged are wife killers.

Two Colorado men, Louis and John Pacheco, are banking on an appeal to save them from being victims No. 2 and 3 of the state's new lethal gas chamber. They were convicted of a "horror" murder predicated on a dispute over a calf.

The Colorado case involved the slaying of a chore boy, Bobby Griffin, and the way laying of Clifford Smith, a rancher, and Smith's wife. Smith was slain. His wife attempted to flee but was caught in a barbed wire fence. The killers seized her, dragged her to the ranch house, tossed her across the bodies of her husband and the chore boy, and set fire to the house.

Mrs. Smith, regaining consciousness, beat out the flames and staggered two miles to a neighbor's house.

Utah's sole death house occupant has been in the shadow of society's vengeance for five years. He is Delbert Green, who slew his uncle, his young wife and his mother-in-law. A child lying between the two women as Green slew them, was unhurt.

Appeals have twice saved Green from the firing squad, the form of death he elected.

Among Arkansas' five death house occupants is Mark H. Shank, the Akron, Ohio, attorney, charged with the poison murders of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Colley and two Colley children.

Pair At 89 Dispute 'Oldest Twins' Title

CATAWISSA, Pa., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Judge J. T. Fox, retired dentist, of this town, has come out to dispute the claim of A. T. McCarger, of Burbank, Cal., and A. L. McCarger, of Whittier, Cal., of being the "oldest twins in the United States."

Judge Fox points out that he and his twin brother, John C. Fox, of Hailey, Idaho, were born July 2, 1846, and are therefore nearing 89 years old. The McCargers were reported to be 84.

WORK ON BRIDGE GOES AHEAD FAST

Steel Work And Highway Construction Are Expected Soon

Prospects that the new bridge across the Ouachita river here and the sections of highway leading from each end of it may be ready for use by mid-summer were seen Saturday, as a result of several developments which have occurred within the last few days.

One of these developments was the awarding of the contract for paving Louisville avenue and the Louisville extension to connect with the Dixie-Overland highway near Northeast Center of Louisiana State university. Another was the announcement that Vincinnes Bridge company, contractor for the steel work on the bridge, would be ready to begin placing steel by March 1.

Good progress has been made by Central Construction company in the concrete work on the bridge since work was started several weeks ago. Most of the time the weather has been good and progress was unhampered. The first four days of this week the weather was bad and the work was slowed down considerably, but by Friday the weather had improved sufficiently so that work was again going forward with a full force.

Meyer Greenwald, president of Central Construction company, said his firm could complete its contract within three more months of good working weather. About four months probably will be required for the Vincinnes company to place the steel.

JUDGE SCHULZE ILL

Judge Charles Schulze, superintendent at Louisiana Training institute, who has been quite ill with influenza, was reported Saturday to be somewhat improved, but still unable to see friends. His physician said it probably would be five or six days before he would be able to receive visitors.

PRESIDENT SIGNS NRA CODE ORDER

Assures Agreement Signers Of Full Constitutional Rights

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Full retention of constitutional rights for all past and future signers of NRA codes was disclosed today to have been assured by President Roosevelt in an executive order, signed early this week but not announced publicly.

The order, actually a modification of the terms of approval whereby the chief executive gave force to all prevailing codes said:

"It is understood that neither the government nor any member of industry waives, or can properly insist that the other has waived, any constitutional right pertaining to the government or to any individual by approving, assenting to, or cooperating under a code of fair competition."

Thus the chief executive acted to clarify a confused situation resulting from the fact that some codes contained a clause specifically asserting no waiver of such rights was involved while other did not. Some signers of the latter codes are understood to have been perturbed by this circumstance.

Mr. Roosevelt's view, repeatedly stated, has been that under no interpretation could a code signer be held to have foregone any constitutional right by the act of assenting to the code, that the constitution, of course, took precedence over any such instrument.

However, some business organizations, including the National Association of Manufacturers, have maintained this was not implicit. They said that in case of a conflict between code and constitution, the courts might easily hold that the signer had specifically waived the rights conferred upon him by the latter.

ABE BLUMENTHAL RETURNS TO CITY

Manager Of Fields' Is Back After Buying Trip Through East

Abe Blumenthal, manager of Field's Woman's shop on DeSiard street, has returned to Monroe after an extended buying trip to eastern markets. He had been absent from the city for three weeks, during which time he visited the fashion centers of New York, Chicago and other cities.

The Field's organization said Mr. Blumenthal has buying connections in the east that supply thousands of retail stores throughout the United States, thus enabling the store here to offer exclusive styles in dresses, coats, suits and millinery at savings that could not be accomplished otherwise.

Mr. Blumenthal reported a new and greater variety of spring wearing apparel than ever before.

"The trends this spring," he said, "show dresses in the new prints, capes, pastels and jackets. The new dresses are bright and sparkling and put a new glow in the wearer's eyes. They are in smart silks and acetate and in floral, geometrics and dotted designs. Backgrounds are light and dark. It is also going to a 'sportsy.' Spring suits of sport design will be the season's most important fashion.

"We are presenting a wide style chioce. The coats are tailored with a care given to men's suits and are lined with materials that are durable. Beige, navy, brown, checks, plaids and mixtures are the outstanding colors.

"Every garment in our store has been received recently," said Mr. Blumenthal. We were completely sold out of fall and winter merchandise around the first of the year, which made it imperative to do our spring buying. It also assures our patrons of the latest spring styles.

MONROE CHOSEN FOR NEW STORE

Announcement has been made that Monroe has been selected as the site of a store which has been extremely popular in the larger cities of the country.

The new store will be known as the Hollywood Cotton Shoppe, the idea for which originated in the film capital. It will be located at 147 DeSiard street, in the space formerly occupied by the thrift shop on the ground floor of the Bernhardt building.

Elaborate fixtures will be installed and it is promised that the store will be one of the most attractive in the city. It will feature a full and complete line of women's, misses' and children's sports and cotton goods wearing apparel.

The store has been refinished inside and outside and a mezzanine floor has been added. The owners promise it will be a spring fairyland at the opening.

Announcement of the formal opening will be made within the next few days.

Series Of Nutrition Meetings Is Planned

A series of nutrition meetings among the home demonstration clubs of Ouachita parish will begin next week, Mrs. Jewel L. McQuiller, parish home demonstration agent, announced yesterday. Six meeting dates have been posted and three of them will be for negro groups.

The meetings will be held as follows: For whites, West Monroe, Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, place yet to be designated; Lida Benton school, Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock; Cypress church, Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. For negroes, colored school at Ninth and Twelfth streets, tomorrow at 1:30 p. m.; negro high school, February 4, at 2 p. m.; and Fairbanks, February 5, at 2 p. m.

The first casaba melons grown in the United States were produced from seeds imported from Kassabah, in Asia Minor, to California in 1878.

COMES TO PARAMOUNT TUESDAY

Miss Mildred Mandre, the young lady that is charming, pleasant and pretty who is one of the feature entertainers with the N. B. C. radio orchestra, "The Clicquot Eskimos," who come to the Paramount theater for a one-day engagement on Tuesday, January 29, as an added attraction with the feature picture, "Gentlemen Are Born," which features Franchot Tone, Jean Muir, Margaret Lindsay, Ann Dvorak and many others. This famous radio orchestra and entertainers will appear on the Paramount stage in person Tuesday.

AT LOCAL THEATERS

AT THE PARAMOUNT—"Forsaking All Others" the most star-studded film since "Dinner at Eight," is now playing to capacity audiences at the Paramount theater.

With a cast as large and magnificent as the last year hit, the new picture is revolutionary in several respects. In the first place the cast is headed by three outstanding stars, Joan Crawford, Clark Gable and Robert Montgomery, who, while they have played in teams, have never before appeared together. Perfectly cast, they comprise what could be called the ace triangle of the year.

Secondly, the new picture has a verve and place not the slightest bit weighted or slowed down by the enormity of its cast. This is due to the brilliant direction of W. S. Van Dyke, who with this picture excels even his smash hit, "The Thin Man," and the excellent individual performances of each player.

As a light comedienne, Joan Crawford reveals a new side to her many admirers. She is par excellence as Mary, Parkavenue-ite who is left standing at the altar one minute and is pursued by two of New York's most dashing males the next.

We won't spoil the story by explaining who is the lucky and who the unlucky male in the end; suffice it to say that Clark Gable and Robert Montgomery both deserve her by merit of outstanding performances.

Billie Burke as the nervous society matron; Charles Butterworth (of the "dead pan") as Gable's closest friend; Frances Drake as the dark-haired siren, and Rosalind Russell as Eleanor, the girl friend, all turn in brilliant performances.

The modernized Victorian settings by Cedric Gibbons and E. B. Willis are the best you'll see this year.

AT THE CAPITOL—Joe Morrison, youthful tenor, who first introduced the song "The Last Round-up," plays his first leading role for the screen in the Paramount film, "One Hour Late," playing today only at the Capitol theater.

Morrison has been in but two films since he arrived in the film city. Although it is unusual for a newcomer to draw a leading role right off the bat, Paramount, who has Morrison under a long term contract, is giving him featured leads at once.

In addition to Morrison, the film features Helen Twelvetrees, Conrad Nagel, Arline Judge, Toby Wing, Edward Craven, Raymond Milland and Gail Patrick. The film was directed by Ralph Murphy.

Morrison is cast as a young clerk who wants to marry the girl of his dreams. But she puts him off while her boss, the victim of unrequited love, tries to find companionship; and his wife tries to find freedom.

Then, in one dramatic hour, the lives, the loves and the plans of these unusual people are changed completely. How this is brought about is entertainingly told in a dramatic finale.

Credit for the original story goes to Libby Block, while the screen play was written by Kathryn Scola and Paul Gerard Smith.

Kihlberg Baths Serve Monroe Region Patrons

One of Monroe's unique institutions is the Oscar Kihlberg Swedish Bath, 615 St. John street. Facilities similar to those of the great bath houses at Hot Springs are available to the people of the Monroe area. Operation of the Kihlberg baths is maintained at a standard that has attracted patrons from all sections of northeast Louisiana. Competent and courteous attendants are constantly on duty. Tuesday and Friday afternoons are reserved for ladies, who receive the personal attention of Mrs. Kihlberg, the manager.

77 Per Cent Of Local Farmers Given Checks

About 77 per cent of Ouachita parish farmers who have been due parity checks from the federal government have received their checks from the office of E. R. Strahan, parish agricultural agent, it was stated Saturday. Checks for the remaining 23 per cent of the farmers, about 200, are being held at the office and the farmers are expected to call for them within the next several days.

Second cotton rental checks for about 30 per cent of the parish cotton producers have not been received here, but are expected to arrive soon, it was stated.

MAN INJURED IN FREAK ACCIDENT

Arkansan Says Wind Pulled Him From Car As Door Was Opened

J. W. Taylor, 47, wholesale and retail grocer, of Hamburg, Ark., was admitted to the Clinic Saturday for treatment of injuries received Friday when he fell from the seat of a moving automobile on a highway near Beasley, Texas, about 40 miles from Houston, near the gulf coast.

Taylor said that the accident took place when he opened the door of the car several inches, to slam it shut, and was "pulled" from the car by a strong wind whipping across a prairie.

Believing that a rattle in the door was caused by the door not being securely locked, Taylor said he opened it several inches and that the wind instantly forced the door backwards and pulled him from the car before he could release his grasp of the door.

M. F. Taylor, also of Hamburg, nephew of the injured man, was driving the car at a rate of about 40 miles an hour, it was stated. He quickly stopped the car.

Continuing on to Houston, and receiving treatment there Friday night, Taylor resumed his journey towards Hamburg Saturday morning, but decided later in the day to stop at a hospital. He was being treated for an injury to his head and right eye and severe bruises on his hands and knees.

Taylor said that at Orange, Texas, where he and his nephew stopped at a filling station for gasoline, an attendant inquired as to how he came to receive his "black eye." When told of the accident, the attendant related that a similar accident had happened in that area recently, involving a man who was driving when he attempted to slam his car door shut. This man was severely injured and his car was badly damaged, Taylor said the attendant related.

Life insurance companies tell us that the gradual breakdown of the human body causes more deaths every year than disease germs

IF your physical let-down is caused by a lowered red-blood-cell and hemo-glo-bin content in the blood—then S.S.S. is waiting to help you... then, if you suspect an organic trouble, you will, of course, want to consult a physician or surgeon.

S.S.S. is not just a so-called tonic. It is a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also has the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemo-glo-bin of the blood.

This two-fold purpose is important. Digestion is improved... food is better utilized... and thus you are enabled to better "carry on" without exhaustion—as you should naturally.

You should feel and look years younger with life giving and purifying blood surging through your body. You owe this to yourself and friends.

Make S.S.S. your health safeguard and, unless your case is exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food... sound sleep... steady nerves... a good complexion... and renewed strength.

Perched on the top wing is shown Miss Jessie Martin getting ready for a brand new stunt that she is to attempt during the American Legion Flying Aces air circus at Selman field this afternoon. Miss Martin will stand on the top wing while the pilot puts the plane through several turns of a tailspin, a stunt that even Miss Martin has never attempted before. Miss Martin is known throughout the aviation world as one of its foremost women daredevils.

179 Persons Slated To Be Executed In United States

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

The gallows, the chair, the gas chamber and the firing squad—America's four horsemen of legal execution—have marked 179 persons for a macabre roundup.

Five who wear the brand of the condemned are women. Only the courts or executive clemency can save them now.

Mostly, the persons under death sentences are murderers. But not all. Eight are rapists. Five are kidnapers. One is an armed robber who took no money and killed no man.

Death sentences for kidnaping are an ougtrowth of public horror at the Lindbergh baby abduction. That crime of March 1, 1932, prompted the federal government and many states to fix for the first time a death penalty for kidnaping.

Walter McGee, desperately slapping at the noose a Kansas City jury ordered for him, was the first person to be sentenced to death for kidnaping. Though his crime—the kidnaping of Mary McElroy from her Kansas City home—was committed May 27, 1933, and he was arrested within a week, McGee's execution date has not been set.

An appeal in McGee's behalf was argued before the Missouri supreme court last week. His attorney referred to him as "an illiterate, ignorant farm hand" who received "the most unfair trial ever held in Missouri."

California has two men under death sentences for "kidnaping for the purpose of robbery." They are William E. Tanner and Harry C. Brooks, convicted of the abduction of a wealthy Los Angeles lawyer, Henry G. Bodkin.

Bodkin was tortured with lighted matches applied to his hands as Tanner and Brooks pressed him to tell where a large sum of money was hidden. No such cache existed, and they had to content themselves with $35 in cash and jewelry worth $2,000.

The kidnapers have appeals from their death sentences pending.

Florida's first death sentences under her new "Lindbergh law" named Millard Keith and Bonard Retherford. They kidnaped an old woman of Bonifay. For the $1.80 they finally got from her, they were sentenced to the chair.

The best known of the five women for whom the death penalty has been fixed, is Mrs. Eva Coo, the blond Oswego upstate New York roadhouse keeper whose resemblance to Ruth Snyder—who died in the electric chair—is so pronounced.

Eva Coo killed Harry Wright, a handy man, by striking him down with a mallet. Afterwards an automobile was "steamrollered" over Wright's form to make certain of his death. Mrs. Coo's appeal from the death sentence is set for hearing March 4.

The ascribed motive in the Coo case was the insurance money she intended to collect.

In the case of Illinois' condemned woman, Mrs. Gertrude Puhse, a 43-year-old mother of two children, the familiar "triangle" motive was given. Mrs. Puhse and a former Venice, Ill., policeman, Thomas J. Lehne, were sentenced to the chair for murdering Mrs. Puhse's husband, a steelworker. They are held at the Chester penitentiary pending the outcome of appeals.

Husband murder, not for freedom for a cold love as in the Illinois case but for her man's unfaithfulness, has placed Mrs. Nellie May Madison in the shadow of California's gallows. She killed Eric Madison, an auditor at a Hollywood film studio, because she believed he had transferred his love to another.

The other women under death sentences are a negro woman in West Virginia and Julia Moore, a Louisiana murderess.

Death is nearer the Moore woman than any of the others. Her death warrant, signed by Louisiana's governor O. K. Allen, fixes February 8 for the springing of the trap.

February 8 will be a "black Friday," with two triple hangings set for that date, and executions ordered also in California, Ohio and Alabama.

The Moore woman will be a principal in one of the "black Friday" triple hangings. She is booked to die with Cleve Cooper of Caddo parish (Shreveport) and Ed Dunn, for murder.

On the same day, in neighboring Mississippi, there is to be a triple hanging at DeKalb, in Kemper county. The three to die are Ed Brown, Yank Ellington and Henry Shields, negroes. They beat to death a farmer, Raymond Stewart, in his home.

On Friday of this week (February 1), Louisiana's best known prisoner must walk the last mile. He is Louis Kenneth Neu, the young night club singer and former seaman of Savannah, Ga., who murdered Sheffield Clark, a Nashville, Tenn., man, in September, 1933, in a New Orleans hotel room. Neu was arrested in New Jersey and confessed not only the Clark killing but also the slaying of a New Jersey man whom, like Clark, he robbed.

Neu's appeal for commutation to life imprisonment on a plea of insanity was recently denied.

Two others to die this week, also on Friday, are C. B. Dobbins, a Texas murderer now in the death house at Huntsville; and, at Folsom prison, in California, Harold P. Bieber.

On Wednesday, January 30, Ohio will avenge the murder of Mrs. Ruth Gilmore Steese, a Cleveland welfare worker who was abducted, robbed and slain, when it executes Peter Treadway. The condemned man, still insisting he is innocent, has lost all his appeals, including that to the governor for clemency. "The courts are in a better position to decide the case than I," said Governor Davey, denying the appeal.

The president of the United States and the chief justice have caused a delay in the execution of two death sentences.

President Roosevelt entered the case of Charles Harris, who was to have died in the District of Columbia's electric chair January 11 for the 1932 murder of "Milsie" Henry, a gambler. The president granted a 60-day reprieve pending an appeal.

Chief Justice Hughes took a precedent-setting action when, last January 4, he issued a stay of execution for 18-year-old Billy Prescott just a few hours before Prescott was to have been strapped to the chair to expiate a highway robbery murder.

The chief justice acted on the ground Prescott was rushed to trial five minutes after the appointment of a lawyer for him, in violation of the "due process of law" guarantee in the constitution.

Oklahoma's death row is the largest ever, with 16 tenants of whom four are negroes. Among the 16 is the only man in the United States under death sentence for an armed robbery in which no one was shot and no money taken. The man is Lloyd Grable, 37, with no previous crime record. He pleaded mistaken identity and has appealed.

There is irony in the case of James Hargus, a 24-year-old desperado of the "wild west" type, for whom June 14 is the designated death day. Hargus, who killed a Tulsa policeman, was saved for the chair after being critically wounded in a gunfight with officers. There is a .44 slug in his head. It passed through the brain from the right side, blinding an eye. One arm, torn by bullet wounds, has been amputated.

An argument over whether "knee action" improves an automobile put Robert Cargo, 20, in the Oklahoma death house. He settled the argument with a hatchet, killing an aged man, A. L. Luke.

Another Oklahoma condemned man who owes his life to the United States supreme court is Jess Hollins, called "The Friendless Negro." He was convicted for attacking a white girl. Word of his reprieve came as he knelt on his cell floor in prayer.

The Oklahoma penitentiary also holds one of the few Indians ever to be sentenced to death for murder. He carries the prosaic (for an Indian) name of John Williams. To other prisoners he is known as "Meat Head John." He is one of three persons convicted for a prison yard murder of another inmate.

Virginia's modest death row of two—a white man and a negro—was suddenly doubled last week when federal men in New York City captured Robert Mais and Walter Legenza, two men under sentence of death who had escaped.

Noah Newton, 37, the white man whose death date has been set for February 15, killed a former sweetheart "because she was meddlesome and jealous."

Alabama's list of five condemned men, all negroes, includes the names of Haywood Patterson and Clarence Norris, two of the "Scottsboro boys" whose death sentences are again being considered by the supreme court. They have been in jail four years for attacking a white woman on a freight train near Paint Rock, Ala.

By coincidence, two of New York's eight condemned prisoners were convicted of "insurance money" murders. Besides, Mrs. Coo, who sought to obtain insurance on her handyman, there is Alfred Giallarenzi, who is sentenced to die February 7 for plotting the death of Joseph Carlucci in Syracuse for Carlucci's insurance. The state charged he plotted with Carlucci's wife, and hired a third person to do the actual murder.

Massachusetts' quarter of condemned men includes the Millen brothers, Murton and Irving, and Abraham Faber, whose murder trial created much notice. They killed a policeman during a holdup. Norma Millen, daughter of a minister and wife of one of the brothers, was sentenced as an accessory to a short term.

Two of Iowa's five-who-are-to-be-hanged are wife killers.

Two Colorado men, Louis and John Pacheco, are banking on an appeal to save them from being victims No. 2 and 3 of the state's new lethal gas chamber. They were convicted of a "horror" murder predicated on a dispute over a calf.

The Colorado case involved the slaying of a chore boy, Bobby Griffin, and the way laying of Clifford Smith, a rancher, and Smith's wife. Smith was slain. His wife attempted to flee but was caught in a barbed wire fence. The killers seized her, dragged her to the ranch house, tossed her across the bodies of her husband and the chore boy, and set fire to the house.

Mrs. Smith, regaining consciousness, beat out the flames and staggered two miles to a neighbor's house.

Utah's sole death house occupant has been in the shadow of society's vengeance for five years. He is Delbert Green, who slew his uncle, his young wife and his mother-in-law. A child lying between the two women as Green slew them, was unhurt.

Appeals have twice saved Green from the firing squad, the form of death he elected.

Among Arkansas' five death house occupants is Mark H. Shank, the Akron, Ohio, attorney, charged with the poison murders of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Colley and two Colley children.

Pair At 89 Dispute 'Oldest Twins' Title

CATAWISSA, Pa., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Judge J. T. Fox, retired dentist, of this town, has come out to dispute the claim of A. T. McCarger, of Burbank, Cal., and A. L. McCarger, of Whittier, Cal., of being the "oldest twins in the United States."

Judge Fox points out that he and his twin brother, John C. Fox, of Hailey, Idaho, were born July 2, 1846, and are therefore nearing 89 years old. The McCargers were reported to be 84.

WORK ON BRIDGE GOES AHEAD FAST

Steel Work And Highway Construction Are Expected Soon

Prospects that the new bridge across the Ouachita river here and the sections of highway leading from each end of it may be ready for use by mid-summer were seen Saturday, as a result of several developments which have occurred within the last few days.

One of these developments was the awarding of the contract for paving Louisville avenue and the Louisville extension to connect with the Dixie-Overland highway near Northeast Center of Louisiana State university. Another was the announcement that Vincinnes Bridge company, contractor for the steel work on the bridge, would be ready to begin placing steel by March 1.

Good progress has been made by Central Construction company in the concrete work on the bridge since work was started several weeks ago. Most of the time the weather has been good and progress was unhampered. The first four days of this week the weather was bad and the work was slowed down considerably, but by Friday the weather had improved sufficiently so that work was again going forward with a full force.

Meyer Greenwald, president of Central Construction company, said his firm could complete its contract within three more months of good working weather. About four months probably will be required for the Vincinnes company to place the steel.

JUDGE SCHULZE ILL

Judge Charles Schulze, superintendent at Louisiana Training institute, who has been quite ill with influenza, was reported Saturday to be somewhat improved, but still unable to see friends. His physician said it probably would be five or six days before he would be able to receive visitors.

PRESIDENT SIGNS NRA CODE ORDER

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Full retention of constitutional rights for all past and future signers of NRA codes was disclosed today to have been assured by President Roosevelt in an executive order, signed early this week but not announced publicly.

The order, actually a modification of the terms of approval whereby the chief executive gave force to all prevailing codes said:

"It is understood that neither the government nor any member of industry waives, or can properly insist that the other has waived, any constitutional right pertaining to the government or to any individual by approving, assenting to, or cooperating under a code of fair competition."

Thus the chief executive acted to clarify a confused situation resulting from the fact that some codes contained a clause specifically asserting no waiver of such rights was involved while other did not. Some signers of the latter codes are understood to have been perturbed by this circumstance.

Mr. Roosevelt's view, repeatedly stated, has been that under no interpretation could a code signer be held to have foregone any constitutional right by the act of assenting to the code, that the constitution, of course, took precedence over any such instrument.

However, some business organizations, including the National Association of Manufacturers, have maintained this was not implicit. They said that in case of a conflict between code and constitution, the courts might easily hold that the signer had specifically waived the rights conferred upon him by the latter.

ABE BLUMENTHAL RETURNS TO CITY

Manager Of Fields' Is Back After Buying Trip Through East

Abe Blumenthal, manager of Field's Woman's shop on DeSiard street, has returned to Monroe after an extended buying trip to eastern markets. He had been absent from the city for three weeks, during which time he visited the fashion centers of New York, Chicago and other cities.

The Field's organization said Mr. Blumenthal has buying connections in the east that supply thousands of retail stores throughout the United States, thus enabling the store here to offer exclusive styles in dresses, coats, suits and millinery at savings that could not be accomplished otherwise.

Mr. Blumenthal reported a new and greater variety of spring wearing apparel than ever before.

"The trends this spring," he said, "show dresses in the new prints, capes, pastels and jackets. The new dresses are bright and sparkling and put a new glow in the wearer's eyes. They are in smart silks and acetate and in floral, geometrics and dotted designs. Backgrounds are light and dark. It is also going to a 'sportsy.' Spring suits of sport design will be the season's most important fashion.

"We are presenting a wide style chioce. The coats are tailored with a care given to men's suits and are lined with materials that are durable. Beige, navy, brown, checks, plaids and mixtures are the outstanding colors.

"Every garment in our store has been received recently," said Mr. Blumenthal. We were completely sold out of fall and winter merchandise around the first of the year, which made it imperative to do our spring buying. It also assures our patrons of the latest spring styles.

MONROE CHOSEN FOR NEW STORE

Announcement has been made that Monroe has been selected as the site of a store which has been extremely popular in the larger cities of the country.

The new store will be known as the Hollywood Cotton Shoppe, the idea for which originated in the film capital. It will be located at 147 DeSiard street, in the space formerly occupied by the thrift shop on the ground floor of the Bernhardt building.

Elaborate fixtures will be installed and it is promised that the store will be one of the most attractive in the city. It will feature a full and complete line of women's, misses' and children's sports and cotton goods wearing apparel.

The store has been refinished inside and outside and a mezzanine floor has been added. The owners promise it will be a spring fairyland at the opening.

Announcement of the formal opening will be made within the next few days.

Series Of Nutrition Meetings Is Planned

A series of nutrition meetings among the home demonstration clubs of Ouachita parish will begin next week, Mrs. Jewel L. McQuiller, parish home demonstration agent, announced yesterday. Six meeting dates have been posted and three of them will be for negro groups.

The meetings will be held as follows: For whites, West Monroe, Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, place yet to be designated; Lida Benton school, Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock; Cypress church, Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. For negroes, colored school at Ninth and Twelfth streets, tomorrow at 1:30 p. m.; negro high school, February 4, at 2 p. m.; and Fairbanks, February 5, at 2 p. m.

The first casaba melons grown in the United States were produced from seeds imported from Kassabah, in Asia Minor, to California in 1878.

COMES TO PARAMOUNT TUESDAY

Miss Mildred Mandre, the young lady that is charming, pleasant and pretty who is one of the feature entertainers with the N. B. C. radio orchestra, "The Clicquot Eskimos," who come to the Paramount theater for a one-day engagement on Tuesday, January 29, as an added attraction with the feature picture, "Gentlemen Are Born," which features Franchot Tone, Jean Muir, Margaret Lindsay, Ann Dvorak and many others. This famous radio orchestra and entertainers will appear on the Paramount stage in person Tuesday.

AT LOCAL THEATERS

With a cast as large and magnificent as the last year hit, the new picture is revolutionary in several respects. In the first place the cast is headed by three outstanding stars, Joan Crawford, Clark Gable and Robert Montgomery, who, while they have played in teams, have never before appeared together. Perfectly cast, they comprise what could be called the ace triangle of the year.

Secondly, the new picture has a verve and place not the slightest bit weighted or slowed down by the enormity of its cast. This is due to the brilliant direction of W. S. Van Dyke, who with this picture excels even his smash hit, "The Thin Man," and the excellent individual performances of each player.

As a light comedienne, Joan Crawford reveals a new side to her many admirers. She is par excellence as Mary, Parkavenue-ite who is left standing at the altar one minute and is pursued by two of New York's most dashing males the next.

We won't spoil the story by explaining who is the lucky and who the unlucky male in the end; suffice it to say that Clark Gable and Robert Montgomery both deserve her by merit of outstanding performances.

Billie Burke as the nervous society matron; Charles Butterworth (of the "dead pan") as Gable's closest friend; Frances Drake as the dark-haired siren, and Rosalind Russell as Eleanor, the girl friend, all turn in brilliant performances.

The modernized Victorian settings by Cedric Gibbons and E. B. Willis are the best you'll see this year.

AT THE CAPITOL—Joe Morrison, youthful tenor, who first introduced the song "The Last Round-up," plays his first leading role for the screen in the Paramount film, "One Hour Late," playing today only at the Capitol theater.

Morrison has been in but two films since he arrived in the film city. Although it is unusual for a newcomer to draw a leading role right off the bat, Paramount, who has Morrison under a long term contract, is giving him featured leads at once.

Morrison is cast as a young clerk who wants to marry the girl of his dreams. But she puts him off while her boss, the victim of unrequited love, tries to find companionship; and his wife tries to find freedom.

Then, in one dramatic hour, the lives, the loves and the plans of these unusual people are changed completely. How this is brought about is entertainingly told in a dramatic finale.

Kihlberg Baths Serve Monroe Region Patrons

One of Monroe's unique institutions is the Oscar Kihlberg Swedish Bath, 615 St. John street. Facilities similar to those of the great bath houses at Hot Springs are available to the people of the Monroe area. Operation of the Kihlberg baths is maintained at a standard that has attracted patrons from all sections of northeast Louisiana. Competent and courteous attendants are constantly on duty. Tuesday and Friday afternoons are reserved for ladies, who receive the personal attention of Mrs. Kihlberg, the manager.

77 Per Cent Of Local Farmers Given Checks

About 77 per cent of Ouachita parish farmers who have been due parity checks from the federal government have received their checks from the office of E. R. Strahan, parish agricultural agent, it was stated Saturday. Checks for the remaining 23 per cent of the farmers, about 200, are being held at the office and the farmers are expected to call for them within the next several days.

Second cotton rental checks for about 30 per cent of the parish cotton producers have not been received here, but are expected to arrive soon, it was stated.

BATTLE AVERTED AT BATON ROUGE

Dubroca of West Baton Rouge parish, branded as "falsehoods" charges given in testimony today before an open court hearing Long held that they conspired to assassinate the dictator on the road between Baton Rouge and New Orleans one night this week.

The testimony was given by Sidney Songy, whose arrest Thursday night was assigned as a reason for the flare-up of anti-Longs who temporarily seized the parish courthouse last night with guns.

Spokesmen at the courthouse affair declared they shouldered guns in the belief that officers were seeking to effect the arrest of about 80 members of the Square Deal association.

Sheriff Sherburne's statement declared:

"There is not a word of truth in what Sidney Songy said in Long's hearing in Baton Rouge concerning myself. Songy is a man without character and few, if any, would believe his statement under oath. Sidney Songy is a deliberate falsifier."

Ahead of the conflict at the airport a squad of guardsmen raided the headquarters of the Square Deal association and searched the offices, but made no arrests.

Ernest Bourgeois, president of the Square Deal association, issued a statement today in which he declared that the association as an organization was not responsible for the crisis.

"The Square Deal is going on legally and properly and will act when it knows itself ready and the hour is ripe," Bourgeois' statement declared.

Senator Long planned to leave tonight for Washington, he said, leaving behind him an order under martial law prohibiting any publication "tending to influence the public mind against the state of Louisiana or its officers."

THREE MEN DENY ASSASSINATION CHARGE

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Three of the principal public officials named by Senator Huey P. Long today as "conspirators" who planned his death tonight denied complicity in the alleged plot.

District Attorney John Fred Odom, of East Baton Rouge parish, called the charge that he participated in a conspiracy to kill Long, testified in a court proceeding ordered by the dictator of Louisiana into the reputed conspiracy, "absurd, ridiculous and untrue."

Two sheriffs, Sidney Dubroca of West Baton Rouge, and H. N. Sherburne of Iberville, likewise denied complicity in the supposed plot.

Odom statement follows:

"I left the city early this morning and upon my return this evening find that a subpoena was issued during the forenoon for my appearance as a witness at a public hearing held at the capital this morning.

"I knew nothing of the contemplated hearing before my departure and nothing consequently of my appearance being desired there, otherwise I would have appeared.

"I am ready and willing to appear as a witness at said hearing and have already so informed Attorney-General Porterie.

"I note from newspaper reports of the statements taken at said hearing that my name has been mentioned as one of the persons who has conspired for the assassination of Senator Long.

HUEY HURRIES TO NEW ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Senator Huey P. Long, who gave Baton Rouge one of its most eventful days in history today, was closeted with aides in his palatial suite in a New Orleans hotel tonight. He said he expected to leave for Washington before morning.

Asked about the near-clash of his militiamen and armed citizens at the Baton Rouge airport this afternoon, Long said: "What battle?"

Senator Long checked out of his Baton Rouge hotel late in the afternoon, presumably about the time the tension was highest at the airfield, and motored to New Orleans under heavy guard.

After arriving here he spent some time in a conference at which it was said affairs of the State university were discussed.

BAN IS PLACED ON PUBLICATIONS

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Any publication "tending to influence the public against the state of Louisiana or its officers" is prevented in East Baton Rouge parish military district under the terms of a general order issued today by Brigadier General Louis F. Guerre, who is in charge of the military district.

The order prohibited the sale or possession of fire arms or ammunition and prevented the carrying of arms except by the "uniformed police force of the city of Baton Rouge and officers certified by the bureau of criminal identification."

SHREVEPORT TROOPS LEAVE FOR CAPITAL

SHREVEPORT, La., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Shreveport's company of the national guard, company E, 156th infantry, entrained at 10:55 p. m. for Baton Rouge on the regular Texas and Pacific night passenger train. There were 45 men in the group which carried full campaign equipment.

It was the second excursion of the Shreveport guardsmen into the south Louisiana "war" area. On September 6 last, the Shreveport company was among the companies mobilized for guard duty in New Orleans, prior to the city election there.

YOU HAVE HEARD of the new, mysterious "heavy water," latest wonder of science. In this water, only recently discovered, the hydrogen atoms, twice as heavy as in ordinary water, were thought to be a deadly poison. But, in Norway, where twelve hundred men are engaged scientifically extracting a small amount of the water, at great cost, Professor Klaus Hansen drank three ounces of pure "heavy water" and survived. Heavy water is said to be the only poison that would leave absolutely no trace, if used to commit murder. Half a pint of it would destroy life, although immunity might be built up, slowly.

the sheriff's department and detained at the courthouse until his bond, in the amount of $1,000, was set by Judge David I. Garrett. Twenty persons signed the bond. Their assets represented about $100,000, it was stated. Benson was charged with shooting with intent to kill.

Benson declined to comment upon the shooting, other than to issue a statement through his attorney that he sincerely regretted the affair, and that he shot in self defense.

The wages which Wilhite sought to collect from Benson were for work Wilhite had performed at a mill near Collinston, it was stated by W. C. Wilhite, father of the wounded man. Until the previous Saturday, the elder Wilhite and Benson had been partners in the mill, the former said. The partnership was dissolved on that day, it was stated.

Benson had sold some lumber from the mill and collected the money, but had not paid off the mill workers, it was said.

Although Benson made no statement himself, it was reported that he told Wilhite when the latter approached him on the street that he was not responsible for wages due him.

A. M. Honeycutt, one of the men who worked under young Wilhite at the mill, said he was with Wilhite, standing on the sidewalk outside Benson's office, when the latter came out on the street. Benson cursed during the words that passed between him and Wilhite, and when Benson started walking away Wilhite struck him, according to Honeycutt.

Immediately following the shooting, several other persons who were witnesses and who related to groups of the crowd which gathered at the scene the details of the shooting, were interviewed, but declined to speak for publication.

CHARLIE BRUSCATO INJURED IN CRASH

Charlie Bruscato, local wrestling promoter, received painful leg bruises Saturday night when the car in which he was riding was in a collision with another automobile at the intersection of Washington and North Fifth streets. He was carried in an ambulance to the Clinic, and was released after receiving treatment.

The Bruscato car turned over three times after the collision, it was stated by Nick Bruscato, brother of the promoter. Nick Bruscato and Gene Bruscato, another brother, were passengers in the car, but were unhurt, it was stated.

E. W. Stewart, cashier of the Jonesboro State bank, was the driver of the other car in the accident.

In reports to police, each driver said he was driving "on" the green light. Each driver also stated that his car was struck by the car of the other. Stewart said he had held his car at the intersection until the green light flashed, before entering the intersection.

Both drivers were booked on technical chargs of reckless driving.

All United States Towns In Network Of Highways

NEW YORK, Jan. 26. — (AP) — The shining network of highways that has been spreading itself across the United States for the past quarter of a century brought all the towns in the country within the reach of its filaments with the close of 1934.

In reviewing the end of the building program of last year, the Automobile Manufacturers' association stated that: "There is no longer any town in the United States without at least one improved highway."

The association reported further that within the past 12 months 40,000 miles of roads have been built or improved by state highway departments operating in conjunction with federal agencies.

A co-operative curb market established in Durham, N. C., by 273 farm women of the surrounding countryside sold $2,268 worth of farm products the first week.

CLEAR DAY SEEN FOR AIR CIRCUS

Thousands Are Expected To Attend Aerial Show Here Today

Clear skies and balmy weather were indicated Saturday for the air circus to be staged this afternoon by the famous Flying Aces at Selman airport. Thousands of persons are expected to see the circus, which was postponed from last Sunday because of inclement weather. The event is being sponsored by the American Legion and Forty and Eight.

In addition to the 15 events that were scheduled to be staged during last Sunday's show, two new acts have been added to the two-hour program. In one of them Duke Widiger, movie stunt man of Hollywood, who will arrive in Monroe this morning, will thrill with his famous "death-drag" in which he gets on a rope ladder tied between the wheels of a plane several hundred feet high. The act is concluded with the pilot landing the plane dragging Widiger on the ground beneath the fuselage, a stunt that no other living person has ever attempted, it is claimed. Widiger does not wear any protection of any kind while performing this death-defying stunt, Flying Aces officials said.

In another added stunt P. H. Cunningham will ride a speeding motorcycle through a solid-inch, blazing board wall staked down on the airport in front of the spectators. This stunt was so well received here a year ago that it was decided to repeat it during the show here today.

Other acts include a 10,000 foot delayed parachute drop, stunting exhibitions, sky-writing, a demonstration of aerial warfare, wing-walking exhibitions by Miss Dorthea Aiken, tailspinning a plane with Miss Jessie Martin standing on the top wing, upside down flying, out-side loops, the bombing of a new automobile from the air and many other thrillers.

The show is scheduled to start promptly at 2:30 and legion officials urge that everyone start early to avoid the last-minute rush.

KINGFISH LEAVES FOR WASHINGTON

ter. Three minutes later Mrs. Long and Rose drove up in another car and with Senator Long boarded the limited.

Shortly before the train pulled out, two militiamen boarded the car directly behind that occupied by Long and were not seen to leave before the train departed.

Uniformed officers moved through the small crowd of curious spectators who eagerly followed every movement of the senator, but who were kept at a good distance.

Kreeger claimed he was assaulted in the hotel lobby as he approached Long and asked about his plans to leave New Orleans.

"Get out of my way," the reporter quoted Long as saying. "I don't want to answer any questions.

Kreeger said he retired several paces and that a bodyguard began pushing him back into the crowd. He said the man punched him and he slipped to the floor.

He said as he started to get to his feet another Long bodyguard grabbed him and began leading him from the lobby. Kreeger said before they reached the door the man jerked him into a small room and struck him in the head.

The reporter said he demanded the man's authority and asked what offense he had committed. He said the man replied that "city police got you," and exhibited a detective badge.

but that it was not permitted under the law. Other judges in this court district on previous occasions are said to have held contrary opinions.

The case is being taken to the supreme court for the purpose of making a test, as some of the school authorities desire to know the supreme court's view on the matter. Judge Garrett said the case had aroused considerable interest among school officials, not only in this parish, but in several other parishes, and that he had received a number of inquiries from outside parishes.

It was said that the state law does not specifically prohibit corporal punishment, but that it provides that pupils may be expelled if their conduct is so bad that teachers are unable to control them. Judge Garrett takes the position that since the law provides for expulsion and does not provide for corporal punishment that it did not intend to allow corporal punishment.

COLDWATER FLOOD ROLLS EASTWARD

Marks tonight resulted in an acute housing problem. With only 60 mattresses available, a specific task of the Red Cross was to prepare beds for 800 persons.

The dead from floods in Tennessee, where waters have receded for the most part, in Arkansas, and in Mississippi number at least 27, mostly victims of the Coldwater river basin flood in this section, and the homeless, marooned and suffering number about 25,000.

Like a little island is the vast lake covering portions of four Mississippi counties with floodwaters of the Coldwater river that went on a rampage north of here Sunday night. Marks offered a haven for the hundreds who were driven from their homes as far north as Darling and Sledge, about 15 miles from here. Hourly, the number of refugees was increased by boatloads. The Red Cross is giving them stew, pork and beans and coffee.

Practically every boatload has three or four children and a mother with a baby swaddled in the best wrappings that could be snatched from the greedy waters.

Negro Is Drowned In Bayou Saturday

Andrew Walker, negro, about 59 years of age, drowned in Bayou DeSiard at Lamkin late Saturday when the boat in which he was crossing the stream capsized. His body was recovered by city firemen at 8:10 p.m., after a 45-minute search for his body.

Dr. R. W. O'Donnell, assistant coroner, and Sheriff Milton Coverdale investigated the drowning.

The sheriff said Walker was crossing the bayou with another negro, G. Phillips, in a boat which had no "ends." The Walker negro was said to have been intoxicated and unable to swim to safety when water entered the boat and it capsized. Phillips made his way to the bank.

'Possum Invades Kitchen And Lands On The Menu

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 26.—(AP)—In preference to all the woodlands surrounding Birmingham, an opossum bent on going places chose to wander into the kitchen of H. P. Boles' cafe—and so ended his journeying forever.

The cooks and dishwashers didn't know whether they were gazing on a big rat or whatnot when the creature ambled into the itchen just as though he belonged there.

Boles, not so dumbfounded as the help, seized the invader—and that night there was 'posum on the menu.

BATTLE AVERTED AT BATON ROUGE

Dubroca of West Baton Rouge parish, branded as "falsehoods" charges given in testimony today before an open court hearing Long held that they conspired to assassinate the dictator on the road between Baton Rouge and New Orleans one night this week.

The testimony was given by Sidney Songy, whose arrest Thursday night was assigned as a reason for the flare-up of anti-Longs who temporarily seized the parish courthouse last night with guns.

Spokesmen at the courthouse affair declared they shouldered guns in the belief that officers were seeking to effect the arrest of about 80 members of the Square Deal association.

Sheriff Sherburne's statement declared:

"There is not a word of truth in what Sidney Songy said in Long's hearing in Baton Rouge concerning myself. Songy is a man without character and few, if any, would believe his statement under oath. Sidney Songy is a deliberate falsifier."

Ahead of the conflict at the airport a squad of guardsmen raided the headquarters of the Square Deal association and searched the offices, but made no arrests.

Ernest Bourgeois, president of the Square Deal association, issued a statement today in which he declared that the association as an organization was not responsible for the crisis.

"The Square Deal is going on legally and properly and will act when it knows itself ready and the hour is ripe," Bourgeois' statement declared.

Senator Long planned to leave tonight for Washington, he said, leaving behind him an order under martial law prohibiting any publication "tending to influence the public mind against the state of Louisiana or its officers."

THREE MEN DENY ASSASSINATION CHARGE

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Three of the principal public officials named by Senator Huey P. Long today as "conspirators" who planned his death tonight denied complicity in the alleged plot.

District Attorney John Fred Odom, of East Baton Rouge parish, called the charge that he participated in a conspiracy to kill Long, testified in a court proceeding ordered by the dictator of Louisiana into the reputed conspiracy, "absurd, ridiculous and untrue."

Two sheriffs, Sidney Dubroca of West Baton Rouge, and H. N. Sherburne of Iberville, likewise denied complicity in the supposed plot.

Odom statement follows:

"I left the city early this morning and upon my return this evening find that a subpoena was issued during the forenoon for my appearance as a witness at a public hearing held at the capital this morning.

"I knew nothing of the contemplated hearing before my departure and nothing consequently of my appearance being desired there, otherwise I would have appeared.

"I am ready and willing to appear as a witness at said hearing and have already so informed Attorney-General Porterie.

"I note from newspaper reports of the statements taken at said hearing that my name has been mentioned as one of the persons who has conspired for the assassination of Senator Long.

CLEAR DAY SEEN FOR AIR CIRCUS

Thousands Are Expected To Attend Aerial Show Here Today

Clear skies and balmy weather were indicated Saturday for the air circus to be staged this afternoon by the famous Flying Aces at Selman airport. Thousands of persons are expected to see the circus, which was postponed from last Sunday because of inclement weather. The event is being sponsored by the American Legion and Forty and Eight.

In addition to the 15 events that were scheduled to be staged during last Sunday's show, two new acts have been added to the two-hour program. In one of them Duke Widiger, movie stunt man of Hollywood, who will arrive in Monroe this morning, will thrill with his famous "death-drag" in which he gets on a rope ladder tied between the wheels of a plane several hundred feet high. The act is concluded with the pilot landing the plane dragging Widiger on the ground beneath the fuselage, a stunt that no other living person has ever attempted, it is claimed. Widiger does not wear any protection of any kind while performing this death-defying stunt, Flying Aces officials said.

In another added stunt P. H. Cunningham will ride a speeding motorcycle through a solid-inch, blazing board wall staked down on the airport in front of the spectators. This stunt was so well received here a year ago that it was decided to repeat it during the show here today.

Other acts include a 10,000 foot delayed parachute drop, stunting exhibitions, sky-writing, a demonstration of aerial warfare, wing-walking exhibitions by Miss Dorthea Aiken, tail-spinning a plane with Miss Jessie Martin standing on the top wing, upside down flying, out-side loops, the bombing of a new automobile from the air and many other thrillers.

The show is scheduled to start promptly at 2:30 and legion officials urge that everyone start early to avoid the last-minute rush.

KINGFISH LEAVES FOR WASHINGTON

ter. Three minutes later Mrs. Long and Rose drove up in another car and with Senator Long boarded the limited.

Shortly before the train pulled out, two militiamen boarded the car directly behind that occupied by Long and were not seen to leave before the train departed.

Uniformed officers moved through the small crowd of curious spectators who eagerly followed every movement of the senator, but who were kept at a good distance.

Kreeger claimed he was assaulted in the hotel lobby as he approached Long and asked about his plans to leave New Orleans.

"Get out of my way," the reporter quoted Long as saying. "I don't want to answer any questions.

Kreeger said he retired several paces and that a bodyguard began pushing him back into the crowd. He said the man punched him and he slipped to the floor.

He said as he started to get to his feet another Long bodyguard grabbed him and began leading him from the lobby. Kreeger said before they reached the door the man jerked him into a small room and struck him in the head.

The reporter said he demanded the man's authority and asked what offense he had committed. He said the man replied that "city police got you," and exhibited a detective badge.

STEELEY RITES

CLARKS, La., Jan. 26.—(Special)—Donna Louise Steeley, 3, died at 11:40 on Friday morning of pneumonia following an illness of several days. Funeral services were held on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Clarks Baptist church, with the Rev. Paul Jones, pastor, in charge of the services. Interment was made in Old Bethel cemetery, one mile west of Clarks.

Surviving are the parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Steeley, a brother, J. E., and two sisters, Lois McCree Steeley and Wanda Anne Steeley.

Because of unusually good weather, gold mining dredges in the vicinity of Bear Creek, Alaska, were able to operate 211 days in 1934, the longest period on record.

but that it was not permitted under the law. Other judges in this court district on previous occasions are said to have held contrary opinions.

The case is being taken to the supreme court for the purpose of making a test, as some of the school authorities desire to know the supreme court's view on the matter. Judge Garrett said the case had aroused considerable interest among school officials, not only in this parish, but in several other parishes, and that he had received a number of inquiries from outside parishes.

It was said that the state law does not specifically prohibit corporal punishment, but that it provides that pupils may be expelled if their conduct is so bad that teachers are unable to control them. Judge Garrett takes the position that since the law provides for expulsion and does not provide for corporal punishment that it did not intend to allow corporal punishment.

Marks tonight resulted in an acute housing problem. With only 60 mattresses available, a specific task of the Red Cross was to prepare beds for 800 persons.

The dead from floods in Tennessee, where waters have receded for the most part, in Arkansas, and in Mississippi number at least 27, mostly victims of the Coldwater river basin flood in this section, and the homeless, marooned and suffering number about 25,000.

Like a little island is the vast lake covering portions of four Mississippi counties with floodwaters of the Coldwater river that went on a rampage north of here Sunday night. Marks offered a haven for the hundreds who were driven from their homes as far north as Darling and Sledge, about 15 miles from here. Hourly, the number of refugees was increased by boatloads. The Red Cross is giving them stew, pork and beans and coffee.

Practically every boatload has three or four children and a mother with a baby swaddled in the best wrappings that could be snatched from the greedy waters.

Negro Is Drowned In Bayou Saturday

Andrew Walker, negro, about 59 years of age, drowned in Bayou DeSiard at Lamkin late Saturday when the boat in which he was crossing the stream capsized. His body was recovered by city firemen at 8:10 p.m., after a 45-minute search for his body.

Dr. R. W. O'Donnell, assistant coroner, and Sheriff Milton Coverdale investigated the drowning.

The sheriff said Walker was crossing the bayou with another negro, G. Phillips, in a boat which had no "ends." The Walker negro was said to have been intoxicated and unable to swim to safety when water entered the boat and it capsized. Phillips made his way to the bank.

'Possum Invades Kitchen And Lands On The Menu

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 26.—(AP)—In preference to all the woodlands surrounding Birmingham, an opossum bent on going places chose to wander into the kitchen of H. P. Boles' cafe—and so ended his journeying forever.

The cooks and dishwashers didn't know whether they were gazing on a big rat or whatnot when the creature ambled into the itchen just as though he belonged there.

Boles, not so dumbfounded as the help, seized the invader—and that night there was 'posum on the menu.

Game authorities estimate there are 15,000,000 sportsmen in the United States who spend $750,000,000 annually in hunting and fishing.

BY EVE BRADFORD

GOOD MORNING! Of course you feel purified by contact with the snow that drifted in upon us last week . . . The rustic calm that prevailed for several days was broken only by the swish, swish of flapping galoshes on every pair of feet . . . Fortunate indeed were those who could wiggle into a fur coat and brave the wintry blasts without fear of shaking limbs . . . We shed a gentle tear for those unfortunates who actually suffered as a result of the unprecedented snowstorm that heaped the highways and byways with a silence deep and white . . . Poets can write of the "beautiful snow," but they can never again inspire us with their verse . . . we have had sufficient to last us to the end of time. . . . We cherish memories of winter weather in the far north where the crisp, clear air makes the blood tingle but in the southland where the heavy cold air strikes to the marrow, memories of snow storms will always be accompanied by thoughts of the misery and privation suffered by so many families. . . . A study in contrasts last week was Patty Miller, bundled to the ears, standing on the door step of a friend with arms filled with narcissi. . . . Giving heed to the weather man's warning she plucked every spring blossom in her yard and divided them with friends. . . . The host of golden daffodils were cut down and the violets born to adorn the breast of beautiful women, suffered an ignominious death. . . . Many flower lovers in the city were just one leap ahead of that unwelcome guest, Jack Frost, and plucked every flower that lifted its despairing head to the winter sky. . . . Many there are who will wiggle out of fur coats and galoshes into fluffy chiffons and gleaming satins, Wednesday night when the orchestra tunes up for the president's birthday ball at the Virginia. . . . Tot Ellis is certainly doing everything in her power to make the president's ball a success . . . she has even commandered a small army of Boy Scouts who seem quite enthusiastic over taking orders from such a good looking captain. . . . Pas de trois is the watchward in Mrs. Harry Rice's studio where she and her dancing partner James Cavaness are practicing daily, the "Continental" for the dance revue next month. . . . James could be seen at every performance keenly watching every step taken by Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire who launched the "Continental" in their recent picture shown at the Paramount. Local audiences will enjoy Mrs. Rice's and Mr. Cavaness' interpretation to a greater extent as they will inject much of their own personalities into the dance. . . . The seventeenth century gave us music of the heart—the eighteenth gave us music of the soul—the ninteenth gave us music of the head and in our epoch, music has mostly been written for the feet. . . . It is now time for us to return to music of the heart as everything goes in cycles . . . a program of "heart" music will be rendered by Dalies Frantz, celebrated musician and virtuoso who comes to us on the fifth of February. . . . We have not seen the program but we feel sure he will include Bach, Beethoven and Brahms. . . . The profound music of these masters always goes straight to the heart and we hear that Mr. Frantz prefers them to all others. . . . Apropos of entertainment, Blanche Oliver the incomparable, is now deep in the mystery of "Whistling in the Dark," an ultra modern play to be presented by the Little Theater next month . . . rehearsals are now going on nightly but the members of the cast are having such a good time they have not yet settled down to hard work. . . . Blanche will "whip" them into shape this week however and when she does every vestige of comedy disappears and she assumes the role of the grim faced director . . . diminutive Mary Benita Allen will be the feminine lead with that good looking Frank Breece in the role of male lead. . . . All kinds of exciting things happened last week when the first big snow in twenty years made sledding possible. . . . Maud Stubbs and her son Barry were seen sliding down the levee near their home on Riverside. . . . Tom Sandridge built his son an honest-to-goodness sleigh and packed it with youngsters who got the thrill of their young lives flying over the icy pavement. . . . Guests on board the "Brown-Kraft" were to be envied as they were enabled to feast their eyes upon the snow lying deep in the woods along the river bank, unmarred by human footprints and traffic. . . . A few homes in Monroe still boast of open fire places and none is more cheery than the one in the living room of the Guy Stubbs home. . . . Suzonne Sperry and her bridal attendants whispered secrets only a sparkling wood fire can draw forth, yesterday when India and Frances Huey grouped comfortable chairs around the leaping flames and guests, snug as sardines, sipped tea and helped themselves frequently to the toothsome tidbits placed near at hand. . . . We can not say goodbye without arousing your curiosity over a romantic engagement not yet announced . . . the wedding in March will take the lovely bride elsewhere to live. . . . Our orchids today go to Lucyle Smith, Margaret Poag and Minnie Cole who claimed honors at Whitworth college recently.

In the pictures today we have Mrs. Clyde Brown, lovely member of the younger married set, and active in Junior league circles who, with Mr. Brown, is enjoying a Caribbean sea cruise visiting Havana enroute. (Left). Portrait by Bachrach.

Miss Elizabeth Carr, beautiful daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Carr, who arrived in the city last week from New York city, where she is a student at the New York school of fine and applied arts, to attend the Sperry-Kellogg nuptials on the seventh of February. Miss Carr is dividing her time between Miss Sperry and her parents at their ancestral home near Collinston. (Center). Portrait by Held.

Miss Sara Florence Coon, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Coon of this city, who was counted among the college set, home from the University of Texas for the holidays. Miss Coon is a member of Alpha Delta Pi sorority. (Lower right).

Much Pomp And Ceremony Will Attend Prominent Nuptial Event Early In February

The interest of society is centered in a prominent nuptial event claiming in marriage a popular member of the younger set, Miss Suzonne Sperry and a prominent young bachelor, Mr. Walter Kellogg.

The event is surrounded with considerable sentiment due to the fact that the children whose mothers took a prominent part in the marriage of the bride's mother in this city will be a part of the wedding pageant. Girlhood friends of Mrs. Sperry's are also entertaining with pre-nuptial affairs and assisting in the decorating of Grace church for the wedding.

Much pomp and ceremony will accompany the nuptial service to be performed at six thirty o'clock in the evening with Reverend Hayward, rector of Grace church, officiating.

A vested choir will walk down the white carpeted aisle singing in unison the bridal chorus. Miss Ruth Metcalf of Greenville, Miss., who received her musical education abroad, will be the soloist.

Miss Sperry has chosen her classmate at Arlington Hall, Washington, D. C., Miss Sara Snipes, of Raleigh, N. C., her maid of honor and her four bridesmaids, life-long friends, will be Miss Sue Graves, Miss Anna Laurie Smith, Miss Jean Dryburgh and Miss Violet Meyer. The flower girls, Rhoda Kellogg and Betty Kellogg are nieces of the bride-groom. The ring-bearer will be Marguerite Lamkin. Mr. Burt Sperry will give his sister in marriage.

Mr. Kellogg has selected his brother, Mr. Richard Kellogg for his best man. The groomsmen will be Messrs. Laurence Kellogg of Alexandria, Mr. Palmer Kellogg of Hughes, Ark., and Dr. Prentice Grey and George Miller of this city. The ushers will be Mr. Vernont Royster of Raleigh, N. C., J. Shell of Bastrop and Keith Moore.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception will be held at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Sallie Ruffin on Grammont street.

Mrs. Wilbur Royster, accompanied by her son, Mr. Vermont Royster, of Raleigh, N. C., will arrive in the city next Saturday to be present at the marriage of her niece, Miss Suzonne Sperry, to Mr. Walter Kellogg on the seventh of February. They will be guests of Mrs. Royster's mother, Mrs. Sallie Ruffin and sister, Mrs. Gladys Sperry.

The Fairbanks P.-T. A. Meets

The Fairbanks P.-T. A. met Thursday afternoon for the first meeting of the new year. Minutes of the previous meetings were read and reports from the standing committee chairman were given. Splendid results have been attained this year under the capable leadership of the president, Mrs. Dock Worley. The energetic membership chairman reported fifty new members. Mrs. E. O. Scarborough is deserving of credit for same. Splendid work is being accomplished by the welfare committee with Mrs. Chester Rhodes, chairman. Mrs. Earnest Inabet, treasurer, reported a flattering bank balance.

At the close of the business meeting the program chairman, Mrs. Clinton Salmon, presented the following: A talk by Mrs. G. B. Wilson, "The School Child and Money." Mrs. Wilson also read a clever short poem, "Suppressed Desires." A comedy playlet, "The Minister's Mistake," was presented by Miss Francis Miller, Mrs. L. Wise and Mrs. H. Miller. Beatrice Wyatt, pupil of the sixth grade, contributed a poem, "Blacking the Baby."

The P.-T. A. desires to thank Mr. S. Morgan for the load of gravel for the school yard.

A benefit bridge has been planned for Friday night, February the first, at the Allen hotel at Fairbanks. All members are requested to attend.

Mrs. Louise Morgan's room won a dollar for having the most mothers at the meeting. After adjournment Mrs. Grady Carroll and her hospitability committee served delicious refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Lerch, Jr., of New York City, former residents of this city, are guests for a few days at the Virginia hotel.

Nuptial Event Of Charming Simplicity Engages The Interest Of Monroe Society

Exquisite simplicity characterized the wedding of Miss Winifred Culpepper, beautiful daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Culpepper and Mr. Morton Braswell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Baxter Braswell, Thursday morning, January the twenty-fourth, at eight-thirty o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents on Texas avenue.

The nuptial vows were plighted before an improvised altar fashioned of pink Radiance roses and luxuriant palms and ferns. Roses also banked the mantel and overflowed from classic shaped urns placed at vantage points. Myriad pink tapers flooded the reception suite with a charming glow.

The bridal attendants were Miss Katheryne White who wore a smart navy blue crepe model with white accessories and Miss Hopie Ross who wore a lovely beige crepe model with brown accessories. Both young ladies carried arm bouquets of American Beauty roses tied with lengths of bridal tulle.

Mr. Newton Knowles acted in the capacity of best man.

The impressive ceremony was performed by Reverend W. C. Scott, pastor of the First Methodist church, in the presence of a few intimate friends and members of the family.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiantly lovely in a bleu-de-roi velvet tailleur with short cape bordered in blue fox. Gray accessories were worn including a smart gray hat of summer felt. A distinctive color note was created by a glorious cluster of pink bride's roses and valley lilies carried in her arms.

The bride's mother wore a charming brown crepe model and a corsage of Brier cliff roses and valley lilies. Before departing on her honeymoon the bride presented her wedding bouquet to her mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Braswell are spending their honeymoon motoring in south Louisiana and upon their return will be at home to their friends in their own beautifully furnished apartment.

The bride, one of Monroe's loveliest personalities, attended school at Sophie Newcomb college, New Orleans, and Stevens college, Columbia, Mo. She is affiliated with Theta Tau Epsilon sorority. Mr. Braswell, is a prominent young business man of this city, vice-president of the Industrial Loan company and associated with other business enterprises. He is a graduate of the University of Alabama and a member of Sigma Chi fraternity.

Newman League To Observe Feast

The Newman League will meet Thursday, January the thirty-first at St. Matthews Hall. The league is sponsored by the Catholic Daughters of America and Saint Paul is the patron. Friday, January 25, was the feast of the conversion of Saint Paul, the greatest convert. In commemoration of this feast an article on "St. Paul's—the Greatest Conversion," will be presented by Margaret Devereux. The program will also include an article on the life of Therese Newman by Eugene Daspit, and "the Bible," by Father Walsh. Several dramatic readings will be rendered by the students of St. Matthew's school. The public is cordially invited.

Misses Nellie Breard and Joy Griffing enjoyed a visit last week in the home of Mrs. Harry Roundtree of Gilbert, La.

Friends of Mrs. B. H. Wade will regret to learn that she is a patient in St. Francis sanitarium. Visitors will now be permitted to her room.

Tea Hour Is Enjoyed In Stubbs Home

In the ruddy glow from a sparkling wood fire in the living room of the G. P. Stubbs home, Miss India Stubbs and Mrs. S. E. Huey welcomed a few intimates Saturday afternoon at the tea hour with Miss Suzonne Sperry, the inspiration.

Comfortable chairs formed a semicircle around the cheery fireplace and tea was poured by Miss Stubbs during the afternoon. Delicious confections were placed on coffee tables near at hand and the guests helped themselves at will.

The charming informality of this delightful afternoon, confined to conversation and tea drinking, was enjoyed by Miss Sperry, Mrs. Gladys Sperry, Miss Sue Graves, Miss Anna Laurie Smith, Miss Violet Meyer, Miss Elizabeth Carr, Mrs. Richard Kellogg, Mrs. Robert Kellogg, Mrs. Jason Johnson, Mrs. Christine Moore, Mrs. O. R. Lewis, Mrs. Sallie Ruffin.

Mrs. James Stevens has returned from a visit with friends and relatives in Jackson, Miss.

Mrs. George Wright still remains a patient in the Clinic but is now privileged to receive friends.

Considerable interest has been created in musical circles of this city by the announcement of Dalies Frantz' appearance in piano recital at the Northeast Center on the fifth of February under the auspices of the Musical Coterie.

Members of the Musical Coterie have achieved a master stroke in presenting this famous young pianist in recital. The New York critics speak in glowing terms of his work and especially of his most recent appearance as pianist with Stokowski and the Philadelphia orchestra in Carnegie Hall, New York. Mr. W. J. Henderson in the New York Sun had the following to say:

"When Mr. Frantz effected his entry into the musical circle of New York in 1932 this writer hailed him as a young man who did not merely play on the piano but was a pianist. He revealed a sound and healthy talent, a well-developed technic, musical insight and intelligence and ability to project a reading. Hope was expressed that he would justify the rich promise of this debut. He did justify it by a lovely, beautifully poised, sensitive and musicianly performance of the Beethoven Concerto in C major. The finely adjusted dynamics, the well-sustained quality of tone, the excellent phrasing and classic continence of style were factors in an interpretation which kept itself faithful to the spirit of the composition. . . . There was maturity in his performance which shone refulgently by reason of its admirably drawn melodic lines and its adherence to the style of the work. The playing of the inspired slow movement spoke generously of the young artist's poetic feeling and his imagination. The audience was quick to recognize the superior merit of Mr. Frantz and recalled him several times."

Miss L. G. Matherson of Racine, Wisconsin, national secretary of the W. C. T. U. and Mrs. A. D. Eglin, Grayson, Louisiana, state president, met with a group of Monroe ladies at Virginia hotel yesterday. A union was organized and the following local officers elected: President, Mrs. D. M. Doughty; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. U. M. Akin; executive committee, Mrs. D. M. Doughty, chairman; Mrs. D. M. Sholars, Mrs. W. K. Olmstead.

Other offices will be elected at a later date.

Scarborough is deserving of credit for same. Splendid work is being accomplished by the welfare committee with Mrs. Chester Rhodes, chairman. Mrs. Earnest Inabet, treasurer, reported a flattering bank balance.

At the close of the business meeting the program chairman, Mrs. Clinton Salmon, presented the following: A talk by Mrs. G. B. Wilson, "The School Child and Money." Mrs. Wilson also read a clever short poem, "Suppressed Desires." A comedy playlet, "The Minister's Mistake," was presented by Miss Francis Miller, Mrs. L. Wise and Mrs. H. Miller. Beatrice Wyatt, pupil of the sixth grade, contributed a poem, "Blacking the Baby."

The P.-T. A. desires to thank Mr. S. Morgan for the load of gravel for the school yard.

A benefit bridge has been planned for Friday night, February the first, at the Allen hotel at Fairbanks. All members are requested to attend.

Mrs. Louise Morgan's room won a dollar for having the most mothers at the meeting. After adjournment Mrs. Grady Carroll and her hospitability committee served delicious refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Lerch, Jr., of New York City, former residents of this city, are guests for a few days at the Virginia hotel.

Much Pomp And Ceremony Will Attend Prominent Nuptial Event Early In February

The interest of society is centered in a prominent nuptial event claiming in marriage a popular member of the younger set, Miss Suzonne Sperry and a prominent young bachelor, Mr. Walter Kellogg.

The event is surrounded with considerable sentiment due to the fact that the children whose mothers took a prominent part in the marriage of the bride's mother in this city will be a part of the wedding pageant. Girlhood friends of Mrs. Sperry's are also entertaining with pre-nuptial affairs and assisting in the decorating of Grace church for the wedding.

Much pomp and ceremony will accompany the nuptial service to be performed at six thirty o'clock in the evening with Reverend Hayward, rector of Grace church, officiating.

A vested choir will walk down the white carpeted aisle singing in unison the bridal chorus. Miss Ruth Metcalf of Greenville, Miss., who received her musical education abroad, will be the soloist.

Miss Sperry has chosen her classmate at Arlington Hall, Washington, D. C., Miss Sara Snipes, of Raleigh, N. C., her maid of honor and her four bridesmaids, life-long friends, will be Miss Sue Graves, Miss Anna Laurie Smith, Miss Jean Dryburgh and Miss Violet Meyer. The flower girls, Rhoda Kellogg and Betty Kellogg are nieces of the bride-groom. The ring-bearer will be Marguerite Lamkin. Mr. Burt Sperry will give his sister in marriage.

Mr. Kellogg has selected his brother, Mr. Richard Kellogg for his best man. The groomsmen will be Messrs. Laurence Kellogg of Alexandria, Mr. Palmer Kellogg of Hughes, Ark., and Dr. Prentice Grey and George Miller of this city. The ushers will be Mr. Vernont Royster of Raleigh, N. C., J. Shell of Bastrop and Keith Moore.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception will be held at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Sallie Ruffin on Grammont street.

Mrs. Wilbur Royster, accompanied by her son, Mr. Vermont Royster, of Raleigh, N. C., will arrive in the city next Saturday to be present at the marriage of her niece, Miss Suzonne Sperry, to Mr. Walter Kellogg on the seventh of February. They will be guests of Mrs. Royster's mother, Mrs. Sallie Ruffin and sister, Mrs. Gladys Sperry.

Nuptial Event Of Charming Simplicity Engages The Interest Of Monroe Society

Exquisite simplicity characterized the wedding of Miss Winifred Culpepper, beautiful daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Culpepper and Mr. Morton Braswell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Baxter Braswell, Thursday morning, January the twenty-fourth, at eight-thirty o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents on Texas avenue.

The nuptial vows were plighted before an improvised altar fashioned of pink Radiance roses and luxuriant palms and ferns. Roses also banked the mantel and overflowed from classic shaped urns placed at vantage points. Myriad pink tapers flooded the reception suite with a charming glow.

The bridal attendants were Miss Katheryne White who wore a smart navy blue crepe model with white accessories and Miss Hopie Ross who wore a lovely beige crepe model with brown accessories. Both young ladies carried arm bouquets of American Beauty roses tied with lengths of bridal tulle.

Mr. Newton Knowles acted in the capacity of best man.

The impressive ceremony was performed by Reverend W. C. Scott, pastor of the First Methodist church, in the presence of a few intimate friends and members of the family.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiantly lovely in a bleu-de-roi velvet tailleur with short cape bordered in blue fox. Gray accessories were worn including a smart gray hat of summer felt. A distinctive color note was created by a glorious cluster of pink bride's roses and valley lilies carried in her arms.

The bride's mother wore a charming brown crepe model and a corsage of Brier cliff roses and valley lilies. Before departing on her honeymoon the bride presented her wedding bouquet to her mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Braswell are spending their honeymoon motoring in south Louisiana and upon their return will be at home to their friends in their own beautifully furnished apartment.

The bride, one of Monroe's loveliest personalities, attended school at Sophie Newcomb college, New Orleans, and Stevens college, Columbia, Mo. She is affiliated with Theta Tau Epsilon sorority. Mr. Braswell, is a prominent young business man of this city, vice-president of the Industrial Loan company and associated with other business enterprises. He is a graduate of the University of Alabama and a member of Sigma Chi fraternity.

Newman League To Observe Feast

The Newman League will meet Thursday, January the thirty-first at St. Matthews Hall. The league is sponsored by the Catholic Daughters of America and Saint Paul is the patron. Friday, January 25, was the feast of the conversion of Saint Paul, the greatest convert. In commemoration of this feast an article on "St. Paul's—the Greatest Conversion," will be presented by Margaret Devereux. The program will also include an article on the life of Therese Newman by Eugene Daspit, and "the Bible," by Father Walsh. Several dramatic readings will be rendered by the students of St. Matthew's school. The public is cordially invited.

Misses Nellie Breard and Joy Griffing enjoyed a visit last week in the home of Mrs. Harry Roundtree of Gilbert, La.

Friends of Mrs. B. H. Wade will regret to learn that she is a patient in St. Francis sanitarium. Visitors will now be permitted to her room.

Tea Hour Is Enjoyed In Stubbs Home

In the ruddy glow from a sparkling wood fire in the living room of the G. P. Stubbs home, Miss India Stubbs and Mrs. S. E. Huey welcomed a few intimates Saturday afternoon at the tea hour with Miss Suzonne Sperry, the inspiration.

Comfortable chairs formed a semicircle around the cheery fireplace and tea was poured by Miss Stubbs during the afternoon. Delicious confections were placed on coffee tables near at hand and the guests helped themselves at will.

The charming informality of this delightful afternoon, confined to conversation and tea drinking, was enjoyed by Miss Sperry, Mrs. Gladys Sperry, Miss Sue Graves, Miss Anna Laurie Smith, Miss Violet Meyer, Miss Elizabeth Carr, Mrs. Richard Kellogg, Mrs. Robert Kellogg, Mrs. Jason Johnson, Mrs. Christine Moore, Mrs. O. R. Lewis, Mrs. Sallie Ruffin.

Mrs. James Stevens has returned from a visit with friends and relatives in Jackson, Miss.

Mrs. George Wright still remains a patient in the Clinic but is now privileged to receive friends.

Considerable interest has been created in musical circles of this city by the announcement of Dalies Frantz' appearance in piano recital at the Northeast Center on the fifth of February under the auspices of the Musical Coterie.

Members of the Musical Coterie have achieved a master stroke in presenting this famous young pianist in recital. The New York critics speak in glowing terms of his work and especially of his most recent appearance as pianist with Stokowski and the Philadelphia orchestra in Carnegie Hall, New York. Mr. W. J. Henderson in the New York Sun had the following to say:

"When Mr. Frantz effected his entry into the musical circle of New York in 1932 this writer hailed him as a young man who did not merely play on the piano but was a pianist. He revealed a sound and healthy talent, a well-developed technic, musical insight and intelligence and ability to project a reading. Hope was expressed that he would justify the rich promise of this debut. He did justify it by a lovely, beautifully poised, sensitive and musicianly performance of the Beethoven Concerto in C major. The finely adjusted dynamics, the well-sustained quality of tone, the excellent phrasing and classic continence of style were factors in an interpretation which kept itself faithful to the spirit of the composition. . . . There was maturity in his performance which snone refulgently by reason of its admirably drawn melodic lines and its adherence to the style of the work. The playing of the inspired slow movement spoke generously of the young artist's poetic feeling and his imagination. The audience was quick to recognize the superior merit of Mr. Frantz and recalled him several times."

Miss L. G. Matherson of Racine, Wisconsin, national secretary of the W. C. T. U. and Mrs. A. D. Eglin, Grayson, Louisiana, state president, met with a group of Monroe ladies at Virginia hotel yesterday. A union was organized and the following local officers elected: President, Mrs. D. M. Doughty; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. G. M. Akin; executive committee, Mrs. D. M. Doughty, chairman; Mrs. D. M. Sholars, Mrs. W. K. Olmstead.

Other officers will be elected at a later date.

SOCIETY

Mrs. Marsh Talks On Subject Of Period Furniture Before Interested Club Members

If you are interested in period furniture and eager to acquaint yourself with the history of the Georgian period, the Thomas Sheraton, the William and Mary, the Chippendale, the Duncan Phyfe and the Jacobean, then you will find Mrs. George Marsh's article on this subject one of great delight. Mrs. Marsh talked to members of the Welcome Branch, Twentieth Century Book club, as follows:

When the subject "Period Furniture" was assigned to me, I hardly knew where to begin, as hundreds of volumes have been published on furniture, and furniture styles or periods of furniture.

A period is an era of time in which there is a dominating influence. History reveals the fact that this influence invariably effects the style of architecture and decoration, and always has furniture reflected the modes and manners of the time. The tastes of the people and conditions under which they were living. The influences which were paramount at the time. So the facts I have here of the most popular periods, and their characteristics, start with the early English periods of the 16th century, as there is little interest in period furniture prior to that time. Under early English (the age of oak) there are three styles, Tudor, Elizabethian and Jacobean. In type the furniture of these periods is heavy and masculine and suggests dignity and richness.

Tudor and Elizabethian are more massive and richly carved than that of Jacobean, which are lighter in scale and more adaptable for smaller English types of homes. The Jacobean style and later pieces find wide acceptance today, especially chairs and tables carry a historic charm.

The William and Mary style was a complete revolution. It was subtle and graceful, a harmonious combination of straight and curved lines. Individual pieces were made taller to harmonize with increasing height of the ceilings. The general effect of the furniture was very liveable, and the style is easily recognized. Chests of drawers appeared and became known as highways and lowboys. China cabinets came into fashion, owing to the vogue for collecting china and cerramics which had been started by Queen Mary. Tall clocks were also in fashion and elaboratly decorated.

The furniture of the Queen Anne period, although heavy and substantial, has a grace and charm that make it a general favorite. This style has been employed by modern furniture manufacturers, more than any other style. The cabriole leg is one of the distinguishing features of this style. The furniture of Queen Anne's time shows a step forward in refinement, in grace and in comfort. Probably it merely followed the ideals which the William and Mary furniture would have attained had its era been extended.

The Georgian period was the era during which the four designers whose names are familiar to all Americans, lived and worked. The first of note was Thomas Chippendale, senior and junior, of Worchester, England. In general character the works of Chippendale are rich and elaborate, as well as beautiful and liveable. Mahogany was the favorite wood used. It is said he was fastidious in his choice of mahogany. Chippendale always will be a source of inspiration for modern designers. Much of his furniture may be found in galleries and museums today in a perfect state of preservation.

The high points of the Hepplewhite period are lightness, gracefulness and elegance, with emphasis on pure beauty of line. His work was free from odd and strange motifs, and showed a great deal of the Louis XV influence, a type he not only adapted but frequently copied. Wheat ears, Prince of Wales feathers and bellflower husks were much used for ornamentation. Hepplewhite was famous for his chairs, among the most popular designs was the lyre, the honeysuckle and the urn. Although mahogany was a favorite wood he used also satin wood, tulip wood and other rare selections.

Third came Thomas Sheraton. He has been called the greatest of the English designer and cabinetmakers of this golden age of furniture. He was the last great designer of the 18th century. Sheraton knew construction. His furniture was medium in size and light in weight, he favored mahogany yet he was a master at assembling various woods. This period is frequently referred to as the (age of satin wood). The Hepplewhite and Sheraton styles are very similar, in fact without study it is difficult to tell them apart. One of Sheraton's favorite decorations was designs of inlay.

In 1830 came the American empire period. It was at this time that the sleigh beds came into fashion and it was from these that the present style of bed was evolved. Four poster beds were being made both with high and short posts. The pineapple top and the acanithus leaf were favorite motifs.

A few years later America's first furniture designer of prominence was Duncan Phyfe, and it is maintained by many that his designs have not been surpassed since. He was the only American to develop a distinctive style of his own. In recent years, there has been a revival in Duncan Phyfe furniture.

Styles may come and go with the public's fancy but such furniture as Phyfes always will be beautiful. For it has a pleasing and home like appeal.

The Symbols And Emotions Portrayed In Rug Weaving Subject Of Excellent Paper

The symbolism of the human emotions portrayed in the patterns and the colors of Oriental rug weaving has ever held the interest of the world. Grave rugs, expressive of grief, prayer rugs, expressing deep religious thoughts and the thought of perpetual life symbolized by the cypress, willow and myrtle and hearth rugs where guests find sanctuary once they have placed their feet upon it, are in use in every home in the far east. Mrs. Clarence Faulk in a beautifully written paper endeavored to bring to members of the Altrurian Book club some of the glamour and interest of Oriental rug weaving through this medium. She said in part:

"An ever increasing number of people are feeling the lure of the Oriental rug and are learning to appreciate the artistic qualities, decorative value and extreme durability of these eastern fabrics.

"While the ordinary carpet of commerce is just a carpet and nothing more, the Oriental rug is a thing apart, and worthy of the interest and attention that one may give to its selection.

"We have learned to know the east as the home of patience. It is expressed in the exquisite carvings of Persia and in the rugs of Asia Minor.

"With endless perseverance, year after year, often through a lifetime, the artisan of the east will labor patiently at his task that it may be perfect. Inspiration will not alone produce such artistic creations, only boundless patience, steadily applied will accomplish them.

"The Orient has ever been a source of luxurious home adornment. The Egyptian and the Babylonian knew well the soft enrichment of the Assyrian weavings, the Greek and the Roman softened the austerity of marble palaces with sumptuous carpetings. The Nomad turned his rude tent into a palatial residence with their aid. The Bible refers many times to the rug and its uses and Homer and Herodus tell us of the weavings of the east.

"While first made for religious purposes and the uses of royalty, their extreme utility led to their gradual adoption to the varied uses of the common householder. They became the carpet, the wall decoration, the door curtain and the bed covering. The pattern took the place of pictures and held before the possessors a constant reminder of their hopes, beliefs and prayers.

"In time each rug assumed a ceremonial or every day use, and so now in the land where produced, each is used for some one purpose only. Of all the rugs possessed by a native, probably the prayer rug is the most important, if he be a Mohammedan. Five times daily, upon hearing the Muezzin's call from a minaret, the faithful follower of Mohammed makes his ablutions by cleansing his hands, mouth, face, ears and feet, and combing his beard. Then placing his prayer rug on the floor or ground, with the point of the niche directed towards Mecca, the Holy city, he prays, standing, kneeling, bowing, and salaaming his head upon the point of the niche.

"Being an object of such constant and personal use, and associated with his daily religious life, the weaver expends upon it the best of his knowledge and efforts. Religion has ever inspired master creations in every branch of art, whether in literature, music, painting or architecture. And so in weaving, the most ancient branch of art, the choicest specimens are found in Prayer rugs. For this reason, no less than the high regard in which the maker holds it, it is eagerly sought by western people. Prayer rugs may be easly recognized by the niche, or inverted V design, woven at one end of the field of the rug. This represents the niche in the sacred Mosque at Mecca, wherein is deposited the Koran.

"There is always a particular rug for a particular place in the home. Bath rugs, floor rugs, rugs made for covering divans, runners for stairs, rugs for saddle bags, etc. One in particular and always a favorite is the hearth rug. This rug is one of elaborate design and impressive coloring with usually a pointed field at both ends instead of at one end, as with the prayer rug. It is always in evidence upon the arrival of a guest and is the center of home life as well as the sanctuary. Regardless of the warlike attitude of the Nomads, a stranger who once gains admission to the chief's hut or tent and places foot upon the hearth rug gains the protection of the chief, who, with the whole tribe, is bound to protect him as a guest.

"To the Persian, the Chinese and the natives of India, white is the emblem of immortality, while green is to the Mohammedan the sacred color and indicates life everlasting. Blue to the Persian signifies air and the skies, and to the Mongolian authority and power. Black is the desolate hue of sorrow, evil and vice, while red brings joy, life, truth, virtue, sincerity and happiness. Yellow is the Chinese of royalty and its deeper companion shade of orange means sorrow to both the Buddist and the Mohammedans. Rose is the tint which is used to indicate the divine intelligence.

"Thus every simple untutored weaver is a dreamer of dreams, and not simply the rug. A mysticism and a fascinating heart interest that will endure as long as the fabric lasts, and will teach those who learn to speak its language a new understanding of the great, bright, wonderful world and the golden age that it past."

Miss Ballard Will Marry Mr. Boynton

In honor of Miss Mildred Ballard, who on February the first will become the bride of Mr. Wyman H. Boynton of Portsmouth, N. H., Mrs. Dennis and Miss Charlotte Lewis of Hodge entertained with one of most attractive pre-nuptial affairs of the season. Clever score cards, shower parasols encircled with bride's roses and for-get-me-nots carried the announcement of the impending nuptial event.

Several games of bridge created interesting diversion and resulted in Mrs. Douglas McLean receiving a lovely porcelain figurine for consolation and Mrs. Clark Rankin, a pair of pristine mantel ornaments for high score.

Diminutive vases of ivory tinted pottery, filled with pastel-shaded sweat-peas were awarded as individual table prizes and were won by Mrs. G. T. Littlefield, Mrs. A. J. Gagnon, Mrs. W. M. McBride, Mrs. Charles L. Kelley, Miss Lena Mae Ross and Miss Lorenza Hayes.

Attractively concocted confections of fruit-angelique, cake, pink and white mints, embossed with lily of the valley sprays and fruit punch were served.

During the serving of refreshments a messenger, Miss Wanda Dennis, arrived with a satchel filled with magnificent gifts for Miss Ballard. Among them were noted gifts of silver, crystal, china, linens, with a handsome tea and coffee silver service, the coynosure of all eyes.

Enjoying the delightful affair were Mesdames Michael F. Mooney, Geo. T. Littlefield, Jane Gagnon, Edwin Hodge, J. B. Boss, Thomas G. Dennis, Thomas Carlin, Chas. L. Kelley, Steve E. Michaud, Nelson Michaud, John Michaud, Marshal L. Dickerson, David H. Bell, II., Wayne Dennis, A. G. McKenzie, Ruth Pratt, Chas. Palmer, W. M. McBride, Douglass McLean, Clark Rankin, Frank C. Stewart and Misses Lorenza Hayes, Eminora Robinson, Blanch Dennis, Harvey Lewis, Rose O'Brien, Lena Mae Ross and the lovely honoree, Miss Mildred Ballard.

Mrs. A. L. Harrington will conduct the bridge tournament on Thursday at Lakeside Country club and will introduce at this time a new bridge feature, "Towie," now being played in the east. It has to do with individual bidding not dependent on partnership. This new feature will be introduced upon request of several enthusiasts who are anxious to try it out in this city. Luncheon will be served at twelve-thirty as customary on club day and members will be privileged to invite their friends for luncheon and for the bridge tournament later.

Arriving in the city the first of next week to attend the marriage of Miss Sperry and Mr. Kellogg, will be Miss Sara Snipes, student at King-Smith, Washington, D. C. Mr. C. M Kellogg of California, Mr. Burt Sperry, from Kemper Military school, Booneville, Missouri, Miss Jean Dryburgh from the University of Alabama.

Deafness Headnoises, Earache Catarrh—QUICKLY RELIEVED

These dreaded afflictions quickly respond to the Ourine method of treatment. Over one-half million people have enjoyed prompt relief. You may be a chronic long time sufferer, you may have tried many things without relief, but do not give up hope before you know what Ourine can do for you.

Dr. Edward Kelar, M. D., said, "Ourine helped cases I had given up as hopeless. A truly remarkable scientific remedy."

Joseph Meredith of Ontario, writes, "I suffered for over 50 years, some times I was stone deaf. I used only a half a bottle of Ourine, the headnoises disappeared and I could hear people talking clearly. I heard the choir in our church and the organ play for the first time in 3 years. I am recommending Ourine to every one."

No matter how stubborn your deafness, headnoises, earache or catarrh trouble are, you should try Ourine. No risk, no chance, no doubt. Ourine must do the work or cost you nothing.

Mrs. Marsh Talks On Subject Of Period Furniture Before Interested Club Members

If you are interested in period furniture and eager to acquaint yourself with the history of the Georgian period, the Thomas Sheraton, the William and Mary, the Chippendale, the Duncan Phyfe and the Jacobean, then you will find Mrs. George Marsh's article on this subject one of great delight. Mrs. Marsh talked to members of the Welcome Branch, Twentieth Century Book club, as follows:

When the subject "Period Furniture" was assigned to me, I hardly knew where to begin, as hundreds of volumes have been published on furniture, and furniture styles or periods of furniture.

A period is an era of time in which there is a dominating influence. History reveals the fact that this influence invariably effects the style of architecture and decoration, and always has furniture reflected the modes and manners of the time. The tastes of the people and conditions under which they were living. The influences which were paramount at the time. So the facts I have here of the most popular periods, and their characteristics, start with the early English periods of the 16th century, as there is little interest in period furniture prior to that time. Under early English (the age of oak) there are three styles, Tudor, Elizabethian and Jacobean. In type the furniture of these periods is heavy and masculine and suggests dignity and richness.

Tudor and Elizabethian are more massive and richly carved than that of Jacobean, which are lighter in scale and more adaptable for smaller English types of homes. The Jacobean style and later pieces find wide acceptance today, especially chairs and tables carry a historic charm.

The William and Mary style was a complete revolution. It was subtle and graceful, a harmonious combination of straight and curved lines. Individual pieces were made taller to harmonize with increasing height of the ceilings. The general effect of the furniture was very liveable, and the style is easily recognized. Chests of drawers appeared and became known as highways and lowboys. China cabinets came into fashion, owing to the vogue for collecting china and cerramics which had been started by Queen Mary. Tall clocks were also in fashion and elaboratly decorated.

The furniture of the Queen Anne period, although heavy and substantial, has a grace and charm that make it a general favorite. This style has been employed by modern furniture manufacturers, more than any other style. The cabriole leg is one of the distinguishing features of this style. The furniture of Queen Anne's time shows a step forward in refinement, in grace and in comfort. Probably it merely followed the ideals which the William and Mary furniture would have attained had its era been extended.

The Georgian period was the era during which the four designers whose names are familiar to all Americans, lived and worked. The first of note was Thomas Chippendale, senior and junior, of Worcester, England. In general character the works of Chippendale are rich and elaborate, as well as beautiful and liveable. Mahogany was the favorite wood used. It is said he was fastidious in his choice of mahogany. Chippendale always will be a source of inspiration for modern designers. Much of his furniture may be found in galleries and museums today in a perfect state of preservation.

The high points of the Hepplewhite period are lightness, gracefulness and elegance, with emphasis on pure beauty of line. His work was free from odd and strange motifs, and showed a great deal of the Louis XV influence, a type he not only adapted but frequently copied. Wheat ears, Prince of Wales feathers and bell-flower husks were much used for ornamentation. Hepplewhite was famous for his chairs, among the most popular designs was the lyre, the honeysuckle and the urn. Although mahogany was a favorite wood he also used satin wood, tulip wood and other rare selections.

Third came Thomas Sheraton. He has been called the greatest of the English designer and cabinetmakers of this golden age of furniture. He was the last great designer of the 18th century. Sheraton knew construction. His furniture was medium in size and light in weight, he favored mahogany yet he was a master at assembling various woods. This period is frequently referred to as the (age of satin wood). The Hepplewhite and Sheraton styles are very similar, in fact without study it is difficult to tell them apart. One of Sheraton's favorite decorations was designs of inlay.

In 1830 came the American empire period. It was at this time that the sleigh beds came into fashion and it was from these that the present style of bed was evolved. Four poster beds were being made both with high and short posts. The pineapple top and the acanithus leaf were favorite motifs.

A few years later America's first furniture designer of prominence was Duncan Phyfe, and it is maintained by many that his designs have not been surpassed since. He was the only American to develop a distinctive style of his own. In recent years, there has been a revival in Duncan Phyfe furniture.

Styles may come and go with the public's fancy but such furniture as Phyfes always will be beautiful. For it has a pleasing and home like appeal.

The Symbols And Emotions Portrayed In Rug Weaving Subject Of Excellent Paper

The symbolism of the human emotions portrayed in the patterns and the colors of Oriental rug weaving has ever held the interest of the world. Grave rugs, expressive of grief, prayer rugs, expressing deep religious thoughts and the thought of perpetual life symbolized by the cypress, willow and myrtle and hearth rugs where guests find sanctuary once they have placed their feet upon it, are in use in every home in the far east. Mrs. Clarence Faulk in a beautifully written paper endeavored to bring to members of the Altrurian Book club some of the glamour and interest of Oriental rug weaving through this medium. She said in part:

"An ever increasing number of people are feeling the lure of the Oriental rug and are learning to appreciate the artistic qualities, decorative values and extreme durability of these eastern fabrics.

"While the ordinary carpet of commerce is just a carpet and nothing more, the Oriental rug is a thing apart, and worthy of the interest and attention that one may give to its selection.

"We have learned to know the east as the home of patience. It is expressed in the exquisite carvings of Persia and in the rugs of Asia Minor.

"With endless perseverance, year after year, often through a lifetime, the artisan of the east will labor patiently at his task that it may be perfect. Inspiration will not alone produce such artistic creations, only boundless patience, steadily applied will accomplish them.

"The Orient has ever been a source of luxurious home adornment. The Egyptian and the Babylonian knew well the soft enrichment of the Assyrian weavings, the Greek and the Roman softened the austerity of marble palaces with sumptuous carpetings. The Nomad turned his rude tent into a paradise with their aid. The Bible refers many times to the rug and its uses and Homer and Herodus tell us of the weavings of the east.

"While first made for religious purposes and the uses of royalty, their extreme utility led to their gradual adoption to the varied uses of the common householder. They became the carpet, the wall decoration, the door curtain and the bed covering. The pattern took the place of pictures and held before the possessors a constant reminder of their hopes, beliefs and prayers.

"In time each rug assumed a ceremonial or every day use, and so now in the land where produced, each is used for some one purpose only. Of all the rugs possessed by a native, the prayer rug is the most important, if he be a Mohammedan. Five times daily, upon hearing the Muezzin's call from a minaret, the faithful follower of Mohammed makes his ablutions by cleansing his hands, mouth, face, ears and feet, and combing his beard. Then placing his prayer rug on the floor or ground, with the point of the niche directed towards Mecca, the Holy city, he prays, standing, kneeling, bowing, and salaaming his head upon the point of the niche.

"Being an object of such constant and personal use, and associated with his daily religious life, the weaver expends upon it the best of his knowledge and efforts. Religion has ever inspired master creations in every branch of art, whether in literature, music, painting or architecture. And so in weaving, the most ancient branch of art, the choicest specimens are found in Prayer rugs. For this reason, no less than the high regard in which the maker holds it, it is eagerly sought by western people. Prayer rugs may be easily recognized by the niche, or inverted V design, woven at one end of the field of the rug. This represents the niche in the sacred Mosque at Mecca, wherein is deposited the Koran.

"There is always a particular rug for a particular place in the home. Bath rugs, floor rugs, rugs made for covering divans, runners for stairs, rugs for saddle bags, etc. One in particular and always a favorite is the hearth rug. This rug is one of elaborate design and impressive coloring with usually a pointed field at both ends instead of at one end, as with the prayer rug. It is a symbol of hospitality as the hearth in the home is the center of home life as well as the sanctuary. Regardless of the war-like attitude of the Nomads, a stranger who once gains admission to the chief's hut or tent and places foot upon the hearth rug gains the protection of the chief, who, with the whole tribe, is bound to protect him as a guest.

"To the Persian, the Chinese and the natives of India, white is the emblem of immortality, while green is to the Mohammedan the sacred color and indicates life everlasting. Blue to the Persian signifies air and the skies, and to the Mongolian authority and power. Black is the desolate hue of sorrow, evil and vice, while red brings joy, life, truth, virtue, sincerity and happiness. Yellow is the Chinese of royalty and its deeper companion shade of orange means sorrow to both the Buddist and the Mohammedans. Rose is the tint which is used to indicate the divine intelligence.

"Thus every simple untutored weaver is a dreamer of dreams, and not simply the rug. A mysticism and a fascinating heart interest that will endure as long as the fabric lasts, and will teach those who learn to speak its language a new understanding of the great, bright, wonderful world and the golden age that it past."

Miss Ballard Will Marry Mr. Boynton

In honor of Miss Mildred Ballard, who on February the first will become the bride of Mr. Wyman H. Boynton of Portsmouth, N. H., Mrs. Dennis and Miss Charlotte Lewis of Hodge entertained with one of most attractive pre-nuptial affairs of the season. Clever score cards, shower parasols encircled with bride's roses and for-get-me-nots carried the announcement of the impending nuptial event.

Several games of bridge created interesting diversion and resulted in Mrs. Douglas McLean receiving a lovely porcelain figurine for consolation and Mrs. Clark Rankin, a pair of pristine mantel ornaments for high score.

Diminutive vases of ivory tinted pottery, filled with pastel-shaded sweat-peas were awarded as individual table prizes and were won by Mrs. G. T. Littlefield, Mrs. A. J. Gagnon, Mrs. W. M. McBride, Mrs. Charles L. Kelley, Miss Lena Mae Ross and Miss Lorenza Hayes.

Attractively concocted confections of fruit-angelique, cake, pink and white mints, embossed with lily of the valley sprays and fruit punch were served.

During the serving of refreshments a messenger, Miss Wanda Dennis, arrived with a satchel filled with magnificent gifts for Miss Ballard. Among them were noted gifts of silver, crystal, china, linens, with a handsome tea and coffee silver service, the coynosure of all eyes.

Enjoying the delightful affair were Mesdames Michael F. Mooney, Geo. T. Littlefield, Jane Gagnon, Edwin Hodge, J. B. Boss, Thomas G. Dennis, Thomas Carlin, Chas. L. Kelley, Steve E. Michaud, Nelson Michaud, John Michaud, Marshal L. Dickerson, David H. Bell, II., Wayne Dennis, A. G. McKenzie, Ruth Pratt, Chas. Palmer, W. M. McBride, Douglass McLean, Clark Rankin, Frank C. Stewart and Misses Lorenza Hayes, Eminora Robinson, Blanch Dennis, Harvey Lewis, Rose O'Brien, Lena Mae Ross and the lovely honoree, Miss Mildred Ballard.

Mrs. A. L. Harrington will conduct the bridge tournament on Thursday at Lakeside Country club and will introduce at this time a new bridge feature, "Towie," now being played in the east. It has to do with individual bidding not dependent on partnership. This new feature will be introduced upon request of several enthusiasts who are anxious to try it out in this city. Luncheon will be served at twelve-thirty as customary on club day and members will be privileged to invite their friends for luncheon and for the bridge tournament later.

Arriving in the city the first of next week to attend the marriage of Miss Sperry and Mr. Kellogg, will be Miss Sara Snipes, student at King-Smith, Washington, D. C. Mr. C. M Kellogg of California, Mr. Burt Sperry, from Kemper Military school, Booneville, Missouri, Miss Jean Dryburgh from the University of Alabama.

SOCIETY

President's Birthday Ball Will Be The Nation's Social Event Of Mid-Winter Season

The undivided interest of the dancing world of this city and every patriotic citizen is apparently centered in the President's Birthday Ball in the crystal ballroom of the Virginia hotel Wednesday night under the auspices of the Junior Charity league.

The sale of tickets has been rather phenomenal but the purchasers are not confined to the dancing world by any means. Citizens who desire to assist the league in the wonderful work they are accomplishing under the banner of the free baby clinic, have bought their tickets merely as a donation and others of course desire to assist the president of the United States in the noble work of caring for infantile paralysis victims. The spacious ballroom of the Virginia can accommodate all those who desire to dance, members of the league feel assured.

Mrs. Prioleau Ellis, chairman of the Junior league committee, is endeavoring to work out a plan whereby those who do not dance can occupy seats of honor at vantage points on the ballroom floor.

It is rather a novel idea, successfully launched by leagues in other cities. Realizing that this is the greatest social event in the nation's history she is endeavoring to make it possible for all ages to enjoy the ball from the sidelines and from seats of honor as well as on the dance floor.

The cutting of the gigantic birthday cake will of course be the peice de resistance of the evening. Miss Jane Johnson entertained the members of her bridge club at her home at Tendal on Saturday afternoon the games resulting in Mrs. Hugh Montgomery capturing the high score prize. A delicious salad course was attractively served at the close of the games to the guests who were Mrs. Ed Adams, Jr., Mrs. Claude Searles, Mrs. Maxwell Yerger, Miss Jessica Greene, Mrs. Hugh Montgomery, Miss Katherine Ward, Mrs. Will Sevier, Jr., and Mrs. Will Adams.

Members of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Presbyterian church were delightful hostesses on Friday evening when they entertained the pastor, deacons and elders of the church and their wives at an oyster supper at the home of Miss Amy Holmes on Friday evening. Those in attendance were Rev. and Mrs. H. N. Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. Turner, Mr. and Mrs. Ayres, Mr. E. W. Jones, Mrs. George Eggleston, Mr. George Ketchum, Mr. and Mrs. Perry Glick, Mr. and Mrs. John Nesbit, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Buford, Mr. Will Holmes and Mrs. R. K. Boney. Assisting in the service were Mrs. J. S. Agee, Mrs. J. H. Collins, Miss Amy Holmes and Mrs. W. C. Malone.

The Friday Afternoon Bridge club was entertained on Saturday afternoon by Mrs. E. B. Stribling who had as guests Mrs. Gus Willett, of Alexandria, Mrs. Maxwell Yerger, Mrs. Ed Shamblin, Mrs. J. A. Gilbert, Mrs. Steve Voelker, Mrs. John Sevier, Mrs. Henry Sevier, Mrs. Mason Spencer. The high score prize was won by Mrs. Gilbert, second by Mrs. Shamblin and low, Mrs. Yerger. A delectable hot plate luncheon was enjoyed at the conclusion of the games.

A meeting of the board of deacons of the Baptist church was held at the home of Mr. W. H. Ward during the past week with the following in attendance: Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Gayle, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Rock, Rev. L. A. Materne, Mr. W. C. Byrum, Mr. Paul Gaines, Mr. A. J. Boswell, Mr. L. A. Nettles and Mr. H. J. Jones. Mrs. Neal Holt served delicious refreshments at the close o. the session.

The newly formed circle one of the Baptist Woman's Missionary union met with the chairman Mrs. H. J. Jones on Monday afternoon with six members and one visitor in attendance. Following the opening prayer by Mrs. T. E. King, Mrs. Jones read the twelfth chapter of First Corinthians. The following officers then read their respective duties from "How and Why of W. M. U.": Mrs. H. J. Jones, chairman, Mrs. J. W. Holly, co-chairman; Mrs. Carter, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. T. E. King, Bible and mission study; Mrs. Frank Montgomery, social activities; Mrs. Fisher, personal service, Mrs. Harry Bankston, white cross, Mrs. Bessonnette, stewardship. Refreshments were served during the social period.

The monthly meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Episcopal church took place at the home of Miss Annette Beers on Monday afternoon with fifteen members present. Mrs. W. C. Starrett presided and Mrs. Hugh Montgomery and Mrs. Claude Searles read selections from "The Witness." Mrs. W. L. Rountree sang, "My Wild Irish Rose." The hostess served refreshments at the close of the program.

The Eveready circle of the Methodist Missionary society met with Mrs. J. R. Medlin at her home on Monday afternoon with an attendance of 23. Mrs. H. W. Huckabay, for the devotional, read the 116th Psalm and an inspiring message based on this scripture. Mrs. R. A. Tate presided over the short business session which was followed by an impressive "Praise and Pledge Service" composed of appropriate responsive scripture readings interspersed with hymns and concluding with a candle lighting ceremony when the blue, yellow and white candles, symbolic of service, gifts and prayer were accompanied by the signing of the pledge cards. Mrs. G. L. Garrison then sang, "Have Thine Own Way, Lord." During the social hour the hostess served dainty and delicious refreshments.

Circle six of the W. M. U. was entertained at the home of Albert Bunch on Monday afternoon with ten members, including three new members in attendance. Mrs. H. B. Day, the new chairman, presided. After the devotional by Mrs. R. S. Gayle, Mrs. Walter Scott, Mrs. L. Stevens and Mrs. A. J. Boswell contributed to the program on "Stewardship." A social hour followed when refreshments were served by the hostess. Other officers for the circle were Mrs. L. B. Collins, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. R. S. Gayle, stewardship; Mrs. L. Stevens, personal service and Mrs. James Bethea, white cross.

Members of Circle one of the Methodist Missionary society met with Mrs. D. H. Allen on Monday afternoon with 13 present. The feature of the session was the completion of a loan layette for the parish health unit. Refreshments of cake, coffee and candy were enjoyed.

Cecil Smith, who for some time has been stationed at Quantico, Va., as a member of the marines, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Smith, and is being warmly welcomed by his many friends here, especially among the Boy Scouts, who remember his efficient services as their scoutmaster.

At a meeting of Circle three of the W. M. U. held at the home of Mrs. L. A. Nettles, Mrs. I. T. Hill conducted the Bible lesson after which a social hour was enjoyed.

Columbia

Mrs. S. P. Walker is rapidly recovering from an injury sustained in a fall recently.

John Brown, George Erskine and Wilbur Gregory have returned from a trip to Colvington. They were accompanied on the trip by A. R. Irwin, who will remain there for a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Roland have announced the birth of a nine pound boy whom they have not yet named. The baby was born in a Monroe sanitarium.

The Caldwell association of the W. M. U., which includes Grayson, Clarks, Kelly and Columbia, elected officers for the new year and held installation services at a recent meeting. The meeting was opened with a devotional by Mrs. A. L. Braser, followed by the welcoming address by Mrs. J. R. Brown, Jr. The new officers were elected as follows: Superintendent, Mrs. A. L. Russell; assistant superintendent, Mrs. Paul Jones; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. R. A. Phillips; young people's advisor, Mrs. O. C. Hopkins; personal service, Mrs. J. W. Ivy; children's home leader, Mrs. J. D. Stewart; white cross leader, Mrs. H. C. Bridger; stewardship, Mrs. J. D. Kitchingham. Following the executive session a delectable luncheon was served and the afternoon was devoted to the address by the lately installed superintendent and individual conferences.

J. E. McClanahan, prominent Caldwell parish resident of Columbia and formerly assistant chief of the state bureau of identification, who recently underwent an operation at St. Francis sanitarium in Monroe, is again in a critical condition and a second operation has been necessitated.

Hope had been held that Mr. McClanahan had recovered following the first operation but complications developed. He is again in a sanitarium in Monroe.

By ANNE ADAMS

The dress pictured was designed by Anne Adams especially for the woman who wants to look smart for a busy season. It is perfect for the woman with few clothes—and a dress the woman with many clothes will insist upon having. The manner in which the bodice buttons—like a two way bolero with diagonal closing—is interesting and new, and gives the figure grace, as do the sleeves with the graceful flares. (Under cuffs may be omitted, if you like). The fitted hip line and the inverted skirt pleats are noteworthy. We suggest it in rough or flat silk crepe or triple sheer in a small print or monotone.

Pattern 2122 is available in sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 36 takes 4 yards 39 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Miss Ethel May Stone And Robert Light Wed

Robert Earl Light of Blackstone, Va., now located at Brownville, and Miss Ethel May Stone, resident of Brownville, were married at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the office of clerk of court at the parish courthouse here, with John Sholars, deputy clerk, performing the ceremony.

The marriage of Miss Stone and Mr. Light was the culmination of a romance which began when both were working at Hodge.

Mr. and Mrs. Light will make their home at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. J. L. Stone of Brownville.

Mr. Light, who attended Virginia Polytechnic institute, will be engaged in work in connection with the construction of the state highway bridge across the Ouachita river here. He said he would be in charge of the construction of overhead passes.

CHAPTER XIX

Elinor tried to reassure herself, told herself she was becoming absurdly nervous. Nothing could have happened.

But why was Aunt Bessie waiting? Why didn't she come?

Elinor said, "It's the nicest footrest I ever saw, Sexton. It really is!"

Then Bessie came. Jim Senior followed her, carrying a glass of wine in his unsteady hand. Bessie was smiling rather stiffly. Elinor's heart went cold.

"Sexton," Bessie said, "run upstairs now, please—"

"Aw!" Sexton murmured rebelliously, but he went. Bessie drew Elinor down beside her on the sofa. "Benson telephoned," she began, "to say that your father—ah—has had an accident. Now don't be alarmed, darling! It may not be serious—"

Bessie was holding one of Elinor's smooth hands between her work-scarred, roughened ones. "Well, it seems—Benson thinks it may be only a slight injury—that Vance Carter came to your apartment. He'd been drinking and he had a gun. He shot at your father—"

Elinor had never fainted before but the day had been too much for her. Within a few hours she had witnessed the horror of death, had seen her father bitterly disappointed and crushed by her aunt's failure to remember him, had heard her mother's hysterical accusations that Elinor herself was to blame. She had felt Barrett Colvin's chill glance, brief and heart-breaking. Only a moment he had looked at her, then turned his eyes away. That, more than anything else, had haunted her, making her utterly and completely miserable. A dreadful day!

"Put her down flat, Jim!" Bessie ordered. She knelt clumsily beside Elinor to fan her with the water-spotted, darkened apron she still wore. "I told Benson you'd take her home—"

"Of course."

"Have you enough in your pockets for taxi fare?"

"I don't know—"

"Jim Junior has some change."

* * *

Elinor opened her eyes. There was a dazed wonder in them for a moment. Then she remembered.

"There, there, darling!" Bessie murmured. She thought, "If worse comes to worse we can manage—we'll have to manage—to take her in! Poor child, if Bentwell goes she'll have no one—"

Jim Junior ordered the taxicab. A little later Sexton stood on the step, wondering if any of the neighbors would happen to see the cab chugging before their door. Bert, the only one of the boys who was not stiffened by the tragedy, hovered near Elinor, patter her shoulder and murmured, "Gosh, I'm sorry!"

"You are all so kind—" Elinor faltered unsteadily.

She clasped a fold of her uncle's coat during the long drive home. As she thought of the warmth of the home she had just left and the fears that lay ahead her eyes filled.

Jim, returning, told his wife, "She insisted on paying the fare—and paying my fare home, too." That made Bessie cry. It was so like Elinor to think of others even at such a time.

"Tell me about it," she said, wiping her eyes. The boys stood, a tense trio.

"It's pretty bad," Jim told them. "It's about as bad as it could be, I guess. Shot through the left lung. They've locked up Vance Carter. Lida was screaming as we went in. I never heard anything like it—"

Bessie's face stiffened. "Did you remind Elinor that I'd come any time?" she asked after a short silence.

"Yes, but she knows that anyhow." He put his hand on her arm and again tears brimmed her eyes.

* * *

Somewhere a clock with an asthmatic preface to its strike announced that it was 10

"We'd better turn in," said Jim Senior. "Tomorrow may be pretty full—"

Meantime Elinor, without taking off her outer wraps, had gone to her father's room to stand by his bed. His eyes were open, glazed, and he was breathing noisily. A doctor, swathed in white that was flecked with red, stood near. A nurse moved about.

The doctor looked at Elinor inquiringly. He didn't want any screaming in the room such as had come from the strong lungs of the patient's neurotic wife. But this pretty girl was evidently controlled.

"You're Miss Stafford?"

"Yes."

"I'm Doctor Moran. Live five floors down."

"Can you tell me, Doctor—?"

"It's a little hard to say tonight, Miss Stafford, but if he pulls through the next few days he should have a pretty fair chance. A towel, Miss Hemmingway. I'll stop to see you before I leave. You'd better go now, Miss Stafford."

She nodded, left. A sensible girl, the doctor thought. He'd leave her a sedative. Her mother would scream away her nerves and then sleep like a baby.

* * *

Marcia Radnor telephoned her brother about it in the morning. She began characteristically. "Barry, is that you, dear?"

"Yes."

"The most terrible thing has happened. I heard it a second ago from Hester Von Tryne. I could hardly believe—"

"But what is it, Marcia?" he prodded urgently, a little impatiently. He had not slept all night and it was still too early for him to have assembled that jaded control which grows as a morning wears thin.

"It's about the Staffords!"

His heart clutched.

"Van Carter shot Bentwell Stafford last night. He's in bad shape—"

Barrett's sharp "What?" prompted more details. He heard them all clearly, yet through the dullness that grows of slack nerves freshly taxed.

A moment later he called Hutten to bring the closed car. He was going to Brooklyn to see Mrs. Thrope and learn from her what he could do to help. He must help! Barrett knew well enough what would happen to the Staffords now. Town talk had grown bold with chatter of how Lida had bought and charged here, there, everywhere. They might even find it difficult to get the right attention for Bentwell Stafford who might be at that very moment dying.

Bessie had been cleaning the refrigerator, trying through activity to work off her anxiety and worry. When Maggie gave her the card on which was engraved, "Mr. Barrett H. Colvin" she cast a stricken glance down at her dress. She wished she looked neater. But after taking off her apron folding it and laying it on a chair, she hurried to the parlor where Barrett still stood, too restless to sit down.

"Mrs. Thrope," he began miserably, pressing her water-softened hand.

"Sit down, Mr. Colvin. No—not in that chair. The springs are broken. Isn't it terrible—I mean about Bentwell? You've heard, of course—"

He nodded, frowning. He sat down. Bessie smoothed her house dress over her fat knees and waited. She saw his teeth set on his lower lip. Brows drawn, he stared at the worn patch in the rug. She knew he wasn't really seeing the rug, that he was miserable. She felt real pity for him.

"I came to know what I can do," he said abruptly.

HERE'S Something!
Putting Quality and Uniformity Into ATLANTIC BOND

"They used to dunk their logs"

When logs entered their mill, they used to "dunk" them in a tank of hot water. They found a better method, so they don't "dunk" any more.

The dunking method was to hoist a batch of logs up, "dunk" them in a tank of hot water, and then hoist them out again. The logs were in the water long enough to wash the surface dirt off, but that's all.

Their new method is to give the logs a chance to soak in the tank of hot water. As the logs come off the conveyor, they are dumped into the tank, where dirt, ice, snow, and other impurities are soaked off. They remain in this tank long enough to get a good thorough cleaning.

This soaking tank leads a double life. In addition to washing the logs, it carries them along to the conveyor. This method of transporting the logs from the tank to the conveyors is much more efficient than the old method. It saves time and money, and at the same time does a better job of cleaning the logs.

The fact that these logs are given a good chance to soak is one of the reasons why ATLANTIC Bond is so white. The dunking method used to wash off very loose dirt, but it didn't get the dirt that must be soaked off. And the dunking method, incidentally, is still used pretty generally in the paper industry today.

You will find ATLANTIC Bond to be a uniformly white, uniformly good bond paper. The reason is that every step in the manufacture of ATLANTIC Bond is carefully controlled with uniformity as its objective.

We are consistant users of ATLANTIC BOND. Why not give us a trial on that next printing order of yours.

President's Birthday Ball Will Be The Nation's Social Event Of Mid-Winter Season

The undivided interest of the dancing world of this city and every patriotic citizen is apparently centered in the President's Birthday Ball in the crystal ballroom of the Virginia hotel Wednesday night under the auspices of the Junior Charity league.

The sale of tickets has been rather phenomenal but the purchasers are not confined to the dancing world by any means. Citizens who desire to assist the league in the wonderful work they are accomplishing under the banner of the free baby clinic, have bought their tickets merely as a donation and others of course desire to assist the president of the United States in the noble work of caring for infantile paralysis victims. The spacious ballroom of the Virginia can accommodate all those who desire to dance, members of the league feel assured.

Mrs. Prioleau Ellis, chairman of the Junior league committee, is endeavoring to work out a plan whereby those who do not dance can occupy seats of honor at vantage points on the ballroom floor.

It is rather a novel idea, successfully launched by leagues in other cities. Realizing that this is the greatest social event in the nation's history she is endeavoring to make it possible for all ages to enjoy the ball from the sidelines and from seats of honor as well as on the dance floor.

The cutting of the gigantic birthday cake will of course be the peice de resistance of the evening. The luscious confection will be donated by a local bakery and the cake-cutting ceremony will be one of the highlights of the occasion. The Friday night dance at the River Road inn was a very delightful affair and attracted a great many. A buffet supper was served at twelve o'clock and the dance continued until three in the morning. Those present included Mr. and Mrs. Myles Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Curry, Misses Mildred Harris, Carolyn Ratcliff, Cornelia and Marguerite Smith, Willie Mae Jackson, Alverne Noble, Leah Knott, Margaret Ashford and Messers Robert Culpepper, William David Clarke, Thomas Wagner, H. W. McDowell, Jack Morrissey, Jr., Walter Echols, Marvin Thompson and many others.

Miss Ethel May Stone And Robert Light Wed

Robert Earl Light of Blackstone, Va., now located at Brownville, and Miss Ethel May Stone, resident of Brownville, were married at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the office of clerk of court at the parish courthouse here, with John Sholars, deputy clerk, performing the ceremony.

The marriage of Miss Stone and Mr. Light was the culmination of a romance which began when both were working at Hodge.

Mr. and Mrs. Light will make their home at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. J. L. Stone of Brownville.

Mr. Light, who attended Virginia Polytechnic institute, will be engaged in work in connection with the construction of the state highway bridge across the Ouachita river here. He said he would be in charge of the construction of overhead passes.

Until 1868, married women in North Carolina did not have the legal right to exercise control over property they owned, that prerogative being vested in husbands.

CHAPTER XIX

Elinor tried to reassure herself, told herself she was becoming absurdly nervous. Nothing could have happened.

But why was Aunt Bessie waiting? Why didn't she come?

Elinor said, "It's the nicest footrest I ever saw, Sexton. It really is!"

Then Bessie came. Jim Senior followed her, carrying a glass of wine in his unsteady hand. Bessie was smiling rather stiffly. Elinor's heart went cold.

"Sexton," Bessie said, "run upstairs now, please—"

"Aw!" Sexton murmured rebelliously, but he went. Bessie drew Elinor down beside her on the sofa. "Benson telephoned," she began, "to say that your father—ah—has had an accident. Now don't be alarmed, darling! It may not be serious—"

Bessie was holding one of Elinor's smooth hands between her work-scarred, roughened ones. "Well, it seems—Benson thinks it may be only a slight injury—that Vance Carter came to your apartment. He'd been drinking and he had a gun. He shot at your father—"

Elinor had never fainted before but the day had been too much for her. Within a few hours she had witnessed the horror of death, had seen her father bitterly disappointed and crushed by her aunt's failure to remember him, had heard her mother's hysterical accusations that Elinor herself was to blame. She had felt Barrett Colvin's chill glance, brief and heart-breaking. Only a moment he had looked at her, then turned his eyes away. That, more than anything else, had haunted her, making her utterly and completely miserable. A dreadful day!

"Put her down flat, Jim!" Bessie ordered. She knelt clumsily beside Elinor to fan her with the water-spotted, darkened apron she still wore. "I told Benson you'd take her home—"

"Of course."

"Have you enough in your pockets for taxi fare?"

"I don't know—"

"Jim Junior has some change."

• • •

Elinor opened her eyes. There was a dazed wonder in them for a moment. Then she remembered.

"There, there, darling!" Bessie murmured. She thought, "If worse comes to worse we can manage—we'll have to manage—to take her in! Poor child, if Bentwell goes she'll have no one—"

Jim Junior ordered the taxicab. A little later Sexton stood on the step, wondering if any of the neighbors would happen to see the cab chugging before their door. Bert, the only one of the boys who was not stiffened by the tragedy, hovered near Elinor, patter her shoulder and murmured, "Gosh, I'm sorry!"

"You are all so kind—" Elinor faltered unsteadily.

She clasped a fold of her uncle's coat during the long drive home. As she thought of the warmth of the home she had just left and the fears that lay ahead her eyes filled.

Jim, returning, told his wife, "She insisted on paying the fare—and paying my fare home, too." That made Bessie cry. It was so like Elinor to think of others even at such a time.

"Tell me about it," she said, wiping her eyes. The boys stood, a tense trio.

"It's pretty bad," Jim told them. "It's about as bad as it could be, I guess. Shot through the left lung. They've locked up Vance Carter. Lida was screaming as we went in. I never heard anything like it—"

Bessie's face stiffened. "Did you remind Elinor that I'd come any time?" she asked after a short silence.

"Yes, but she knows that anyhow." He put his hand on her arm and again tears brimmed her eyes.

• • •

Somewhere a clock with an asthmatic preface to its strike announced that it was 10

"We'd better turn in," said Jim Senior. "Tomorrow may be pretty full—"

Meantime Elinor, without taking off her outer wraps, had gone to her father's room to stand by his bed. His eyes were open, glazed, and he was breathing noisily. A doctor, swathed in white that was flecked with red, stood near. A nurse moved about.

The doctor looked at Elinor inquiringly. He didn't want any screaming in the room such as had come from the strong lungs of the patient's neurotic wife. But this pretty girl was evidently controlled.

"You're Miss Stafford?"

"Yes."

"I'm Doctor Moran. Live five floors down."

"Can you tell me, Doctor—?"

"It's a little hard to say tonight, Miss Stafford, but if he pulls through the next few days he should have a pretty fair chance. A towel, Miss Hemmingway. I'll stop to see you before I leave. You'd better go now, Miss Stafford."

She nodded, left. A sensible girl, the doctor thought. He'd leave her a sedative. Her mother would scream away her nerves and then sleep like a baby.

• • •

Marcia Radnor telephoned her brother about it in the morning. She began characteristically. "Barry, is that you, dear?"

"Yes."

"The most terrible thing has happened. I heard it a second ago from Hester Von Tryne. I could hardly believe—"

"But what is it, Marcia?" he prodded urgently, a little impatiently. He had not slept all night and it was still too early for him to have assembled that jaded control which grows as a morning wears thin.

"It's about the Staffords!"

His heart clutched.

"Van Carter shot Bentwell Stafford last night. He's in bad shape—"

Barrett's sharp "What?" prompted more details. He heard them all clearly, yet through the dullness that grows of slack nerves freshly taxed.

A moment later he called Hutten to bring the closed car. He was going to Brooklyn to see Mrs. Thrope and learn from her what he could do to help. He must help! Barrett knew well enough what would happen to the Staffords now. Town talk had grown bold with chatter of how Lida had bought and charged here, there, everywhere. They might even find it difficult to get the right attention for Bentwell Stafford who might be at that very moment dying.

Bessie had been cleaning the refrigerator, trying through activity to work off her anxiety and worry. When Maggie gave her the card on which was engraved, "Mr. Barrett H. Colvin" she cast a stricken glance down at her dress. She wished she looked neater. But after taking off her apron folding it and laying it on a chair, she hurried to the parlor where Barrett still stood, too restless to sit down.

"Mrs. Thrope," he began miserably, pressing her water-softened hand.

"Sit down, Mr. Colvin. No—not in that chair. The springs are broken. Isn't it terrible—I mean about Bentwell? You've heard, of course—"

He nodded, frowning. He sat down. Bessie smoothed her house dress over her fat knees and waited. She saw his teeth set on his lower lip. Brows drawn, he stared at the worn patch in the rug. She knew he wasn't really seeing the rug, that he was miserable. She felt real pity for him.

"I came to know what I can do," he said abruptly.

HERE'S Something!

Putting Quality and Uniformity Into ATLANTIC BOND

"They used to dunk their logs"

When logs entered their mill, they used to "dunk" them in a tank of hot water. They found a better method, so they don't "dunk" any more.

The dunking method was to hoist a batch of logs up, "dunk" them in a tank of hot water, and then hoist them out again. The logs were in the water long enough to wash the surface dirt off, but that's all.

Their new method is to give the logs a chance to soak in the tank of hot water. As the logs come off the conveyor, they are dumped into the tank, where dirt, ice, snow, and other impurities are soaked off. They remain in this tank long enough to get a good thorough cleaning.

This soaking tank leads a double life. In addition to washing the logs, it carries them along to the conveyor. This method of transporting the logs from the tank to the conveyors is much more efficient than the old method. It saves time and money, and at the same time does a better job of cleaning the logs.

The fact that these logs are given a good chance to soak is one of the reasons why ATLANTIC Bond is so white. The dunking method used to wash off very loose dirt, but it didn't get the dirt that must be soaked off. And the dunking method, incidentally, is still used pretty generally in the paper industry today.

You will find ATLANTIC Bond to be a uniformly white, uniformly good bond paper. The reason is that every step in the manufacture of ATLANTIC Bond is carefully controlled with uniformity as its objective.

We are consistant users of ATLANTIC BOND. Why not give us a trial on that next printing order of yours.

INDIANS WIN SECOND STRAIGHT FROM SUNFLOWER

CENTER QUINTET WINS BY 2 POINTS IN CLOSE BATTLE

Trichel Again Leads Locals To Victory Over Mississippians

The Northeast Center Indians, led by their stellar forward, Burt Trichel who looped six field goals and two free throws, made it too straight over the Sunflower junior college, taking last night's game 32 to 30.

Last night's game rivaled Friday's battle in thrills and the Northeast Center's victory was not certain until the final whistle ended the struggle that saw the lead change hands several times as the game neared the finish.

The Purple and Gold Warriors drew first blood when Pryor made good a free throw and then the score was tied at one-all when a Mississippian was fouled and his charity toss was good. Northeast Center's goal "getting" combination began working and with two timely shots by Trichel the Indians forged ahead, not to relinquish their lead until just before the first period ended when the score was 14 to 13 in favor of the locals. Just before the whistle was sounded a Sunflower player scored from midfloor to give his team a one-point lead at the half way period.

Soon after the second half started the Redskins warmed up to their task again and soon had overtaken the red-shirted Mississippians. However, their lead was never certain as at no time during the period was there a greater margin than three points between the two squads.

Duncan was the biggest threat for the Sunflower squad and this accurate shooting Mississippi forward bagged four field baskets and three foul goals to lead his team's scoring with eleven points.

The Indians' brilliant forward, Trichel, scored his points from every angle of the floor and several times he dribbled through the entire Sunflower defense to sink "crip" shots.

The offensive power of the Redskins was bogged down near the closing minutes of the game when "Red" May, who led his team in scoring in Friday night's game, was expelled from the game via the foul route after committing four personels.

Last night the Northeast Center squad looked even more impressive than before as their passing was much better and their air-tight defense was even stronger than in the first of the two-game series against the Mississippians.

COLLINSTON GIRLS PLAY LION OILERS

Outstanding Cage Attraction Slated In Collinston Gym Tuesday

COLLINSTON, La., Jan. 26.—(Special)—Tuesday night Collinston will play hosts to two of the best teams in this section, the boys meeting Wisner high in the opener and the girls playing El Dorado Lion Oilers in the nightcap.

The boys game will offer fast competition but the girls' game will be the real feature, inasmuch as El Dorado has one of the fastest teams in independent girls' basketball. They won third place in last year's national A. A. U. tournament.

Lion Oilers flash a display of all-America in the persons of Hazel Walker and Lucille Thurman, forwards, and Floy Maxcey, guard. Walker rated her honors by her individual efforts in last year's tournament, while Thurman is three-times all-America from Oklahoma City's national championship team. Maxcey might be termed truly a blond menace to the opposing team's offense with her uncanny sensing of opponents' passes.

The Collinston girls are undefeated in high school circles but have lost to Shreveport, 36-30. It is remembered that El Dorado defeated Shreveport by one lone point in the play-off for third place last year, so Collinston rooters are expecting a close game without any rash predictions of scores.

The boys' game opens at 7:30 while the girls' game begins at 8:30.

Penn State Starts 13th Year Under Ring Coach

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Jan. 26.—Penn State has started its 17th year of boxing and its 13th season under Coach Leo Houck, former professional middleweight of Lancaster, Pa. The Nittany Lions have won 25 individual championships and four team titles since the Eastern intercollegiate tournament was held for the first time in 1924.

READY FOR THE BIG RACE

BROWNS BANK ON PAIR OF ROOKIES

Thomas And Hillin Expected To Come Through For Hornsby

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—(AP)—A pair of minor league twirlers who between them have rolled up the impressive record of 52 victories against 16 defeats, will blossom out in the livery of the St. Louis Browns this season.

These sharpshooters, whose combined record is better than the 1934 winning percentage of Dizzy Dean and Co., are Fay Thomas, drafted from Los Angeles of the Pacific Coast league, and Ashley Hillin, from San Antonio of the Texas league. Both are right-handers.

Thomas turned in one of the best baseball performances of 1934 with 28 victories and four defeats. Hillin won 24 games and dropped 12.

Ed Barrow, business manager of the Yanks, calls Hal Trosky, sensational young first sacker of the Cleveland Indians, the outstanding 1934 rookie. Trosky collected 35 home runs for the Indians. Among 1934 freshmen stars battling to maintain the pace as sophomores include Paul Dean and Bill Delancey, the Cardinal battery; Schoolboy Rowe and Elden Auker, Tiger pitching aces; Buck Newsome and Harland Clift, pitcher and infielder of the Browns; Harry (Cookie) Lavagetto, the Pirate second baseman; Curt Davis, pitching "find" of the Phillies, and his team-mate, Infielder Chiozza; and Zeke Bonura, White Sox first baseman.

St. Louis fans are patting Rogers Hornsby on the back for his most recent deal which sent Pitcher Irving (Bump) Hadley to Washington for Catcher Luke Sewell and cash and then passed Sewell right along to the White Sox for still more cash.

The trade didn't cripple the Browns much and left Hornsby feeling the cheerful crinkle of about $20,000 with which to shop around for young outfielders.

CENTENARY GRID CARD COMPLETED

Gentlemen To Play Stiffest Schedule In History Next Fall

SHREVEPORT, Jan. 26.—(Special)—The scheduling of Texas university at Austin, October 19, completed Centenary's 1935 football schedule, which gives the Gents an eleven-game program.

This fall's ambitious schedule gives the charges of Coaches Parker and Renfro the toughest schedule ever arranged for the local gridmen.

Besides the annual clashes in the Southwest conference, the Gents will play two intersectional games, meeting the University of Arizona at Shreveport on October 5 and ending the season Thanksgiving at Cincinnati against the powerful Xavier university football team. Texas, T. C. U., Baylor, and Texas A. and M., will be the local team's Southwest conference opponents.

The Maroon and White will open the season against Louisiana college at Pineville, September 19. Louisiana Normal will come to Shreveport for their annual game on September 28, and this will be the Gentlemen's first home game. Starting with Arizona on October 5, the Gents will play nine major games in as many weeks, something that no Centenary team has ever undertaken in the past.

The complete schedule:

Sept. 19.—Louisiana college, Pineville.

Sept. 28. — Louisiana Normal, Shreveport.

Oct. 5.—Arizona university, Shreveport.

Oct. 12.—Texas A. and M., Shreveport.

Oct. 19.—Texas university, Austin, Tex.

Oct. 26.—T. C. U., Shreveport.

Nov. 1.—Loyola university, New Orleans.

Nov. 9.—Tulsa university, Shreveport.

Nov. 16.—Baylor university, Shreveport.

Nov. 23.—Ole Miss, Oxford, Miss.

Nov. 29.—Xavier university, Cincinnati.

Approximately 95 per cent of the dates imported into this country are produced in Iraq; 47,492,841 pounds of Iraq dates were imported in 1933.

TECH FIVE MEETS GENTS IN RETURN CONTEST MONDAY

Capacity Crowd Expected To See Thrilling Game At Tech Gym

RUSTON, La., Jan. 26.—(Special)—Local basketball is expected to reach its peak here Monday night when the Louisiana Tech cagers meet the Centenary college squad in a return battle. The fray is scheduled to start at 7:30.

Ruston fans have expressed themselves as believing the contest here Monday night between the Bulldogs and the Gents will top all cage programs here this season both in attendance and thrills. A large crowd of Tech fans followed their team to the Centenary camp Saturday night and preparations are being made to welcome an equally large group from Shreveport.

The Techmen are in excellent condition, according to a report given out by Coach "Eddie" McLane. The Bulldogs have held to the idea that they perform better on home courts and have promised to give the Gents all they have in their last game of the season with the Shreveporters.

Coach McLane's drills this week have centered around the replacements for his various first string men. He announced that in all probability, Coody, outstanding forward, will find the starting position Monday night. Coody has been giving Mitchell and Barham, regular forwards, plenty to worry about all season.

In addition to the regular cage program there will be other attractions. Although definite plans have not been completed, it was stated that the fans would be furnished extra entertainment during the half to amuse them while coaches are giving their teams a few pointers.

The cheer leaders will be out to lead the yells of the Tech students and ardent supporters of the Bulldogs. It is quite possible that the Gents will have their noise makers on hand to lead the Shreveporters who follow the Centenary cagers to the Ruston stronghold.

MILAM ELECTED HEAD OF TULANE ALUMNI CHAPTER

Coach Cox Tells Of Grid Prospects At Annual Banquet Here

Dr. D. T. Milam, well known Monroe physician, was elected president of the First District Tulane Alumni association at the annual banquet of the association last night which had as guests of honor Head Coach Ted Cox and four other Tulane officials. A large crowd of Tulane alumni and guests attended the affair, which was held at the Virginia hotel. Dr. Milam succeeds Dr. William L. Bendel as president of the association.

Possibly the most interesting feature of the banquet, as far as Green Wave supporters were concerned, was the short talk on football prospects given by Coach Cox. Declaring that Tulane would lose nine members of its starting lineup this spring, the big Greenie mentor said he hoped to replace the veterans with good material and named several players who are expected to fill the gaps acceptably.

Coach Cox paid high tribute to the 1934 football team.

"It was the finest team I've ever seen at Tulane," he said. "I don't mean that the players were better than others who have starred for Tulane, but the 1934 squad had the true Tulane spirit. They had the desire to win and that's what made them great."

Coach Cox said that he will count on David Pace and George Manteris, two Monroe boys who are members of the squad, to come through for him next year. Pace won his letter as a sophomore last fall and the big tackle is expected to win a regular berth next fall. The former Ouachita lineman was injured early in the season but Coach Cox said he proved very useful during the late games. Manteris, former Neville star, was an outstanding back on the freshman team last fall and probably will see some action on the varsity in 1935, Cox said.

With a "suicide" schedule awaiting the team in 1935, Coach Cox said the prospects for a winner weren't especially bright, but warned his listeners that football coaches sometimes are a bit gloomy over their chances of turning out a winning team.

Other Tulane officials present were Louis Rosen, president of the Tulane Alumni association; Prof. Robert Elfasser, representing President Dinwiddie; Charlie Rucker, general manager of the alumni association, and Clifford Favrot, alumni secretary, all of New Orleans. Prof. Elfasser extended greetings from President Dinwiddie and outlined plans for the centennial celebration to be held next June at Tulane. Rosen, Rucker and Favrot told of alumni association activities.

Vice president, George Guerriero; secretary-treasurer, John "Red" McCormick; delegate to the Tulane Alumni association meeting at New Orleans, Dr. D. I. Hirsch; alternate, Dr. Bendel. Two members of the executive committee of the local association were appointed by President Milam as follows: Harry Oliver and Dr. Bendel. A member of the executive committee from each parish of the district will be appointed later.

Dr. Bendel presided at last night's banquet. Rev. E. F. Hayward said the invocation and Mayor Arnold Bernstein officially welcomed the guests to Monroe. C. Cage sang two Tulane songs, accompanied at the piano by Leon Hammonds.

LAYDEN STARS ON TRACK

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 26.—Mike Layden, younger brother of Elmer Layden, Notre Dame grid coach, is figured to be as big a help to his brother on the track squad as he was in football. Mike was responsible for the grid victory over Southern California in 1934 and his hurdling is expected to be a large factor in the success of the Irish thinly-clads.

CAGE STARS AT COLLINSTON

Here are two members of the Lion Oilers, strong cage sextette of El Dorado, Ark., who will meet the state champion Collinston girls at Collinston Tuesday night. In the above photo, Walker, all-American forward, is demonstrating the dribble to Maxcey, all-American guard. Collinston hopes to hand the Oilers one of their few defeats of the season Tuesday.

Irish Ring Prestige May Be Regained By Heavies

Doyle And O'Mahoney Invade U. S. To Stage Title Campaign

BOSTON, Jan. 26.—Mourning sons of Ireland who bewail the fact that there is only one Celtic boxing champion, Jimmy McLarnin; that there isn't a wrestler of any note of Irish extraction; and that Notre Dame football teams have been monopolized by Poles and Slavs, take cheer.

Joe Sullivan, now ill, will captain the Notre Dame varsity next fall. Jack Doyle is coming over from the Emerald Isle to wage war in American rings. Daniel O'Mahoney, a neat chunk of a Mick fresh from the auld sod, is being built up as a wrestling attraction.

There hasn't been anything like it since the New York Irish shouted, "Coffey first!" when it was time for Jim Coffey, the Roscommon Giant, to sidle through the hemp.

The fight game can stand a bit of Irish blood. It hasn't had any too much of it since the days of John L. Sullivan, Jake Kilrain, and James J. Corbett.

Doyle, 22, is not a stranger to fistic fans. Few Americans have seen him, but the rest have read of his exploits in England. Jack has won 26 of 37 professional starts by knockouts. Try to name a heavyweight with a record like this. Jack's 37th bout resulted in his fouling Jack Peterson, the Welsh Dane.

If Doyle lives up to half the reputation English sports writers have given him—he once was described as "a fighting monster, teeth clenched, eyes awesome in the viciousness with which they roared fire"—he shortly should be knocking at the door. The British wrote and said the same thing about Prime Beef Carnera, and the Venetian Leviathan did fairly well.

It would seem that Doyle's biggest handicap as a ring star is that he has a splendid tenor voice. That may be a break. In the event that he is starched in an early effort, it at least should not be necessary for him to seek employment as a doorman.

Doyle, according to his American representative, Walter (Good Time Charley) Friedman, the fellow who engineered the deal that brought Carnera to the land of the free and the home of the brave, is due on Feb. 6, and immediately will start training for a joust in Boston, where Irish athletes are at a premium.

O'Mahoney, 22, scaling 220, and perfectly proportioned, threw Rudy Dusek twice in 22 minutes and 28 seconds in Boston the other night.

O'Mahoney accomplished the feat with his "Irish Whip," which starts with his grasping his opponent's right wrist and jerking his rival forward. Instead of being jarred by a body check, the other fellow finds himself pulled past O'Mahoney, and then whirled over the Mick's shoulder in a flying mare than usually spells finish.

O'Mahoney has an original idea in regard to his campaign in the United States. Carried out, it would seem strange indeed.

O'Mahoney insists that he will not grapple more than once a week and that he will not carry an adversary along for show purposes.

It is plain that Ireland's Danny requires the education he is certain to receive in American wrestling institutions.

Hurdling Halfbacks Suit Michigan State Mentor

EAST LANSING, Mich., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Coaches Charles Bachman and Miles Casteel of Michigan State college are getting along just dandy.

KLICK'S MANAGER PROTESTS JUDGES

Officials For Bout With Ross Monday Night Cause Argument

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Ray Carlin spoke up in a meeting today and loudly demanded "something to say" about who will judge the Ross-Klick bout here Monday night.

Whether for effect, or for certain, Carlin declared his man will not enter the ring unless he is permitted to cross some names off the boxing commission's list of eligible judges.

Leo Shea, he said, was a satisfactory choice for referee, but:

"I will insist the commissioners let me say something about who will judge this fight. I want their list and I will do the scratching of those I object to and I will not let Klick go in the ring unless they are withdrawn.

"Frankie has spent a lot of time getting ready for this fight and is in the best shape of his career. I don't want a pair of incompetents in their passing bad judgment. The commissioners will have to let me have my way in this matter. I have conceded every other point so far. . . ."

Ross and Klock both were pronounced in good shape and well under the 140-pound limit after final heavy workouts today. So were Joe Knight of Cairo, Ga., and Tony Shucco of Boston, light heavies who meet in the 10-round semi-final.

Champion Max Baer will exhibit and his brother, Buddy, will fight in short supporting bouts.

BATON ROUGE IS NEXT OPPONENT OF TIGER BOXERS

Neville Mittmen Face Tough Assignment Here Friday Night

Following their victory over Tallulah here Friday night, Neville high school's boxers will begin intensive preparations Monday for the invasion of Baton Rouge high school's strong team. The two squads clash at Neville gym Friday night in what is expected to be one of the best cards of the season. The show is slated to get under way at 7:30 o'clock.

Coach Percy Brown used his reserves largely against Tallulah Friday night and yesterday announced that his entire squad should be in excellent shape for the battle with the Capital City aggregation of mittmen. The definite lineup of bouts will be announced within the next couple of days, Coach Brown said.

Baton Rouge boxers tied for second place in last year's high school tournament and Coach Hank Stovall, former Louisiana State university star, has practically the same squad available this season. Baton Rouge won the heavyweight trophy at the state tourney. It was in last year's meet that Neville won the state championship by piling up the necessary margin of points in both light and heavyweight divisions.

Baton Rouge has a well balanced team but five of their entries are better than the usual run of high school boxers. Carol Bozeman won the heavyweight championship last year and he's back, together with Gayle Monget, second place winner last year in the 175-pound class. However, these two stars may not see action, for the Neville team has not uncovered entries in the light heavyweight and heavyweight divisions and it is unlikely that Coach Brown will have a man to send after Bozeman and Monget Friday night.

Albert Mickal, cousin of the famed Abe Mickal of L. S. U., will be Baton Rouge's entry in the 105-pound class. Mickal won third place in the 98-pound division last year. J. L. Golson was runner-up in the 126-pound class at the state tourney and he's again fighting at that weight. J. D. Addison was third place winner in the tournament's 135-pound division and he also is still boxing in that class.

With Neville spotting Baton Rouge two points when the Tigers forfeit the 175-pound and heavyweight bouts, the local team will have to pile up a big margin in the lighter weights. That may not be so easy with Mickal, Golson and Addison all reported improved over last year. However, Coach Brown believes his squad will more than hold its own against the strong invading team and the Tigers are anxious to protect their record of no defeats in dual meets this year.

Friday night's meeting between Neville and Baton Rouge high will be the first of two matches the two teams will fight this season. On February 28 the Tigers go to Baton Rouge for a return card.

Coach Brown said last night that officials for the star show had not been selected.

Lasky's Carelessness Cost Him Bout With Hamas

By John J. Romano

Art Lasky had his big moment in the fourth round of his fight with Steve Hamas. Intent on scoring a knockout the Minneapolis Bomber overshot the mark with a ponderous right swing. Instead of drawing the blow back he raked Steve's jaw with the back of his glove and was promptly penalized with the loss of the round and the fight. Otherwise he would not be trying to jump the 'gun' to put him in line for a match with champion Max Baer.

Art's brother-manager, Maurice, started his business career as a carpet salesman. The plains of the middle west was his territory. Apparently his gaudy patterns and neat sales talk had no effect on the thrifty housewives of dirt farmers, because Maurice began looking around for another job.

Meanwhile, younger brother Art, a tall, gangling youth still in his teens, had an idea he was some shucks with the leather mittens. He practiced daily with the boys in his neighborhood but when his parents heard about his doings they were deeply offended and shocked. They could not understand why a boy brought up in the strict orthodox Jewish manner would want to hurt a fellow-being without cause. But Maurice had other ideas. If his kid brother wanted to be a fighter it was all right with him. Didn't Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney split up two million-dollar purses? That kind of money was good business and no one passes up a chance to make a fortune.

Maurice took his brother out of town to see what he could do in the prize ring—Waterloo, Iowa, to be exact. It was then that Maurice coined the phrase, "Art took up where Napoleon left off. Instead of winding up on the Isle of Elba he won't stop until he is crowned king of the heavyweights."

Art compiled an impressive string of victories. He grew into a big fellow and he became a good box office attraction. Offered a chance to meet Primo Carnera on the latter's grand All-America Sucker Tour he quickly snapped it up. Instead of being overawed by the size and reputation of the Italian, Lasky sailed right in and swapped blow for blow with the man who was later destined to become the champion. It was a no decision affair but the consensus of experts was that Lasky was the winner.

Lasky looked like the best heavyweight in the middle west until he bumped into Charley Retzlaff. He carried the fight to his rival and took a severe battering around the face. A deep wound over the eye forced the referee to halt the fight in the sixth round for the only knockout registered against him.

Lasky took a long rest. Returning he learned that the fans have notoriously short memories and that he was practically forgott'n. A change of scenery was in order so they visited Los Angeles. There they were confronted with the unpleasant task of accepting any opponent by the promoters at ridiculous figures. It was either fight or starve, and the Laskys chose to eat. But they could not pay their hotel bills and the outlook was gloomy until they were offered an opportunity in the movies. Art 'doubled' for Max Bear in the picture Max was making with Primo Carnera in their fight-acting to convince him he would win from Primo should they ever meet for the title. Lasky has the same idea about Baer. The latter thinks so little of Lasky's ability that he is willing to fight him and another man on the same night.

Beats Levinsky and Ramage

Four weeks behind in his hotel bill, Maurice pleaded with the promoters to bring out a fighter who would draw some real money with Art. King Levinsky was secured. The Kingfish disappeared on the eve of the fight and made matters worse. But the California boxing commission prevailed upon Levinsky to return and go through with the match. Lasky won and then took on Lee Ramage with the same rsult.

The Laskys then decided to move into New York to atone for a poor showing made a year earlier. You know what happened. Instead of losing prestige by the unfavorable award, Art Lasky found favor with the fans when Hamas refused to meet him in a return fight over the 15-round route.

Maurice Lasky had one of his inspirations. He reasoned he could get the jump on other contenders for Baer's title by posting a check and challenge with the New York boxing commission. He forgot one little important item. He failed to have the check certified and his inspiration went out the window. Fight managers' checks have a peculiar habit of bouncing back marked 'Insufficient Funds.' Therefore, the commission considers them just a little bit of fancy paper unless certified.

Maurice's oversight prevented him from cashing in on the publicity that was bound to follow his designation as number one challenger for the heavyweight crown. Now he will have to dispose of James J. Braddock Friday evening before a definite decision is made by the commission.

INDIANS WIN SECOND STRAIGHT FROM SUNFLOWER

Trichel Again Leads Locals To Victory Over Mississippians

The Northeast Center Indians, led by their stellar forward, Burt Trichel who looped six field goals and two free throws, made it too straight over the Sunflower junior college, taking last night's game 32 to 30.

Last night's game rivaled Friday's battle in thrills and the Northeast Center's victory was not certain until the final whistle ended the struggle that saw the lead change hands several times as the game neared the finish.

The Purple and Gold Warriors drew first blood when Pryor made good a free throw and then the score was tied at one-all when a Mississippian was fouled and his charity toss was good. Northeast Center's goal "getting" combination began working and with two timely shots by Trichel the Indians forged ahead, not to relinquish their lead until just before the first period ended when the score was 14 to 13 in favor of the locals. Just before the whistle was sounded a Sunflower player scored from midfloor to give his team a one-point lead at the half way period.

Soon after the second half started the Redskins warmed up to their task again and soon had overtaken the red-shirted Mississippians. However, their lead was never certain as at no time during the period was there a greater margin than three points between the two squads.

Duncan was the biggest threat for the Sunflower squad and this accurate shooting Mississippi forward bagged four field baskets and three foul goals to lead his team's scoring with eleven points.

The Indians' brilliant forward, Trichel, scored his points from every angle of the floor and several times he dribbled through the entire Sunflower defense to sink "crip" shots.

The offensive power of the Redskins was bogged down near the closing minutes of the game when "Red" May, who led his team in scoring in Friday night's game, was expelled from the game via the foul route after committing four personels.

Last night the Northeast Center squad looked even more impressive than before as their passing was much better and their air-tight defense was even stronger than in the first of the two-game series against the Mississippians.

COLLINSTON GIRLS PLAY LION OILERS

COLLINSTON, La., Jan. 26.—(Special)—Tuesday night Collinston will play hosts to two of the best teams in this section, the boys meeting Wisner high in the opener and the girls playing El Dorado Lion Oilers in the nightcap.

The boys game will offer fast competition but the girls' game will be the real feature, inasmuch as El Dorado has one of the fastest teams in independent girls' basketball. They won third place in last year's national A. A. U. tournament.

Lion Oilers flash a display of all-America in the persons of Hazel Walker and Lucille Thurman, forwards, and Floy Maxcey, guard. Walker rated her honors by her individual efforts in last year's tournament, while Thurman is three-times all-America from Oklahoma City's national championship team. Maxcey might be termed truly a blond menace to the opposing team's offense with her uncanny sensing of opponents' passes.

The Collinston girls are undefeated in high school circles but have lost to Shreveport, 36-30. It is remembered that El Dorado defeated Shreveport by one lone point in the playoff for third place last year, so Collinston rooters are expecting a close game without any rash predictions of scores.

The boys' game opens at 7:30 while the girls' game begins at 8:30.

Penn State Starts 13th Year Under Ring Coach

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Jan. 26.—Penn State has started its 17th year of boxing and its 13th season under Coach Leo Houck, former professional middleweight of Lancaster, Pa. The Nittany Lions have won 25 individual championships and four team titles since the Eastern intercollegiate tournament was held for the first time, in 1924.

READY FOR THE BIG RACE

BROWNS BANK ON PAIR OF ROOKIES

Thomas And Hillin Expected To Come Through For Hornsby

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—(AP)—A pair of minor league twirlers who between them have rolled up the impressive record of 52 victories against 16 defeats, will blossom out in the livery of the St. Louis Browns this season.

These sharpshooters, whose combined record is better than the 1931 winning percentage of Dizzy Dean and Co., are Fay Thomas, drafted from Los Angeles of the Pacific Coast league, and Ashley Hillin, from San Antonio of the Texas league. Both are right-handers.

Thomas turned in one of the best baseball performances of 1934 with 28 victories and four defeats. Hillin won 24 games and dropped 12.

Ed Barrow, business manager of the Yanks, calls Hal Trosky, sensational young first sacker of the Cleveland Indians, the outstanding 1934 rookie. Trosky collected 35 home runs for the Indians. Among 1934 freshmen stars battling to maintain the pace assophomores include Paul Dean and Bil. Delancey, the Cardinal battery; Schoolboy Rowe and Elden Auker, Tiger pitching aces; Buck Newsome and Harland Clift, pitcher and infielder of the Browns; Harry (Cookie) Lavagetto, the Pirate second baseman; Curt Davis, pitching "find" of the Phillies, and his team-mate, Infielder Chiozza; and Zeke Bonura, White Sox first baseman.

St. Louis fans are patting Rogers Hornsby on the back for his most recent deal which sent Pitcher Irving (Bump) Hadley to Washington for Catcher Luke Sewell and cash and then passed Sewell right along to the White Sox for still more cash.

The trade didn't cripple the Browns much and left Hornsby feeling the cheerful crinkle of about $30,000 with which to shop around for young outfielders.

CENTENARY GRID CARD COMPLETED

Gentlemen To Play Stiffest Schedule In History Next Fall

SHREVEPORT, Jan. 26.—(Special)—The scheduling of Texas university at Austin, October 19, completed Centenary's 1935 football schedule, which gives the Gents an eleven-game program.

This fall's ambitious schedule gives the charges of Coaches Parker and Renfro the toughest schedule ever arranged for the local gridmen.

Besides the annual clashes in the Southwest conference, the Gents will play two intersectional games, meeting the University of Arizona at Shreveport on October 5 and ending the season Thanksgiving at Cincinnati against the powerful Xavier university football team. Texas, T. C. U., Baylor, and Texas A. and M., will be the local team's Southwest conference opponents.

The Maroon and White will open the season against Louisiana college at Pineville, September 19. Louisiana Normal will come to Shreveport for their annual game on September 28, and this will be the Gentlemen's first home game. Starting with Arizona on October 5, the Gents will play nine major games in as many weeks, something that no Centenary team has ever undertaken in the past.

The complete schedule:

Sept. 19.—Louisiana college, Pineville.

Sept. 28. — Louisiana Normal, Shreveport.

Oct. 5.—Arizona university, Shreveport.

Oct. 12.—Texas A. and M., Shreveport.

Oct. 19.—Texas university, Austin, Tex.

Oct. 26.—T. C. U., Shreveport.

Nov. 1.—Loyola university, New Orleans.

Nov. 9.—Tulsa university, Shreveport.

Nov. 16.—Baylor university, Shreveport.

Nov. 23.—Ole Miss, Oxford, Miss.

Nov. 29.—Xavier university, Cincinnati.

Approximately 95 per cent of the dates imported into this country are produced in Iraq; 47,492,841 pounds of Iraq dates were imported in 1933.

TECH FIVE MEETS GENTS IN RETURN CONTEST MONDAY

RUSTON, La., Jan. 26.—(Special)—Local basketball is expected to reach its peak here Monday night when the Louisiana Tech cagers meet the Centenary college squad in a return battle. The fray is scheduled to start at 7:30.

Ruston fans have expressed themselves as believing the contest here Monday night between the Bulldogs and the Gents will top all cage programs here this season both in attendance and thrills. A large crowd of Tech fans followed their team to the Centenary camp Saturday night and preparations are being made to welcome an equally large group from Shreveport.

The Techmen are in excellent condition, according to a report given out by Coach "Eddie" McLane. The Bulldogs have held to the idea that they perform better on home courts and have promised to give the Gents all they have in their last game of the season with the Shreveporters.

Coach McLane's drills this week have centered around the replacements for his various first string men. He announced that in all probability, Coody, outstanding forward, will find the starting position Monday night. Coody has been giving Mitchell and Barham, regular forwards, plenty to worry about all season.

In addition to the regular cage program there will be other attractions. Although definite plans have not been completed, it was stated that the fans would be furnished extra entertainment during the half to amuse them while coaches are giving their teams a few pointers.

The cheer leaders will be out to lead the yells of the Tech students and ardent supporters of the Bulldogs. It is quite possible that the Gents will have their noise makers on hand to lead the Shreveporters who follow the Centenary cagers to the Ruston stronghold.

MILAM ELECTED HEAD OF TULANE ALUMNI CHAPTER

Dr. D. T. Milam, well known Monroe physician, was elected president of the First District Tulane Alumni association at the annual banquet of the association last night which had as guests of honor Head Coach Ted Cox and four other Tulane officials. A large crowd of Tulane alumni and guests attended the affair, which was held at the Virginia hotel. Dr. Milam succeeds Dr. William L. Bendel as president of the association.

Possibly the most interesting feature of the banquet, as far as Green Wave supporters were concerned, was the short talk on football prospects given by Coach Cox. Declaring that Tulane would lose nine members of its starting lineup this spring, the big Greenie mentor said he hoped to replace the veterans with good material and named several players who are expected to fill the gaps acceptably.

Coach Cox paid high tribute to the 1934 football team.

"It was the finest team I've ever seen at Tulane," he said. "I don't mean that the players were better than others who have starred for Tulane, but the 1934 squad had the true Tulane spirit. They had the desire to win and that's what made them great."

Coach Cox said that he will count on David Pace and George Manteris, two Monroe boys who are members of the squad, to come through for him next year. Pace won his letter as a sophomore last fall and the big tackle is expected to win a regular berth next fall. The former Ouachita lineman was injured early in the season but Coach Cox said he proved very useful during the late games. Manteris, former Neville star, was an outstanding back on the freshman team last fall and probably will see some action on the varsity in 1935, Cox said.

With a "suicide" schedule awaiting the team in 1935, Coach Cox said the prospects for a winner weren't especially bright, but warned his listeners that football coaches sometimes are a bit gloomy over their chances of turning out a winning team.

Other Tulane officials present were Louis Rosen, president of the Tulane Alumni association; Prof. Robert Elfasser, representing President Dinwiddie; Charlie Rucker, general manager of the alumni association, and Clifford Favrot, alumni secretary, all of New Orleans. Prof. Elfasser extended greetings from President Dinwiddie and outlined plans for the centennial celebration to be held next June at Tulane. Rosen, Rucker and Favrot told of alumni association activities.

Vice president, George Guerriero; secretary-treasurer, John "Red" McCormick; delegate to the Tulane Alumni association meeting at New Orleans, Dr. D. I. Hirsch; alternate, Dr. Bendel. Two members of the executive committee of the local association were appointed by President Milam as follows: Harry Oliver and Dr. Bendel. A member of the executive committee from each parish of the district will be appointed later.

Dr. Bendel presided at last night's banquet. Rev. E. F. Hayward said the invocation and Mayor Arnold Bernstein officially welcomed the guests to Monroe. C. Cage sang two Tulane songs, accompanied at the piano by Leon Hammonds.

LAYDEN STARS ON TRACK

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 26.—Mike Layden, younger brother of Elmer Layden, Notre Dame grid coach, is figured to be as big a help to his brother on the track squad as he was in football. Mike was responsible for the grid victory over Southern California in 1934 and his hurdling is expected to be a large factor in the success of the Irish thinly-clads.

CAGE STARS AT COLLINSTON

Here are two members of the Lion Oilers, strong cage sextette of El Dorado, Ark., who will meet the state champion Collinston girls at Collinston Tuesday night. In the above photo, Walker, all-American forward, is demonstrating the dribble to Maxcey, all-American guard. Collinston hopes to hand the Oilers one of their few defeats of the season Tuesday.

Irish Ring Prestige May Be Regained By Heavies

BOSTON, Jan. 26.—Mourning sons of Ireland who bewail the fact that there is only one Celtic boxing champion, Jimmy McLarnin; that there isn't a wrestler of any note of Irish extraction; and that Notre Dame football teams have been monopolized by Poles and Slavs, take cheer.

Joe Sullivan, now ill, will captain the Notre Dame varsity next fall. Jack Doyle is coming over from the Emerald Isle to wage war in American rings. Daniel O'Mahoney, a neat chunk of a Mick fresh from the ould sod, is being built up as a wrestling attraction.

There hasn't been anything like it since the New York Irish shouted, "Coffey first!" when it was time for Jim Coffey, the Roscommon Giant, to sidle through the hemp.

The fight game can stand a bit of Irish blood. It hasn't had any too much of it since the days of John L. Sullivan, Jake Kilrain, and James J. Corbett.

Doyle, 22, is not a stranger to fistic fans. Few Americans have seen him, but the rest have read of his exploits in England. Jack has won 36 of 37 professional starts by knockouts. Try to name a heavyweight with a record like this. Jack's 37th bout resulted in his fouling Jack Peterson, the Welsh Dane.

If Doyle lives up to half the reputation English sports writers have given him—he once was described as "a fighting monster, teeth clenched, eyes awesome in the viciousness with which they roared fire"—he shortly should be knocking at the door. The British wrote and said the same thing about Prime Beef Carnera, and the Venetian Leviathan did fairly well.

It would seem that Doyle's biggest handicap as a ring star is that he has a splendid tenor voice. That may be a break. In the event that he is starched in an early effort, it at least should not be necessary for him to seek employment as a doorman.

Doyle, according to his American representative, Walter (Good Time Charley) Friedman, the fellow who engineered the deal that brought Carnera to the land of the free and the home of the brave, is due on Feb. 6, and immediately will start training for a joust in Boston, where Irish athletes are at a premium.

O'Mahoney, 22, scaling 220, and perfectly proportioned, threw Rudy Dusek twice in 22 minutes and 28 seconds in Boston the other night.

O'Mahoney accomplished the feat with his "Irish Whip," which starts with his grasping his opponent's right wrist and jerking his rival forward. Instead of being jarred by a body check, the other fellow finds himself pulled past O'Mahoney, and then whirled over the Mick's shoulder in a flying mare than usually spells finish.

O'Mahoney has an original idea in regard to his campaign in the United States. Carried out, it would seem strange indeed.

O'Mahoney insists that he will not grapple more than once a week and that he will not carry an adversary along for show purposes.

It is plain that Ireland's Danny requires the education he is certain to receive in American wrestling institutions.

Hurdling Halfbacks Suit Michigan State Mentor

EAST LANSING, Mich., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Coaches Charles Bachman and Miles Casteel of Michigan State college are getting along just dandy.

KLICK'S MANAGER PROTESTS JUDGES

Officials For Bout With Ross Monday Night Cause Argument

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Ray Carlin spoke up in a meeting today and loudly demanded "something to say" about who will judge the Ross-Klick bout here Monday night.

Whether for effect, or for certain, Carlin declared his man will not enter the ring unless he is permitted to cross some names off the boxing commission's list of eligible judges.

Leo Shea, he said, was a satisfactory choice for referee, but:

"I will insist the commissioners let me say something about who will judge this fight. I want their list and I will do the scratching of those I object to and I will not let Klick go in the ring unless they are withdrawn.

"Frankie has spent a lot of time getting ready for this fight and is in the best shape of his career. I don't want a pair of incompetents in their passing bad judgment. The commissioners will have to let me have my way in this matter. I have conceded every other point so far. . . ."

Ross and Klock both were pronounced in good shape and well under the 140-pound limit after final heavy workouts today. So were Joe Knight of Cairo, Ga., and Tony Shucco of Boston, light heavies who meet in the 10-round semi-final.

Champion Max Baer will exhibit and his brother, Buddy, will fight in short supporting bouts.

BATON ROUGE IS NEXT OPPONENT OF TIGER BOXERS

Following their victory over Tallulah here Friday night, Neville high school's boxers will begin intensive preparations Monday for the invasion of Baton Rouge high school's strong team. The two squads clash at Neville gym Friday night in what is expected to be one of the best cards of the season. The show is slated to get under way at 7:30 o'clock.

Coach Percy Brown used his reserves largely against Tallulah Friday night and yesterday announced that his entire squad should be in excellent shape for the battle with the Capital City aggregation of mittmen. The definite lineup of bouts will be announced within the next couple of days, Coach Brown said.

Baton Rouge boxers tied for second place in last year's high school tournament and Coach Hank Stovall, former Louisiana State university star, has practically the same squad available this season. Baton Rouge won the heavyweight trophy at the state tourney. It was in last year's meet that Neville won the state championship by piling up the necessary margin of points in both light and heavyweight divisions.

Baton Rouge has a well balanced team but five of their entries are better than the usual run of high school boxers. Carol Bozeman won the heavyweight championship last year and he's back, together with Gayle Monget, second place winner last year in the 175-pound class. However, these two stars may not see action, for the Neville team has not uncovered entries in the light heavyweight and heavyweight divisions and it is unlikely that Coach Brown will have a man to send after Bozeman and Monget Friday night.

Albert Mickal, cousin of the famed Abe Mickal of L. S. U., will be Baton Rouge's entry in the 105-pound class. Mickal won third place in the 98-pound division last year. J. L. Golson was runner-up in the 126-pound class at the state tourney and he's again fighting at that weight. J. D. Addison was third place winner in the tournament's 135-pound division and he also is still boxing in that class.

With Neville spotting Baton Rouge two points when the Tigers forfeit the 175-pound and heavyweight bouts, the local team will have to pile up a big margin in the lighter weights. That may not be so easy with Mickal, Golson and Addison all reported improved over last year. However, Coach Brown believes his squad will more than hold its own against the strong invading team and the Tigers are anxious to protect their record of no defeats in dual meets this year.

Friday night's meeting between Neville and Baton Rouge high will be the first of two matches the two teams will fight this season. On February 28 the Tigers go to Baton Rouge for a return card.

Coach Brown said last night that officials for the star show had not been selected.

Lasky's Carelessness Cost Him Bout With Hamas

Instead of drawing the blow back he raked Steve's jaw with the back of his glove and was promptly penalized with the loss of the round and the fight. Otherwise he would not be trying to jump the 'gun' to put him in line for a match with champion Max Baer.

Art's brother-manager, Maurice, started his business career as a carpet salesman. The plains of the middle west was his territory. Apparently his gaudy patterns and neat sales talk had no effect on the thrifty housewives of dirt farmers, because Maurice began looking around for another job.

Meanwhile, younger brother Art, a tall, gangling youth still in his teens, had an idea he was some shucks with the leather mittens. He practiced daily with the boys in his neighborhood but when his parents heard about his doings they were deeply offended and shocked. They could not understand why a boy brought up in the strict orthodox Jewish manner would want to hurt a fellow-being without cause. But Maurice had other ideas. If his kid brother wanted to be a fighter it was all right with him. Didn't Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney split up two million-dollar purses? That kind of money was good business and no one passes up a chance to make a fortune.

Maurice took his brother out of town to see what he could do in the prize ring—Waterloo, Iowa, to be exact. It was then that Maurice coined the phrase, "Art took up where Napoleon left off. Instead of winding up on the Isle of Elba he won't stop until he is crowned king of the heavyweights."

Art compiled an impressive string of victories. He grew into a big fellow and he became a good box office attraction. Offered a chance to meet Primo Carnera on the latter's grand All-America Sucker Tour he quickly snapped it up. Instead of being overawed by the size and reputation of the Italian, Lasky sailed right in and swapped blow for blow with the man who was later destined to become the champion. It was a no decision affair but the consensus of experts was that Lasky was the winner.

Lasky looked like the best heavyweight in the middle west until he bumped into Charley Retzlaff. He carried the fight to his rival and took a severe battering around the face. A deep wound over the eye forced the referee to halt the fight in the sixth round for the only knockout registered against him.

Lasky took a long rest. Returning he learned that the fans have notoriously short memories and that he was practically forgotten. A change of scenery was in order so they visited Los Angeles. There they were confronted with the unpleasant task of accepting any opponent by the promoters at ridiculous figures. It was either fight or starve, and the Laskys chose to eat. But they could not pay their hotel bills and the outlook was gloomy until they were offered an opportunity in the movies. Art 'doubled' for Max Bear in the picture Max was making with Primo Carnera in their fight-acting to convince him he would win from Primo should they ever meet for the title. Lasky has the same idea about Baer. The latter thinks so little of Lasky's ability that he is willing to fight him and another man on the same night.

Beats Levinsky and Ramage

Four weeks behind in his hotel bill, Maurice pleaded with the promoters to bring out a fighter who would draw some real money with Art. King Levinsky was secured. The Kingfish disappeared on the eve of the fight and made matters worse. But the California boxing commission prevailed upon Levinsky to return and go through with the match. Lasky won and then took on Lee Ramage with the same rsult.

The Laskys then decided to move into New York to atone for a poor showing made a year earlier. You know what happened. Instead of losing prestige by the unfavorable award, Art Lasky found favor with the fans when Hamas refused to meet him in a return fight over the 15-round route.

Maurice Lasky had one of his inspirations. He reasoned he could get the jump on other contenders for Baer's title by posting a check and challenge with the New York boxing commission. He forgot one little important item. He failed to have the check certified and his inspiration went out the window. Fight managers' checks have a peculiar habit of bouncing back marked 'Insufficient Funds.' Therefore, the commission considers them just a little bit of fancy paper unless certified.

Maurice's oversight prevented him from cashing in on the publicity that was bound to follow his designation as number one challenger for the heavyweight crown. Now he will have to dispose of James J. Braddock Friday evening before a definite decision is made by the commission.

BLACKSTOCK MEETS PLUMMER IN STADIUM FEATURE

ROUGH WRESTLERS BOOKED FOR MAIN EVENT WEDNESDAY

Blackstock - Plummer Match Signed On Winner-Take-All Basis

Marshall Blackstock, rugged Texan, will return to Roosevelt stadium Wednesday night in an effort to stretch his local winning streak to two straight. Just how successful the husky meanie will be depends upon Johnny Plummer, wily Iowan, who at last is getting the chance at Blackstock that he's sought so long.

So anxious was Plummer to take a crack at Blackstock that he agreed to wrestle the top-notcher on a winner-take-all, no-holds-barred basis. Plummer realizes, of course, that Marshall is about the toughest grappler ever to show at the local stadium but he believes that he can match his own roughness against that of the Texan and win.

In flattening Scotty Dawkins in two straight falls a week and a half ago, Blackstock showed the fans a new brand of dirty work. And even then, the Texan was handicapped by an injured hand, hurt when he knocked two of Chief Chewchki's teeth out in a fiery battle in New Orleans a couple of nights previously.

Considered a past master of rough wrestling, Blackstock has advised Promoter Charlie Bruscato that he "can throw Plummer in 10 minutes, provided he's given adequate police protection." And Supt. Tarver has agreed to have enough officers on hand to handle almost any kind of trouble that may arise.

Blackstock, who recently came south after a year of wrestling in and around Madison Square Garden in New York, ranks with the headliners of the mat game. Hence, he will be favored to beat Plummer but Johnny's victory over Dr. Arthur Rauta last week gave the Iowan plenty of confidence. After losing the first fall to Rauta in one minute, Plummer came back and took the second and third falls.

"If you get Blackstock for me next week," Johnny told Bruscato after the Rauta match, "I'm sure I can beat him. In fact, I feel confident now that Blackstock won't win a fall. I'm depending on my skill and strength, and don't forget that I can use rough tactics, too."

So with both principals allegedly "out for blood," it ought to be a rousing match.

Bruscato said yesterday that there will be a slight advance in admission prices for the show. Prices will be 75 cents for men and 40 cents for women, including tax. It is taking a large guarantee to get Blackstock here, Bruscato said, and others who have performed at the stadium are being paid more than in the past.

"I'm getting good wrestlers from four booking agents, at St. Louis, Memphis, Houston and Beaumont," Bruscato said yesterday, "and I'm guaranteeing their expenses plus a percentage of the gate. It is costing more to produce this kind of show here and I feel sure that the fans will be willing to pay just a little bit more to get high class attractions."

The admission price for men was formerly 55 cents.

HEADS STADIUM SHOW WEDNESDAY

Marshall Blackstock, above, will meet Johnny Plummer, husky Iowan, in the main event of Wednesday's wrestling show at Roosevelt stadium. The tough Texan, who's rated with the game's top-notchers, will be making his second local appearance after flattening Scotty Dawkins a week and a half ago. No holds will be barred in the Plummer-Blackstock battle, Promoter Bruscato has announced.

Vanderbilt Noses Out Alabama Quint, 34-33

UNIVERSITY, Ala., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Vanderbilt snapped the 48-game winning streak of the University of Alabama basketball team on its home court here tonight with a 34 to 33 victory. It was the first defeat for the home team on the court here against college competition since 1929.

Dick Plasman, Vandy center, and Coleman, forward, were the high scorers with 12 and 10 points respectively in a battle in which the lead changed six times.

The winners finally pulled ahead with only a few minutes to play and clung grimly to their lead until the final whistle. The starting five played without a substitute for Vanderbilt, while Alabama used eight men. The score was tied at half-time 17-17.

CUNNINGHAM WINS MILE AT BOSTON

Kansas Distance Star Easily Beats Venzke In K. of C. Feature

BOSTON, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Glenn Cunningham, the Kansas cyclone who holds the world's mile records, gained his second easy victory in as many nights when he defeated Gene Venzke of Pennsylvania by 12 yards in the K. of C. mile, feature of tonight's Prout memorial track program at the Boston garden. Cunningham was timed in 4:16 2-5.

The great Kansan, who won an easy three-quarters of a mile race at Buffalo last night, permitted Venzke to set the pace until they reached the back stretch on the second last lap, when his smooth spurt carried him into the lead, seemingly without any effort despite the fact that the crack Pennsylvanian had not punished himself while he was leading the parade.

Cunningham did not show his terrific speed until he made his final "life," a half-lap from the tape. When he put on the pressure, he fairly drew away from the laboring Venzke, who was seeking his fourth victory in this event.

Bill Ray of Manhattan started off in third place and finished in that position far ahead of the other survivor, Glen Dawson of Tulsa, Okla. Frank Crowley of the New York A. C. dropped out at the half and the other starter, Brendan Moynahan of the Boston A. A., who followed Venzke for four laps, retired when Cunningham passed him to go into second place.

Venzke's leading quarters were 1:03 4-5, 2:09 4-5, 3:15 2-5. The crowd of 7,500 appeared a bit disappointed when the marvelous champion failed to better the Boston record of 4:15.2 set by Joey Ray back in 1915 and equalled by Venzke in the B. A. A.'s 1932 games. It appeared, however, that Cunningham was running with next week's Millrose games in mind, for next Saturday night he resumes his spectacular duel with Bill Bonthron.

Chuck Hornbostel of Indiana gained a one-sided victory tonight in the Bishop Cheverus 1,000-yard run, one of the feature events on the meet.

The mid-western flyer defeated Waldo Sweet of the New York A. C., his only challenger, by 10 yards in the fast time of 2 minutes 17 1-5 seconds.

Ivan Fuqua of Indiana broke the Boston garden track record when he captured the Prout memorial "600" from Timmy Ring of Holy Cross in 1:14 4-5.

Joe McCloskey of New York A. C. gave Donald Lash of Dindiana, the A. A. U. cross-country titlist, a humiliating beating in the Larrivee two-mile special. The former Fordhamite broke the tape a quarter-lap ahead in the impressive time of 9:20 4-5.

Southeastern Loop May Be Reorganized Today

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 26.—(AP)—The Southeastern league, class B, is expected to be reorganized here tomorrow when club directors of eight cities meet in executive session.

The definite setup of the circuit is contingent upon the definite agreement of several clubs of higher classification to assist in the operations of the clubs.

Roy Williams, popular baseball enthusiast of Macon, Ga., is expected to be elected president of the league without a dissenting vote. He was at the helm of the last Southeastern loop, which disbanded after six weeks of operation in 1932.

Between 300 and 400 volcanic craters, believed to have been inactive for nearly half a century, have been explored south of Arizona's border in Mexico.

STATESMAN LAST AT SANTA ANITA

Nominee For Rich Handicap Beaten In First Start In U. S.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Another of the leading nominees for the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap, Statesman, finished last today in a field of eight in the Los Angeles $1,000 handicap of a mile and a furlong.

Riskulus, Norman Church's 4-year-old chestnut, won the event in 1:49 3-5, setting a track record with Wacoche second and Sweeping Light third. Rowdy Boy held the old mark of 1:51 4-5.

Statesman was making his debut in the United States after building up an [illegible] record in England.

Trumpets, the C. V. Whitney entry, captured the San Vicente handicap of six furlongs, worth $2,500 in added money, in 1:10 flat and set a new mark by 2-5 of a second.

Ridden by Sonny Workman, Trumpets, son of Sir Gallahad III, out of Pompadour, beat Mucoomah by two lengths with Rock X third.

Gallant Sir, [illegible] winner of the Agua Caliente [illegible] but not an eligible for the big Santa Anita handicap, was seventh.

Gallant Sir started out in eighth but could better his position only one place during the race, lacking the speed to run through the field.

Statesman encountered similar difficulties in the seventh race. Packing top weight of 129 pounds, the big invader got away well, moved up while under restraint on the back stretch, but stopped badly in the run home.

Wacoche set the early pace but was no match for Riskulus, who came up from third off the turn to race home two and a half lengths in front. Sweeping Light wound up four lengths back of the winner.

Sectional Rivalries Are Spur To Frosh Quintet

COLUMBIA, Mo., Jan. 26.—(AP)—An idea to division of freshman basketball material into squads where a "league" system of play will entail real rivalry has been put into practice at the University of Missouri here.

With 22 of the 65 players on the yearlings squad hailing from the state of Missouri, Freshman Coach Anton Stankowski sorted the boys into six squads on the basis of their home towns.

The divisions are: Southwest Missouri, North Missouri, Central Missouri, St. Louis, Kansas City, and "United States," the latter embracing all out-state frosh, the 12 of whom represent eight different states.

Mississippi State Boxers Open '35 Schedule Monday

STATE COLLEGE, Miss., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Mississippi State's boxing team will ring up the curtain on the 1935 schedule Monday night against Tennessee at Knoxville.

Coach Russ Crane and his mittmen who leave Sunday afternoon expect the match, the first between State and Tennessee teams, to be a hard opener for the Maroons.

Crane said that he will take Paul Bullard, heavy; James Wade, light heavy; Hiram Smith, middleweight; Durell Woods, lightweight; William Downing, featherweight, and Knox Oakley, bantamweight.

BAER PREFERS TO DEFEND CROWN IN CHICAGO STADIUM

Heavyweight Title Fight Brewing As Max Vacations In Florida

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 26.—(Special)—There's a contract with Madison Square Garden blocking the open road, but sifting the wires, rumors and cajoleries that have bombarded Max Baer since he joined the mid-winter colony in Florida, a heavyweight title fight at Soldiers' field in Chicago with Steve Hamas sometime in June is definitely forecast.

Even if Hamas is not the next challenger for the crown, indications point strongly to a defense of the title next summer at Chicago just the same.

Baer and his manager, Ancil Hoffman, who is also here at the Miami Biltmore with the champion as well as the title-holder's brother, Buddy, frown on another title battle at New York under promotion of Madison Square Garden. Nevertheless, Baer has a contract with the New York promoters to defend his crown for them "against an opponent agreeable to Baer." This contract calls for action on the garden's part by March 1 with Madison Square Garden guaranteed a 30-day period of grace from that date.

In the meantime Baer has been in receipt of a wire from Nate Lewis and Jim Mullen, Chicago fight promoters and chief promotional rivals of the garden's "600 millionaires," offering him 40 per cent of the receipts to defend his title in June at Chicago.

"I don't like the New York setup and I don't think I get a good deal there. You can say for me I don't think Arthur Donovan is a capable referee and he seems to have the inside track. I'll never fight another fight with him as third man in the ring." Donovan refereed the Baer-Carnera and the Baer-Schmeling fights.

But the champion does like the Windy City and when he received the offer from Mullen and Lewis for a title defense there in June he said:

"Chicago has always been swell with me and I think we could put on a great show there. I don't care who they throw in the ring with me, but you can bet they'll get the best drawing card. George Getz is a crackerjack commissioner and I think the Illinois commission will pick a good man if we decide to take the offer."

Baer is concentrating on his suntan and divot digging on the Miami Biltmore golf course, letting Hoffman push the pawns around the promotional checkerboard.

The champion [illegible] self and when questioned on the subject of his next opponent in a full length title fight, he answered with a ranking of the four leading contenders for the title in order. He named young Steve Hamas as No. 1 and the ex-title holder, Primo Carnera as No. 2. He likes Max Schmeling's style and placed him third in line and said that if there had to be a fourth he believed Art Lasky deserved the honor.

Because Max and Miss Mary Kirk Brown of New York have been doing their suntanning together at the Roney Plaza Cabana Sun club, rumors have been scattered around the country lately that they will soon announce their engagement.

Maxie says: "I won't say yes and I won't say no, but the 'wise money' says yes."

The champion has lost quite a bit of weight, tipping the scales now at around 220 pounds. He has tightened his belt several notches, which may be one of the reasons why he said upon his arrival, "Boy, it's great to be back here."

"You know," he continued, speaking to an old friend of his, "when I was here last year I was wondering whether I could do it or not."

He was referring to the shot at the title then held by the giant Italian, Carnera, who was bowled over by Maxie in New York last summer.

Minneapolis Cue Star Barred From Tourney

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 26.—(AP)—A charge of professionalism left Howard Lindley, ace cue-wielder from Minneapolis, definitely "behind the eight ball" today so far as simon-pure billiards in general and the national amateur pocket-billiard championships in particular were concerned.

The mid-westerner, most prominent threat to the defending crown-holder in the current championships, was disqualified from the tournament and suspended from the National Amateur association after officials accused him of accepting money during the 1934 Minnesota open and in Minneapolis matches for the last two years.

In addition, the tournament committee was pondering over what to do about Lindley's four victories, including the match he won last night from Larry Wolf of St. Louis just before his elimination. The consensus was that his wins should be tossed out, giving each of his victims—Wolf, Al Broder, Philadelphia; Walter Flynn, New Haven, and Omer Joannisse, Detroit—one less black mark in the "matches lost column."

Runyan, Laffoon Reach Golfing Heights in Opposite Ways

Paul Runyan and Ky Laffoon, leading professionals of 1934 both in money won and low scoring, are striking examples of the fact that there is no set formula for scaling the heights in golf.

They are opposites, as huge Olin Dutra, the open champion, points out in an interesting way.

Dutra himself has methods somewhat all his own. The Spanish product of old Monterey hasn't the free easy swing of Bobby Jones, Macdonald Smith and other stylists. He is more of a punch hitter.

Dutra doesn't pivot to as great a degree as some stars. Neither has the masterful Jones in later years. Jones has taken on avoirdupois. It is only natural for the stouter and [illegible] to pivot less than lighter ones.

Leo Diegel is unorthodox as can be, both in driving and putting. Diegel does something that all teachers of golf will tell a pupil not to do. He drops his left shoulder in the backswing.

[illegible] at the top of the backswing. He cocks and uncocks them as the club comes down. The [illegible] club [illegible] tal position at the top of the backswing.

After all it is not the way good stroking is accomplished. It is timing that brings good stroking about.

Both Get Results

"Runyan is the leading exponent of the lateral-shift swing in the Walter Hagen tradition," explains Dutra. "Laffoon is a pivoter like Gene Sarazen. Runyan throws approximately 90 per cent of what little he weighs on his right leg during the backswing. Laffoon's weight is evenly distributed on both feet.

"They are also opposite in temperament, Runyan more even and Laffoon more spontaneous. I would say that Runyan has the better temperament for competition and Laffoon the better swing, for it is less likely to go out of timing.

"Runyan is the most persistent scorer I have seen in the last two or three years. He is the greatest shot saver in the game. He is tremendously accurate and a marvelous putter."

Dutra continues discussing his chief contemporaries.

The Californian reminds you that Jimmy Thompson and blond Craig Wood are as alike as the spheres they smack.

"Thompson is not alone the longest hitter in the game but one of the most reliable drivers. He has a fine temperament and in the last two years has improved three-fold at his short game, from 100 yards out to the flag.

"Wood is a little more abbreviated on the backswing. He could be one of the world's most superlative golfers if he were a good niblick player.

"Harry Cooper is one of the straightest golfers. Only his temperament is against him. In the last few years Cooper has cut down on his long backswing.

Make Form Fit Game

"When Tommy Armour makes up his mind to turn in really outstanding golf, he is capable of playing it, but he can't seem to bear down all the year around like the top flight younger players.

"Bobby Cruickshank is a beautiful hitter, with exceptionally elegant action through the ball area.

"Sarazen is the most dangerous man who has played in national championships since Jones retired. He participated in little tournament golf in 1934, engaging only in major meetings, but his showing in the national open, when he looked like a certain winner with only eight holes remaining, again proved that he is the entrant who must be beaten in the biggest event of all."

While all of the more accomplished golfers adhere to certain fundamentals, each has individual peculiarities. The secret of success in the royal and ancient sport, as in every line of competition, is developing natural form and making it fit the game.

LITTLE, RUNYAN AND DUTRA FALL IN MATCH PLAY

Spectacular Upsets Feature First Round At San Francisco

By Russell Newland
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Three national golf champions passed out of the picture today in a series of upsets never before equalled in the five-year history of the San Francisco match play open tournament.

America's greatest amateur linksman, Lawson Little, British and national title holder, succumbed 5 and 4 to the steadiness and uncanny stroking of Byron Nelson, a 22-year-old Texan never before a threat in the major tournament season. Little went down fighting against a first round competitor who matched him in every way.

Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., who rules the Professional Golfers' association ranks, joined those on the side lines through a 2 to 1 defeat from Harry Cooper of Chicago.

More reversals came in the second round. Olin Dutra, wearer of the national open crown, fell before the fairway artistry of Clarence Clark, Bloomfield, N. J., not of high ranking in the matter of major tournament victories, 2 and 1.

Lady luck smiled on Clark. His approach to the seventeenth green hit a woman spectator. Instead of rocketing out of bounds, the ball caromed to the green. Clark tanked the putt to win the match.

Zimmerman was defeated by Ky Laffoon, Chicago, 3 and 2, in the second round. Laffoon had beaten Sam Parks, Jr., Pittsburgh, one up, in the first match.

Henry Picard of Hershey, Pa., defeated Jim Demaret, Galveston, 2 and 1 in the first round and disposed of Dick Metz, Chicago, by the same score in the second eighteen.

Nelson, after his spectacular win over the amateur champion, Little, went on to beat Victor Ghezzi, Deal, N. J., 4 and 3, in the second round.

Harold McSpaden of Kansas City, Kansas, entered tomorrow's quarter-finals with a 2 up win over Jim Fogarty, Kirkwood, Mo., in the morning, and a 4 and 3 defeat of Ben Loving, Petersburg, Va., in the second session.

Clark trimmed Dutra after beating Floyd Farley, Oklahoma City, one up, and Cooper followed up his unexpected win over Runyan with an equally surprising upset of Gene Sarazen, Brookfield, Conn., star, still considered the outstanding "money player" of the game.

The quarter-finals delegation included Jimmy Thomson, Long Beach, Calif., and Johnny Revolta, Milwaukee.

Thomson won from Johnny Perelli, Tahoe, Calif., one up in the first round and walloped Bill Jelliffe, Los Angeles, 6 and 5, in the next. Revolta eliminated the amateur star, Johnny Dawson of Chicago, 2 and 1, in the second round after taking the measure of Mark Fry, Oakland, 6 and 5.

Dawson helped in his own defeat by knocking Revolta's ball into the cup on the seventeenth hole. The latter's ball was four feet away from the pin at the time.

Farmerville Boxers Win From Choudrant Mittmen

FARMERVILLE, La., Jan. 26.—(Special)—The Farmerville high school boxing team won a light weight victory over the strong Choudrant high school team here last night by a count of three wins, two losses and one draw. Two exhibition fights also were fought.

The fights were the first rather listless battles which the Farmers have yet put up. This, however, was due to the fact the exceedingly bad weather has prevented the rural communities from making their way to school and thereby being lost to the team.

In the first fight, Sam Hartman, 80, lost to Ford, 80, of Choudrant; L. Andrews, 85, of Farmerville, defeated Ray Holstead, 85, of Choudrant. The next fight, which was probably the best on the card, was won by H. Clark, 92, Farmerville, over J. Sanderson, 89, Choudrant. Thad Howell, 100, of Farmerville showed well to defeat Williams, 100, of Choudrant; F. Feazel, 109, of Farmerville, fought to a draw Roy Halstead, 108, of Choudrant; "Bug" Rabun, 118, of Farmerville, defeated Rex Halstead, 118, of Choudrant in a most excellent contest; Brantley, 108, of Farmerville, was given a decision over Patton, 108, of Farmerville, in an exhibition match. And in the last fight Paul Calhoun, 121, of Choudrant, defeated W. B. Compton, 121, of Farmerville.

TECH BEATEN IN FIRST OF SERIES WITH CENTENARY

Bulldogs Nosed Out 46-43 In Cage Thriller At Shreveport

SHREVEPORT, La., Jan. 26.—(AP)—In a bitterly fought contest, Centenary college defeated Louisiana Polytechnic institute, an S. I. A. A. opponent, here tonight, 46 to 43. The game, played before the largest college crowd here this season, was a real scoring duel throughout.

The Gents lead at halftime, 28 to 21, and although maintaining the lead the last period, were never in a safe position.

It was the third consecutive conference victory for the Centenary Gentlemen with no defeats. Coach Eddie McLane's team suffered its second conference setback in thirteen starts.

BLACKSTOCK MEETS PLUMMER IN STADIUM FEATURE

Blackstock - Plummer Match Signed On Winner-Take-All Basis

Marshall Blackstock, rugged Texan, will return to Roosevelt stadium Wednesday night in an effort to stretch his local winning streak to two straight. Just how successful the husky meanie will be depends upon Johnny Plummer, wily Iowan, who at last is getting the chance at Blackstock that he's sought so long.

So anxious was Plummer to take a crack at Blackstock that he agreed to wrestle the top-notcher on a winner-take-all, no-holds-barred basis. Plummer realizes, of course, that Marshall is about the toughest grappler ever to show at the local stadium but he believes that he can match his own roughness against that of the Texan and win.

In flattening Scotty Dawkins in two straight falls a week and a half ago, Blackstock showed the fans a new brand of dirty work. And even then, the Texan was handicapped by an injured hand, hurt when he knocked two of Chief Chewchki's teeth out in a fiery battle in New Orleans a couple of nights previously.

Considered a past master of rough wrestling, Blackstock has advised Promoter Charlie Bruscato that he "can throw Plummer in 10 minutes, provided he's given adequate police protection." And Supt. Tarver has agreed to have enough officers on hand to handle almost any kind of trouble that may arise.

Blackstock, who recently came south after a year of wrestling in and around Madison Square Garden in New York, ranks with the headliners of the mat game. Hence, he will be favored to beat Plummer but Johnny's victory over Dr. Arthur Rauta last week gave the Iowan plenty of confidence. After losing the first fall to Rauta in one minute, Plummer came back and took the second and third falls.

"If you get Blackstock for me next week," Johnny told Bruscato after the Rauta match, "I'm sure I can beat him. In fact, I feel confident now that Blackstock won't win a fall. I'm depending on my skill and strength, and don't forget that I can use rough tactics, too."

So with both principals allegedly "out for blood," it ought to be a rousing match.

Bruscato said yesterday that there will be a slight advance in admission prices for the show. Prices will be 75 cents for men and 40 cents for women, including tax. It is taking a large guarantee to get Blackstock here, Bruscato said, and others who have performed at the stadium are being paid more than in the past.

"I'm getting good wrestlers from four booking agents, at St. Louis, Memphis, Houston and Beaumont," Bruscato said yesterday, "and I'm guaranteeing their expenses plus a percentage of the gate. It is costing more to produce this kind of show here and I feel sure that the fans will be willing to pay just a little bit more to get high class attractions."

The admission price for men was formerly 55 cents.

Vanderbilt Noses Out Alabama Quint, 34-33

UNIVERSITY, Ala., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Vanderbilt snapped the 48-game winning streak of the University of Alabama basketball team on its home court here tonight with a 34 to 33 victory. It was the first defeat for the home team on the court here against college competition since 1929.

Dick Plasman, Vandy center, and Coleman, forward, were the high scorers with 12 and 10 points respectively in a battle in which the lead changed six times.

The winners finally pulled ahead with only a few minutes to play and clung grimly to their lead until the final whistle. The starting five played without a substitute for Vanderbilt, while Alabama used eight men. The score was tied at half-time, 17-17.

HEADS STADIUM SHOW WEDNESDAY

Marshall Blackstock, above, will meet Johnny Plummer, husky Iowan, in the main event of Wednesday's wrestling show at Roosevelt stadium. The tough Texan, who's rated with the game's top-notchers, will be making his second local appearance after flattening Scotty Dawkins a week and a half ago. No holds will be barred in the Plummer-Blackstock battle, Promoter Bruscato has announced.

CUNNINGHAM WINS MILE AT BOSTON

Kansas Distance Star Easily Beats Venzke In K. of C. Feature

BOSTON, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Glenn Cunningham, the Kansas cyclone who holds the world's mile records, gained his second easy victory in as many nights when he defeated Gene Venzke of Pennsylvania by 12 yards in the K. of C. mile, feature of tonight's Prout memorial track program at the Boston garden. Cunningham was timed in 4:16 2-5.

The great Kansan, who won an easy three-quarters of a mile race at Buffalo last night, permitted Venzke to set the pace until they reached the back stretch on the second last lap, when his smooth spurt carried him into the lead, seemingly without any effort, despite the fact that the crack Pennsylvanian had not punished himself while he was heading the parade.

Cunningham did not show his terrific speed until he made his final "life," a half-lap from the tape. When he put on the pressure, he fairly drew away from the laboring Venzke, who was seeking his fourth victory in this event.

Bill Ray of Manhattan started off in third place and finished in that position, far ahead of the other survivor, Glen Dawson of Tulsa, Okla. Frank Crowley of the New York A. C. dropped out at the half and the other starter, Brendan Moynahan of the Boston A. A., who followed Venzke for four laps, retired when Cunningham passed him to go into second place.

Venzke's leading quarters were 1:03 4-5, 2:09 4-5, 3:15 2-5. The crowd of 7,500 appeared a bit disappointed when the marvelous champion failed to better the Boston record of 4:15.2 set by Joey Ray back in 1915 and equalled by Venzke in the B. A. A.'s 1932 games. It appeared, however, that Cunningham was running with next week's Millrose games in mind, for next Saturday night he resumes his spectacular duel with Bill Bonthron.

Chuck Hornbostel of Indiana gained a one-sided victory tonight in the Bishop Cheverus 1,000-yard run, one of the feature events on the meet.

The mid-western flyer defeated Waldo Sweet of the New York A. C., his only challenger, by 10 yards in the fast time of 2 minutes 17 1-5 seconds.

Ivan Fuqua of Indiana broke the Boston garden track record when he captured the Prout memorial "600" from Timmy Ring of Holy Cross in 1:14 4-5.

Joe McCloskey of New York A. C. gave Donald Lash of Dindiana, the A. A. U. cross-country titlist, a humiliating beating in the Larrivee two-mile special. The former Fordhamite broke the tape a quarter-lap ahead in the impressive time of 9:20 4-5.

Southeastern Loop May Be Reorganized Today

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 26.—(AP)—The Southeastern league, class B, is expected to be reorganized here tomorrow when club directors of eight cities meet in executive session.

The definite setup of the circuit is contingent upon the definite agreement of several clubs of higher classification to assist in the operations of the clubs.

Roy Williams, popular baseball enthusiast of Macon, Ga., is expected to be elected president of the league without a dissenting vote. He was at the hem of the last Southeastern loop, which disbanded after six weeks of operation in 1932.

STATESMAN LAST AT SANTA ANITA

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Another of the leading nominees for the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap, Statesman, finished last today in a field of eight in the Los Angeles $1,000 handicap of a mile and a furlong.

Riskulus, Norman Church's 4-year-old chestnut, won the event in 1:49 3-5, setting a track record, with Wacoche second and Sweeping Light third. Rowdy Boy held the old mark of 1:51 4-5.

Statesman was making his debut in the United States after building up an impressive record in England.

Trumpery, the C. V. Whitney entry, captured the San Vicente handicap of six furlongs, worth $5,000 in added money, in 1:10 flat, another new mark by 2-5 of a second.

Ridden by Sonny Workman, Trumpery, son of Sir Galahad III, out of Pantalette, beat Marooned by two lengths with Rock X third.

Gallant Sir, twice winner of the Agua Caliente handicap, but not an eligible for the big Santa Anita handicap, was seventh.

Gallant Sir started out in eighth but could better his position only one place during the short test, lacking the speed to run through the field.

Statesman encountered similar difficulties in the seventh race. Packing top weight of 120 pounds, the big invader got away last, moved up while under restraint on the back stretch, but stopped badly in the run home.

Wacoche set the early pace but was no match for Riskulus, who came up from third off the turn to race home two and a half lengths in front. Sweeping Light wound up four lengths back of the winner.

Sectional Rivalries Are Spur To Frosh Quintet

COLUMBIA, Mo., Jan. 26.—(AP)—An idea for division of freshman basketball material into squads where a "league" system of play will entail real rivalry has been put into practice at the University of Missouri here.

With 53 of the 65 players on the yearlings squad hailing from the state of Missouri, Freshman Coach Anton Stankowski sorted the boys into six squads on the basis of their home towns.

The divisions are: Southwest Missouri, North Missouri, Central Missouri, St. Louis, Kansas City, and "United States," the latter embracing all out-state frosh, the 12 of whom represent eight different states.

Mississippi State Boxers Open '35 Schedule Monday

STATE COLLEGE, Miss., Jan. 26.—(AP)—Mississippi State's boxing team will ring up the curtain on the 1935 schedule Monday night against Tennessee at Knoxville.

Coach Russ Crane and his mittmen who leave Sunday afternoon expect the match, the first between State and Tennessee teams, to be a hard opener for the Maroons.

Crane said that he will take Paul Bullard, heavy; James Wade, light heavy; Hiram Smith, middleweight; Durell Woods, lightweight; William Downing, featherweight, and Knox Oakley, bantamweight.

Heavyweight Title Fight Brewing As Max Vacations In Florida

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 26.—(Special.)—There's a contract with Madison Square Garden blocking the open road, but sifting the wires, rumors and cajoleries that have bombarded Max Baer since he joined the mid-winter colony in Florida, a heavyweight title fight at Soldiers' field in Chicago with Steve Hamas sometime in June is definitely forecast.

Even if Hamas is not the next challenger for the crown, indications point strongly to a defense of the title next summer at Chicago just the same.

Baer and his manager, Ancil Hoffman, who is also here at the Miami Biltmore with the champion as well as the title-holder's brother, Buddy, frown on another title battle at New York under promotion of Madison Square Garden. Nevertheless, Baer has a contract with the New York promoters to defend his crown for them "against an opponent agreeable to Baer." This contract calls for action on the garden's part by March 1, with Madison Square Garden guaranteed a 30-day period of grace from that date.

In the meantime Baer has been in receipt of a wire from Nate Lewis and Jim Mullen, Chicago fight promoters and chief promotional rivals of the garden's "600 millionaires," offering him 40 per cent of the receipts to defend his title in June at Chicago.

Indicating how his entourage feels toward New York, the champion said: "I don't like the New York setup and I don't think I get a good deal there. You can say for me I don't think Arthur Donovan is a capable referee and he seems to have the inside track. I'll never fight another fight with him as third man in the ring." Donovan refereed the Baer-Carnera and the Baer-Schmeling fights.

But the champion does like the Windy City and when he received the offer from Mullen and Lewis for a title defense there in June he said:

"Chicago has always been swell with me and I think we could put on a great show there. I don't care who they throw in the ring with me, but you can bet they'll get the best drawing card. George Getz is a cracker-jack commissioner, and I think the Illinois commission will pick a good man if we decide to take the offer."

Baer is concentrating on his suntan and divot digging on the Miami Biltmore golf course, letting Hoffman push the pawns around the promotional chessboard.

The champion is his usual garrulous self and when questioned on the subject of his next opponent in a full length title fight, he answered with a ranking of the four leading contenders for his title in order. He named young Steve Hamas as No. 1 and the ex-title holder, Primo Carnera as No. 2. He likes Max Schmeling's style and placed him third in line and said that if there had to be a fourth he believed Art Lasky deserved the honor.

Because Max and Miss Mary Kirk Brown of New York have been doing their suntanning together at the Roney Plaza Cabana Sun club, rumors have been scattered around the country lately that they will soon announce their engagement.

Maxie says, "I won't say yes and I won't say no," but the "wise money" says yes.

The champion has lost quite a bit of weight, tipping the scales now at around 220 pounds. He has tightened his belt several notches, which may be one of the reasons why he said upon his arrival, "Boy, it's great to be back here."

"You know," he continued, speaking to an old friend of his, "when I was here last year I was wondering whether I could do it or not."

He was referring to the shot at the title then held by the giant Italian, Carnera, who was bowled over by Maxie in New York last summer.

Minneapolis Cue Star Barred From Tourney

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 26.—(AP)—A charge of professionalism left Howard Lindley, ace cue-wielder from Minneapolis, definitely "behind the eight ball" today so far as simon-pure billiards in general and the national amateur pocket-billiard championships in particular were concerned.

The mid-westerner, most prominent threat to the defending crown-holder in the current championships, was disqualified from the tournament and suspended from the National Amateur association after officials accused him of accepting money during the 1934 Minnesota open and in Minneapolis matches for the last two years.

In addition, the tournament committee was pondering over what to do about Lindley's four victories, including the match he won last night from Larry Wolf of St. Louis just before his elimination. The consensus was that his wins should be tossed out, giving each of his victims—Wolf, Al Broder, Philadelphia; Walter Flynn, New Haven, and Omer Joannisse, Detroit—one less black mark in the "matches lost column."

Runyan, Laffoon Reach Golfing Heights in Opposite Ways

Paul Runyan and Ky Laffoon, leading professionals of 1934 both in money won and low scoring, are striking examples of the fact that there is no set formula for scaling the heights in golf.

They are opposites, as huge Olin Dutra, the open champion, points out in an interesting way.

Dutra himself has methods somewhat all his own. The Spanish product of old Monterey hasn't the free easy swing of Bobby Jones, Macdonald Smith, and other stylists. He is more of a punch hitter.

Dutra doesn't pivot to as great a degree as some stars. Neither has the masterful Jones in later years. Jones has taken on avoirdupois. It is only natural for the stouter and bigger fellows to pivot less than lighter ones.

Leo Diegel is unorthodox as can be, both in driving and putting. Diegel does something that all teachers of golf will tell a pupil not to do. He drops his left shoulder in the backswing.

Horton Smith doesn't cock his wrists at the top of the backswing. He cocks and uncocks them as the club comes down. The Missourian's club never goes to or beyond the horizontal position at the top of the backswing.

After all it is not the way good stroking is accomplished. It is timing that brings good stroking about.

* * *

Both Get Results

"Runyan is the leading exponent of the lateral-shift swing, in the Walter Hagen tradition," explains Dutra. Laffoon is a pivoter, like Gene Sarazen. Runyon throws approximately 90 per cent of what little he weighs on his right leg during the backswing. Laffoon's weight is evenly distributed on his feet.

"They are also opposite in temperament, Runyan more even and Laffoon more spontaneous. I would say that Runyan has the better temperament for competition and Laffoon the better swing, for it is less likely to go out of timing.

"Runyan is the most persistent scorer I have seen in the last two or three years. He is the greatest shot saver in the game. He is tremendously accurate and a marvelous putter."

Dutra continues discussing his chief contemporaries.

The Californian reminds you that Jimmy Thompson and blond Craig Wood are as alike as the spheres they smack.

"Thompson is not alone the longest hitter in the game but one of the most reliable drivers. He has a fine temperament and in the last two years has improved three-fold at his short game, from 100 yards out to the flag.

"Wood is a little more abbreviated on the backswing. He could be one of the world's most superlative golfers if he were a good niblick player.

"Harry Cooper is one of the straightest golfers. Only his temperament is against him. In the last few years Cooper has cut down on his long backswing.

* * *

Make Form Fit Game

"When Tommy Armour makes up his mind to turn in really outstanding golf, he is capable of playing it, but he can't seem to bear down all the year around like the top flight younger players.

"Bobby Cruickshank is a beautiful hitter, with exceptionally elegant action through the ball area.

"Sarazen is the most dangerous man who has played in national championships since Jones retired. He participated in little tournament golf in 1934, engaging only in major meetings, but his showing in the national open, when he looked like a certain winner with only eight holes remaining, again proved that he is the entrant who must be beaten in the biggest event of all."

While all of the more accomplished golfers adhere to certain fundamentals, each has individual peculiarities. The secret of success in the royal and ancient sport, as in every line of competition, is developing natural form and making it fit the game.

LITTLE, RUNYAN AND DUTRA FALL IN MATCH PLAY

Spectacular Upsets Feature First Round At San Francisco

By Russell Newland
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Three national golf champions passed out of the picture today in a series of upsets never before equalled in the five-year history of the San Francisco match play open tournament.

America's greatest amateur linksman, Lawson Little, British and national title holder, succumbed 5 and 4 to the superior and uncanny stroking of Bryon Nelson, a 22-year-old Texan never before a threat in the major tournament season. Little went down fighting against a first round competitor who matched him in every way.

Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., who rules the Professional Golfers' association ranks, joined those on the side lines through a 2 to 1 defeat from Harry Cooper of Chicago.

More reversals came in the second round. Olin Dutra, wearer of the national open crown, fell before the fairway artistry of Clarence Clark, Bloomfield, N. J., not of high ranking in the matter of major tournament victories, 2 and 1.

Lady luck smiled on Clark. His approach to the seventeenth green hit a woman spectator. Instead of rocketing out of bounds, the ball caromed to the green. Clark tanked the putt to win the match.

Zimmerman was defeated by Ky Laffoon, Chicago, 3 and 2, in the second round. Laffoon had beaten Sam Parks, Jr., Pittsburgh, one up, in the first match.

Henry Picard of Hershey, Pa., defeated Jim Demaret, Galveston, 2 and 1 in the first round and disposed of Dick Metz, Chicago, by the same score in the second eighteen.

Nelson, after his spectacular win over the amateur champion, Little, went on to beat Victor Ghezzi, Dael, N. J., 4 and 3, in the second round.

Harold McSpaden of Kansas City, Kansas, entered tomorrow's quarter-finals with a 2 up win over Jim Fogarty, Kirkwood, Mo., in the morning, and a 4 and 3 defeat of Ben Loving, Petersburg, Va., in the second session.

Clark trimmed Dutra after beating Floyd Farley, Oklahoma City, one up, and Cooper followed up his unexpected win over Runyan with an equally surprising upset of Gene Sarazen, Brookfield, Conn., star, still considered the outstanding "money player" of the game.

Thomson won from Johnny Perelli, Tahoe, Calif., one up in the first round and walloped Bill Jelliffe, Los Angeles, 6 and 5, in the next. Revolta eliminated the amateur star, Johnny Dawson of Chicago, 2 and 1, in the second round after taking the measure of Mark Fry, Oakland, 6 and 5.

Dawson helped in his own defeat by knocking Revolta's ball into the cup on the seventeenth hole. The latter's ball was four feet away from the pin at the time.

Farmerville Boxers Win From Choudrant Mittmen

FARMERVILLE, La., Jan. 26.—(Special) — The Farmerville high school boxing team won a light weight victory over the strong Choudrant high school team here last night by a count of three wins, two losses and one draw. Two exhibition fights also were fought.

The fights were the first rather listless battles which the Farmers have yet put up. This, however, was due to the fact the exceedingly bad weather has prevented the rural communities from making their way to school and thereby being lost to the team.

In the first fight, Sam Hartman, 80, lost to Ford, 80, of Choudrant; L. Andrews, 85, of Farmerville, defeated Ray Holstead, 85, of Choudrant. The next fight, which was probably the best on the card, was won by H. Clark, 92, Farmerville, over J. Sanderson, 89, Choudrant. Thad Howell, 100, of Farmerville showed well to defeat Williams, 100, of Choudrant; F. Feazel, 109, of Farmerville, fought to a draw Roy Halstead, 108, of Choudrant; "Bug" Rabun, 118, of Farmerville, defeated Rex Halstead, 118, of Choudrant in a most excellent contest; Brantley, 108, of Farmerville, was given a decision over Patton, 108, of Farmerville, in an exhibition match. And in the last fight Paul Calhoun, 121, of Choudrant, defeated W. B. Compton, 121, of Farmerville.

TECH BEATEN IN FIRST OF SERIES WITH CENTENARY

SHREVEPORT, La., Jan. 26.—(AP)—In a bitterly fought contest, Centenary college defeated Louisiana Polytechnic institute, an S. I. A. A. opponent, here tonight, 46 to 43. The game, played before the largest college crowd here this season, was a real scoring duel throughout.

The Gents lead at halftime, 28 to 21, and although maintaining the lead the last period, were never in a safe position.

It was the third consecutive conference victory for the Centenary Gentlemen with no defeats. Coach Eddie McLane's team suffered its second conference setback in thirteen starts.

Wider Rifts Seen Over Social Security And Relief Programs

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Congress took stock today of its busiest week thus far and saw possibilities that the next few days might bring even more pronounced rifts over the administration's social security and work relief programs.

With some administration bodies manifestedly surprised at the opposition shown already, the word was passed today that the president would personally supervise allocation of the money from the pending $4,880,000,000 work and relief bill.

Resentment against Secretary Ickes, public works administrator, motivated some of the brisk house debate on the work relief measure, which nevertheless passed that body by an overwhelming vote.

The sentiment for liberalization of the administration's plan for unemployment insurance and old age pensions, meanwhile, caused Chairman Doughton of the house ways and means committee to announce that opposition witnesses would be heard next week.

Hearings had simmered down today but General Hugh S. Johnson, former NRA administrator, denied before the house military affairs committee that he had known of alleged collusion between bidders for naval construction contracts.

John P. Frey, American Federation of Labor official, however, repeated that he had shown Johnson a sealed envelope which contained evidence there had been collusion.

Johnson was called before the military affairs committee to testify on a pending measure which aims to take the profit out of war. The former army officer favored government control but not government operation of industry in war time.

Other developments at Capitol Hill and elsewhere included:

Plans by some bonus payment advocates to attempt to override Speaker Byrns in an attempt to bring the issue to a house vote.

The calling by Leslie G. Garnett, United States attorney, of a special grand jury—the first since Fall-Doheny days—to investigate charges of graft in a $4,000,000 Texas public works administration project.

The federal communications commission barred all former employes from practicing before it for a two-year period.

The house ways and means committee was told by Douglas Brown, Princeton professor and economic advisor to the president, that the Townsend plan of old-age insurance was both "illusionary and dangerous."

Police Notes In Verse Warn German Autoists

NURNBERG, Germany, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Police poems instead of unlovely summons remind absent-minded drivers that parking is forbidden at particular spots here.

"Politeness is the best policy" say the traffic police.

"Four hundred yards from here men are at work on the road. Please take care" is a warning which automobilists frequently find on German roads. Just past the danger point a further notice, "Thank you for taking care," has "worked wonders," the police say.

The driver who leaves his car at one of those points in Nurnberg where parking is forbidden finds pasted on his windshield a printed slip with a verse begging him to avoid this place in future and so assist good order in Germany.

Preventing Accidents Takes Good English

The young red-haired chief had been pestered with complaints from parents against the poor English used by his officers in their talks at schools on accident prevention.

In desperation, Morrissey call[illegible] roll to see what he had in the [illegible] of higher education. The result: Sergeant Albert C. Magenheimer, Indiana university; Sargeant Edward F. Moore, St. Mary's college, Kentucky, and Robert Murnan, patrolman, Butler university, stepped forward.

They are now telling boys and girls, in precise English, just what they should do to avoid being struck by vehicles while going to or from school.

Teachers Too Crafty For Sly Br'er Fox

WINONA, Minn., Jan. 26.—(AP)—The fox, generally credited with being a sly animal, was not sly enough for two teachers of the East Burns Valley school near here.

On their way to school Miss Orvilda Peterson and Miss Lucille Krage, noticed what appeared to be a dog or woodchuck lying in the leaves in a pasture along the road.

"It was a fox," says Miss Peterson, "and he just lay there, playing possum."

She threw her coat over the animal and the two women captured it.

Latest reports were that it would become a neckpiece.

Associated Press Writer Inspects Flood Regions

MARKS, Miss., Jan. 26.—On a motor railroad car today, I inspected the Coldwater river basin flooded area between Marks and Crenshaw.

On these railroad tracks running as a line of life and hope to thousands of natives driven from their homes by high water, were humans, white and black, old and young, living with their dogs, mules, hogs and cows, battling with cold and hunger and patiently waiting relief.

The right-of-way was strewn with dead animals frozen to death and with box cars with families huddled in. On any spot above the water, humans were congregated. The thud of motor boats flowing through the backwater could be heard as the courageout boatmen brought out stranded families or took in food to those who refused to leave their shanties.

"We were after live folks," they said. "We couldn't take time to bring out bodies."

Each town passed reported some deaths but an accurate count of the dead has not been made and may never be made.

One boatman saw three bodies of negroes found in a house on a floating bed where they had frozen, another saw the body of a dead negro on the porch of a shack, another told of a negro man and woman, drowning from the upset of a stable feed trough in which they were trying to float out.

A few deaths of white persons were reported but the heaviest toll was among the negroes. Today the Red Cross, under the direction of George E. Meyer, assistant director of disaster, of the Red Cross from Washington, had arranged to feed and clothe and house thousands of families driven to concentration centers.

Plans were being made to feed the livestock found on the railroad embankment by Mr. Myer estimated that 75 per cent of the livestock in the area had perished.

Before help came, the rescuers told harrowing tales of suffering and fright of the natives. These basin dwellers had been accustomed to high water but they had not been accustomed to snow, ice and freezing weather. They had all of these combined and for this reason this flood had produced more hardships than any other.

The water caught the natives unprepared. It rose up around their homes within a few hours and without warning. It caught them without boats and without sufficient food and fuel. Boatmen told of women and little children standing on their porches in a foot of water begging to be taken aboard. The boatmen worked rapidly and courageously and did a heroic work in the dead of night and in ice-covered water reduced the casualties. They were life savers in every sense of the word. After they had been brought to high ground, usually the railroad embankment and higher centers of the towns, the refugees took their situation philosophically. A box car, the stage of a motion picture theater, the judge's bench in the courthouse, or the railroad stations were home to them.

There was no disorder, the whites and negroes working shoulder to shoulder for the common good.

A negro, John Little, probably was the hero of the flood. He may lose some fingers from frostbite but he would do the same thing again. When the water hit Crenshaw, there were no boats and many families faced drowning. John heard there was a big boat three miles away. He took the little pirogue and in the dead of night and at freezing temperature rowed through the icy waters and dug the oars out of the ice with his fingers and rowed the boat back to Crenshaw, where white men used it to bring out 100 people. But the negro's hands were frozen and his clothes had to be cut from his body, the flesh of his arms cracked and his finger tips may drop off. He is being given the best of care by the white people and he is looked upon as a hero by whites and blacks in the Crenshaw area.

The first stop on the railroad motor car trip was Hinchcliffe, three miles out of Marks. Here, families were living in box cars with Red Cross food and blankets while their bewildered animals roamed up and down the track half-starved.

The next was the town of Darling, which was hit hard by the flood. The water was beginning to drop but it still ran through the streets. Six negroes were reported dead there and food for animals was about exhausted. Dead animals were seen in any direction but the people had sufficient food and already were calculating when they could get back into their homes in the country section, now under from one to five feet of water. Two hundred refugees were reported on the railroad right-of-way there.

At Falcon, the next station, populated almost wholly by negroes, the refugees were quartered in box cars and were being cared for by Postmaster Wier, one of the few white men in the town. He said he was feeding 100 persons but bread and provisions were needed badly. He said boats were needed as at least 100 negroes were stranded back in the woods.

At Sledge, two dead and two missing and many cases of frozen hands and arms were reported. Food for both man and beast was scarce and Thomas Allison, a storekeeper, threw the doors of his store open and invited any hungry person to come in and help himself. A thousand families of refugees were reported in this area and hundreds of head of stock were known to have died. The water was falling today and was 28 inches below its peak, but water from one to two feet deep still stood in the streets.

At Crenshaw, the water missed the town proper but the thickly settled rural section to the west was drowned out and 150 homeless were brought into Crenshaw, where they were given Red Cross relief. A soup kitchen was working overtime and sparsely clothed people were calling for warmer raiment.

Rescuers told stories of animals saving themselves in most peculiar ways. A big fat hog rode a log for miles before it struck high ground. Two little dogs were seen floating on a raft. Chickens perched on housetops and on top of automobiles. Horses, mules and cows swam to safety but many of them, exhausted and starved, died of cold after they had reached high ground.

White women nurses, full of pluck and daring, moved through the zone on handcars and boats with their kits, fighting against the spread of disease and caring for the sick and exposed. The most pathetic cases were those of children. Many a little boy and girl were brought in nearly frozen to death. They literally had to be thawed out, but the Red Cross nurses, physicians and residents have worked manfully and well and are rapidly bringing system out of chaos. In two more weeks, it is estimated, about all of the families will be restored to their homes and they will go forward with spring planting with the full expectation that the water will come again next year.

They are lured by this country by the fertility of the soil, comparable to the Nile, and they are willing to take chances with the high water. And each time the high water comes and recedes, the land becomes richer for cotton and corn.

This is the habitat of the negro and the mule, with enough white people for their bosses. They will always be here. They hope some day the government will run the water into the Mississippi river from the Coldwater basin but they will stay here anyhow.

INDUSTRIAL--REVIEW OF THE TWIN CITIES

LOW PRICES FOR NEW CHEVROLETS

Three Models Of Standard Line Are Below The 1934 Prices

The prices on the New Standard coupe, coach and phaeton are $10 under those of the corresponding 1934 models. On the Master De Luxe prices are exactly the same as in 1934.

Knee-action continues as one of the outstanding features of the Master De Luxe cars, Mr. Holler stated, and is available to any customer on order at slight additional cost. Master De Luxe cars also feature the new Fisher turret top all steel roof construction, and a much larger body with corresponding increase in interior dimensions.

"Chevrolet was able to reduce its Standard model prices and to maintain its price levels on the Master De Luxe series in the face of substantially increased material and manufacturing costs because of the greatly increased value scheduled for 1935, as indicated by the thousands of orders we now have on hand for the immediate delivery of the 1935 lines of cars from our organization of 10,000 dealers," Mr. Holler said in announcing the prices. "Last year Chevrolet built 870,000 passenger cars and trucks, which made it the leading manufacturer of motor cars in the world for the sixth time in the last eight years. With the establishing of our 1935 prices, we are in a position to secure our share of the low-priced car business this year.

"Both lines of cars are greatly improved. The New Standard is now powered with the Master motor and has an entirely new X-type frame which is 15 times more rigid than its predecessor. The Master De Luxe is a completely new and much larger car than the 1934 Master. To increase the comfort of passengers, and procure more body room, the wheelbase has been increased to 113 inches. This line now features, in addition to the new Fisher turret top all steel roof construction, the latest in 'tear drop' design, with dual windshield, no-draft ventilation, and all the comfort and convenience features found in much higher priced cars."

BETTER SERVICE AT PILCHER SHOP

Expert Barber Work Gives You That Well-Groomed Appearance

A well-groomed appearance is an asset valued highly by most successful men. And being well groomed doesn't necessarily mean being dressed in the height of fashion.

Expert barber work goes a long way in assuring correct personal appearance. And there's no place in Monroe where more satisfactory work is turned out than at Pilcher's Barber shop, located on DeSiard street, just across the street from the Paramount theater.

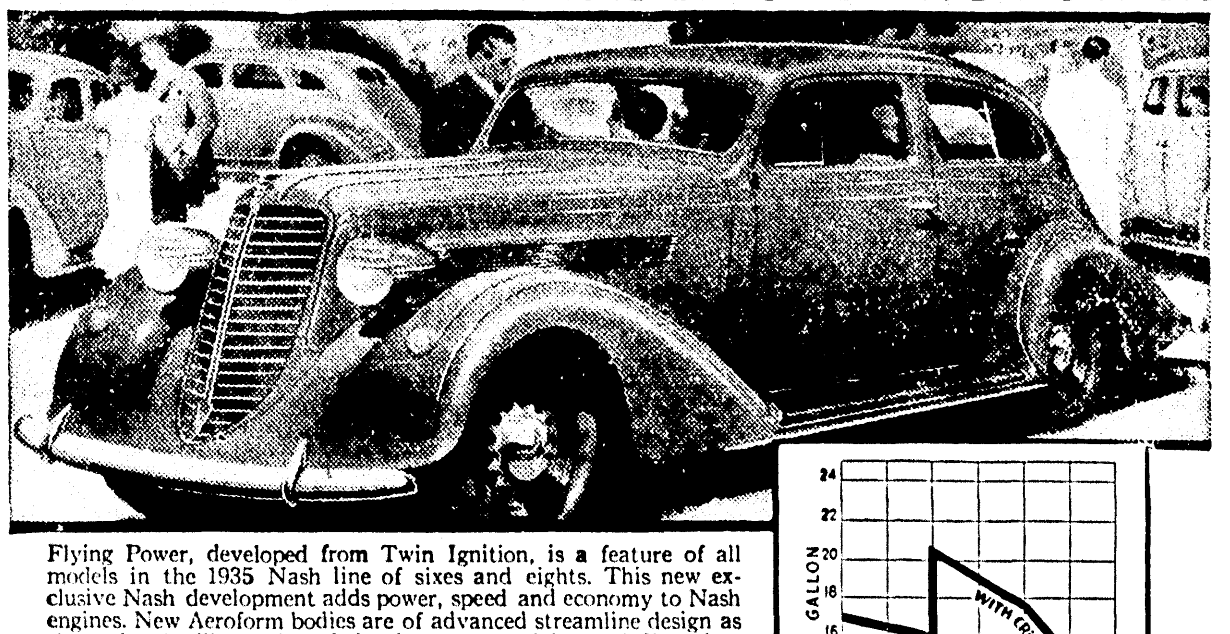
A fresh shave and a haircut work wonders in a man's appearance and the barbers at Pilcher's shop are craftsmen who are thoroughly experienced. Pilcher's, of course, offers complete barber work, including expert manicuring.

The latest products, including well known shampoos, hair tonics and facial preparations, are available at the Pilcher Barber shop at reasonable prices.

You'll find that there's no long wait when you go to Pilcher's for your barber work. There are plenty of barbers to serve you and if it is necessary to wait a few moments for service, you will find plenty of comfortable chairs for your convenience.

Pilcher's Barber shop has many satisfied customers. If you haven't already formed the habit of patronizing this modern shop, drop in this week and enjoy the satisfaction of receiving expert attention.

NEW AEROFORM NASH HAS FLYING POWER



Flying Power, developed from Twin Ignition, is a feature of all models in the 1935 Nash line of sixes and eights. This new exclusive Nash development adds power, speed and economy to Nash engines. New Aeroform bodies are of advanced streamline design as shown by the illustration of the six-passenger Advanced Six sedan.

EXPERT WORK AT LOCAL DUCO SHOP

Plant At 1111 DeSiard Street Makes Specialty Of Wreck Jobs

The Duco Shop, located at 1111 DeSiard street, takes pardonable pride in the class of refinishing work turned out at their shop. Being the oldest authorized Duco refinishing shop in Monroe, a high quality standard was set years ago and this same high quality is maintained today.

The Duco Shop turns of a true factory-like paint job. Regardless of the condition of the car when it enters this shop, it comes out looking like a brand new automobile when the Duco Shop experts have finished with it. Your car may have been in a wreck, with its fenders battered and the paint stripped from its sides, yet Duco Shop craftsmen can give it the same finish it had when it left the factory. You will be amazed at the transformation.

This shop makes a specialty of this kind of job. Their top and upholstery department turns out excellent work, the dents are taken out of a car so that the surface regains its smoothness and then the painters refinish the body with painstaking care.

You will be surprised at the reasonable cost of such a job. The Duco Shop can handle the largest or smallest refinishing job with the same excellent results and their charge is always within reason.

A variety of colors may be had at the Duco Shop. Whatever color you may desire your car refinished in, you will find it there.

Why not drive by the Duco Shop, at 1111 DeSiard street and learn how you can have your car refinished at low cost? Their many customers will testify to the satisfaction of their work.

Oldsmobile Popular At New York's Auto Show

More Oldsmobiles have been sold at retail at the New York automobile show this year than during any other year in Oldsmobile history. More than twice as many have been sold than were sold at the 1934 show.

These figures were made public today by D. E. Ralston, vice president and general sales manager of Oldsmobile and were cited as the basis for increased optimism over general business conditions.

"There can be no question of public acceptance of the 1935 Oldsmobiles," said Mr. Ralston. "The policy of giving the public every proven feature certainly is paying dividends. From the time the doors opened at the New York show, the Oldsmobile booth was crowded with visitors.

"One important improvement which attracted a great deal of attention because of its safety is the solid-steel 'turret-top' body by Fisher. We find that motorists are more and more interested in the safety of their automobiles, and the solid-steel top, which contributes largely to a 40 per cent increase in over-all strength, is regarded by show visitors as extremely important."

FIRE INSPECTION IS SURE ROAD TO SAFETY

Inspections many times reveal hazardous conditions which make the probability of fire a menace to life and property. Discovering these dangers is the first step toward greater safety, according to the Downes-Shadrach Agency, Ouachita National bank building.

A good example of the benefits accruing from inspections is afforded by results obtained at the state fair in Indianapolis, Ind., where the fire prevention committee made 642 inspections of buildings and grounds and ordered correction of 305 defects.

Hazards consisted of defective wiring, the careless handling of gas, gasoline, kerosene, paper, rags, etc. Under the coliseum were thousands gathered, space was rented to various concessionaires and much inflammable material, such as paper and flimsy decorations, was tacked to the pine structure overhead. Elimination of any one of these hazards may have prevented a major conflagration.

Seldom does the average citizen have an opportunity to arrange an inspection of his property by an expert. However, he may inspect it himself, and do away with most common fire hazards, with the aid of the National Board of Fire Underwriters which distributes self-inspection blanks for industrial and mercantile buildings, homes and schools. Armed with one of these blanks, he can obtain a wealth of information about the building in question, and intelligently practice fire-prevention.

Most American homes and buildings contain very real fire dangers which the unsuspecting occupant does not know about. Self-inspection of buildings, under the guidance of National Board inspection blanks, is a sure road to greater safety from fire.

Monore Hardware Company Displaying Popular New Line Of Sets

A new line of "Bring 'Em in Alive" triple-filtered Zenith long-distance radio receiving sets is now on display and being demonstrated by Monroe Hardware company, 105 St. John street, who have recently been appointed dealer in Monroe and this territory for this nationally known firm, one of the poineers in this country in the manufacture of high-quality radios.

Since putting the new 1935 Zenith line of triple-filtered sets in stock they have had many users of old Zenith sets express great enthusiasm over the 18 different models they are showing.

One morning recently they tuned in with England, France and Germany at 8 o'clock. In this reception there was no faltering, weak, sputtering mumblings. The reception was remarkable, positive and clear-cut. The Zenith represents, with its triple filtering, the difference between mere short-wave reception and thrilling short-wave entertainment brought in from the world's distant radio frontiers. The Monroe Hardware company will be pleased to demonstrate this new radio.

This new 1935 Zenith line marks the entry of the manufacturers into the popular-priced field. Throughout the years, Zenith has enjoyed that reputation which usually goes with a high-priced product. And now, that same reputation, same quality and performance is back of this new line in a full range of prices which are competitive.

By all means see the new 1935 Zenith radio sets which "Bring 'Em in Alive." You will immediately recognize the unusual tone the great selectivity of the set and your will appreciate its unusual reception of stations throughout the world.

Dog fanciers of Seattle sponsored a show at which only animals from the far north having a wolf strain could be entered, including huskies, malamutes and mush dogs.

CONGRESS TAKES STOCK OF WEEK

Wider Rifts Seen Over Social Security And Relief Programs

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Congress took stock today of its busiest week thus far and saw possibilities that the next few days might bring even more pronounced rifts over the administration's social security and work relief programs.

With some administration bodies manifestedly surprised at the opposition shown already, the word was passed today that the president would personally supervise allocation of the money from the pending $4,880,000,000 work and relief bill.

Resentment against Secretary Ickes, public works administrator, motivated some of the brisk house debate on the work relief measure, which nevertheless passed that body by an overwhelming vote.

The sentiment for liberalization of the administration's plan for unemployment insurance and old age pensions, meanwhile, caused Chairman Doughton of the house ways and means committee to announce that opposition witnesses would be heard next week.

Hearings had simmered down today but General Hugh S. Johnson, former NRA administrator, denied before the house military affairs committee that he had known of alleged collusion between bidders for naval construction contracts.

John P. Frey, American Federation of Labor official, however, repeated that he had shown Johnson a sealed envelope which contained evidence there had been collusion.

Johnson was called before the military affairs committee to testify on a pending measure which aims to take the profit out of war. The former army officer favored government control but not government operation of industry in war time.

Other developments at Capitol Hill and elsewhere included:

Plans by some bonus payment advocates to attempt to override Speaker Byrns in an attempt to bring the issue to a house vote.

The calling by Leslie G. Garnett, United States attorney, of a special grand jury—the first since Fall-Doheny days—to investigate charges of graft in a $4,000,000 Texas public works administration project.

Police Notes In Verse Warn German Autoists

NURNBERG, Germany, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Police poems instead of unlovely summons remind absent-minded drivers that parking is forbidden at particular spots here.

"Politeness is the best policy" say the traffic police.

"Four hundred yards from here men are at work on the road. Please take care" is a warning which automobilists frequently find on German roads. Just past the danger point a further notice, "Thank you for taking care," has "worked wonders," the police say.

The driver who leaves his car at one of those points in Nurnberg where parking is forbidden finds pasted on his windshield a printed slip with a verse begging him to avoid this place in future and so assist good order in Germany.

Preventing Accidents Takes Good English

In desperation, Morrissey called the roll to see what he had in the way of higher education. The result: Sergeant Albert C. Magenheimer, Indiana university; Sargeant Edward F. Moore, St. Mary's college, Kentucky, and Robert Murnan, patrolman, Butler university, stepped forward.

They are now telling boys and girls, in precise English, just what they should do to avoid being struck by vehicles while going to or from school.

Teachers Too Crafty For Sly Br'er Fox

WINONA, Minn., Jan. 26.—(AP)—The fox, generally credited with being a sly animal, was not sly enough for two teachers of the East Burns Valley school near here.

On their way to school Miss Orvilda Peterson and Miss Lucille Krage, noticed what appeared to be a dog or woodchuck lying in the leaves in a pasture along the road.

"It was a fox," says Miss Peterson, "and he just lay there, playing possum."

She threw her coat over the animal and the two women captured it.

DOUG FROLICS IN FREEDOM

Associated Press Writer Inspects Flood Regions

The prices on the New Standard coupe, coach and phaeton are $10 under those of the corresponding 1934 models. On the Master De Luxe prices are exactly the same as in 1934.

Knee-action continues as one of the outstanding features of the Master De Luxe cars, Mr. Holler stated, and is available to any customer on order at slight additional cost. Master De Luxe cars also feature the new Fisher turret top all steel roof construction, and a much larger body with corresponding increase in interior dimensions.

"Chevrolet was able to reduce its Standard model prices and to maintain its price levels on the Master De Luxe series in the face of substantially increased material and manufacturing costs because of the greatly increased value scheduled for 1935, as indicated by the thousands of orders we now have on hand for the immediate delivery of the 1935 lines of cars from our organization of 10,000 dealers," Mr. Holler said in announcing the prices. "Last year Chevrolet built 870,000 passenger cars and trucks, which made it the leading manufacturer of motor cars in the world for the sixth time in the last eight years. With the establishing of our 1935 prices, we are in a position to secure our share of the low-priced car business this year.

"Both lines of cars are greatly improved. The New Standard is now powered with the Master motor and has an entirely new X-type frame which is 15 times more rigid than its predecessor. The Master De Luxe is a completely new and much larger car than the 1934 Master. To increase the comfort of passengers, and procure more body room, the wheelbase has been increased to 113 inches. This line now features, in addition to the new Fisher turret top all steel roof construction, the latest in 'tear drop' design, with dual windshield, no-draft ventilation, and all the comfort and convenience features found in much higher priced cars."

BETTER SERVICE AT PILCHER SHOP

Expert Barber Work Gives You That Well-Groomed Appearance

A well-groomed appearance is an asset valued highly by most successful men. And being well groomed doesn't necessarily mean being dressed in the height of fashion.

Expert barber work goes a long way in assuring correct personal appearance. And there's no place in Monroe where more satisfactory work is turned out than at Pilcher's Barber shop, located on DeSiard street, just across the street from the Paramount theater.

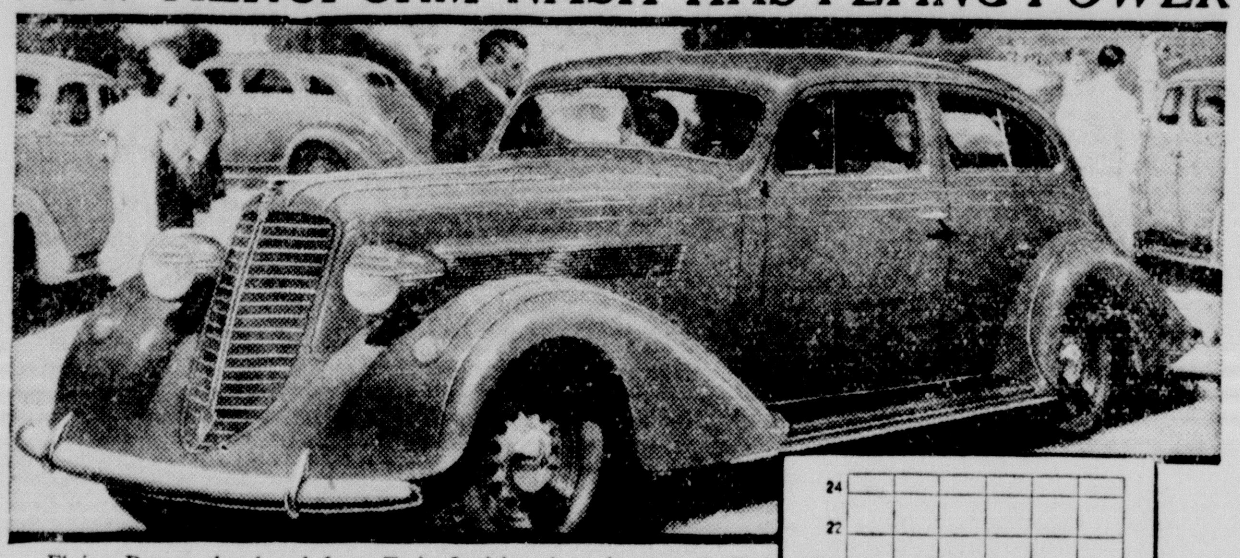
A fresh shave and a haircut work wonders in a man's appearance and the barbers at Pilcher's shop are craftsmen who are thoroughly experienced. Pilcher's, of course, offers complete barber work, including expert manicuring.

The latest products, including well known shampoos, hair tonics and facial preparations, are available at the Pilcher Barber shop at reasonable prices.

You'll find that there's no long wait when you go to Pilcher's for your barber work. There are plenty of barbers to serve you and if it is necessary to wait a few moments for service, you will find plenty of comfortable chairs for your convenience.

Pilcher's Barber shop has many satisfied customers. If you haven't already formed the habit of patronizing this modern shop, drop in this week and enjoy the satisfaction of receiving expert attention.

NEW AEROFORM NASH HAS FLYING POWER



Flying Power, developed from Twin Ignition, is a feature of all models in the 1935 Nash line of sixes and eights. This new exclusive Nash development adds power, speed and economy to Nash engines. New Aeroform bodies are of advanced streamline design as shown by the illustration of the six-passenger Advanced Six sedan.

EXPERT WORK AT LOCAL DUCO SHOP

The Duco Shop, located at 1111 DeSiard street, takes pardonable pride in the class of refinishing work turned out at their shop. Being the oldest authorized Duco refinishing shop in Monroe, a high quality standard was set years ago and this same high quality is maintained today.

The Duco Shop turns of a true factory-like paint job. Regardless of the condition of the car when it enters this shop, it comes out looking like a brand new automobile when the Duco Shop experts have finished with it. Your car may have been in a wreck, with its fenders battered and the paint stripped from its sides, yet Duco Shop craftsmen can give it the same finish it had when it left the factory. You will be amazed at the transformation.

This shop makes a specialty of this kind of job. Their top and upholstery department turns out excellent work, the dents are taken out of a car so that the surface regains its smoothness and then the painters refinish the body with painstaking care.

You will be surprised at the reasonable cost of such a job. The Duco Shop can handle the largest or smallest refinishing job with the same excellent results and their charge is always within reason.

A variety of colors may be had at the Duco Shop. Whatever color you may desire your car refinished in, you will find it there.

Why not drive by the Duco Shop, at 1111 DeSiard street and learn how you can have your car refinished at low cost? Their many customers will testify to the satisfaction of their work.

Oldsmobile Popular At New York's Auto Show

More Oldsmobiles have been sold at retail at the New York automobile show this year than during any other year in Oldsmobile history. More than twice as many have been sold than were sold at the 1934 show.

These figures were made public today by D. E. Ralston, vice president and general sales manager of Oldsmobile and were cited as the basis for increased optimism over general business conditions.

"There can be no question of public acceptance of the 1935 Oldsmobiles," said Mr. Ralston. "The policy of giving the public every proven feature certainly is paying dividends. From the time the doors opened at the New York show, the Oldsmobile booth was crowded with visitors.

"One important improvement which attracted a great deal of attention because of its safety is the solid-steel 'turret-top' body by Fisher. We find that motorists are more and more interested in the safety of their automobiles, and the solid-steel top, which contributes largely to a 40 per cent increase in over-all strength, is regarded by show visitors as extremely important."

FIRE INSPECTION IS SURE ROAD TO SAFETY

Inspections many times reveal hazardous conditions which make the probability of fire a menace to life and property. Discovering these dangers is the first step toward greater safety, according to the Downes-Shadrach Agency, Ouachita National bank building.

A good example of the benefits accruing from inspections is afforded by results obtained at the state fair in Indianapolis, Ind., where the fire prevention committee made 642 inspections of buildings and grounds and ordered correction of 305 defects.

Hazards consisted of defective wiring, the careless handling of gas, gasoline, kerosene, paper, rags, etc. Under the coliseum were thousands gathered, space was rented to various concessionaires and much inflammable material, such as paper and flimsy decorations, was tacked to the pine structure overhead. Elimination of any one of these hazards may have prevented a major conflagration.

Seldom does the average citizen have an opportunity to arrange an inspection of his property by an expert. However, he may inspect it himself, and do away with most common fire hazards, with the aid of the National Board of Fire Underwriters which distributes self-inspection blanks for industrial and mercantile buildings, homes and schools. Armed with one of these blanks, he can obtain a wealth of information about the building in question, and intelligently practice fire-prevention.

Most American homes and buildings contain very real fire dangers which the unsuspecting occupant does not know about. Self-inspection of buildings, under the guidance of National Board inspection blanks, is a sure road to greater safety from fire.

A new line of "Bring 'Em in Alive" triple-filtered Zenith long-distance radio receiving sets is now on display and being demonstrated by Monroe Hardware company, 105 St. John street, who have recently been appointed dealer in Monroe and this territory for this nationally known firm, one of the poineers in this country in the manufacture of high-quality radios.

Since putting the new 1935 Zenith line of triple-filtered sets in stock they have had many users of old Zenith sets express great enthusiasm over the 18 different models they are showing.

One morning recently they tuned in with England, France and Germany at 8 o'clock. In this reception there was no faltering, weak, sputtering mumblings. The reception was remarkable, positive and clear-cut. The Zenith represents, with its triple filtering, the difference between mere short-wave reception and thrilling short-wave entertainment brought in from the world's distant radio frontiers. The Monroe Hardware company will be pleased to demonstrate this new radio.

This new 1935 Zenith line marks the entry of the manufacturers into the popular-priced field. Throughout the years, Zenith has enjoyed that reputation which usually goes with a high-priced product. And now, that same reputation, same quality and performance is back of this new line in a full range of prices which are competitive.

Remember, the Monroe Hardware company is prepared to sell radio receiving sets on the weekly or monthly payment basis.

By all means see the new 1935 Zenith radio sets which "Bring 'Em in Alive." You will immediately recognize the unusual tone the great selectivity of the set and your will appreciate its unusual reception of stations throughout the world.

Dog fanciers of Seattle sponsored a show at which only animals from the far north having a wolf strain could be entered, including huskies, malamutes and mush dogs.

Cotton

New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Cotton ruled very quiet in today's short session with traders still awaiting the supreme court's decision on gold. Prices opened 2 to 6 points down as Liverpool cables came in much lower than due. The market ruled quiet all session with the price range limited to 2 to 4 points. The market was steadier right at the end and rallied a point or two, March trading up to 12.47 at the close, May at 12.51, July at 12.51, and October 12.42. The market closed steady with prices net unchanged to 4 points down.

Sugar

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Raw sugar was quiet today. In the absence of business prices were unchanged at 2.80 for spots with additional offerings at this level, but local refiners showed no interest above 2.78.

In futures initial prices were 1 point lower and a rather heavy tone prevailed later under liquidation and scattered local and commission house selling. Prices eased another point or two with March in the old contract selling off from 1.88 to 1.86 and September from 2.01 to 1.99.

In the new contract May sold at 1.89 and September eased from 1.99 to 1.98. The market closed at about the lowest and 1 to 2 points off in both contracts.

Sales in the old contract were 1,700 tons and in the new 700 tons. In the old delivery March closed at 1.87, May 1.92 and Sept. 2.01. In the new, March closed at 1.81, May 1.89 and Sept. 1.98 to 1.99.

Sugar futures closed barely steady, 1-2 lower; sales 1,700 tons. March 1.86—87; May 1.92; July 1.95B; Sept. 2.00B, Dec. 2.07B.

Best yearlings 12.75; choice steers sold actively at 12.00 upward but late in week all in-betweens lost 50 and closing undertone turned dull on near-choice offerings, especially yearlings that had been bringing 11.00 to 12.00. Choice cows up to 7.50; part load strictly choice heifer yearlings 11.50; 723 lb., mixed offerings 11.65; vealers 11.00 or more higher.

Sheep, 5,000; for week ending Friday 4,800 direct; compared Friday last week; fat and feeding lambs around 15-25 higher, week's top lambs 9.60 paid early, top on low day 9.25. Yearlings scarce; aged ewes 4.00-5.25, bulk 4.50-5.00.

Hogs 8,000, including 7,000 direct; meager supply on offer; market nominally steady with Friday's average; scattered bids and sales at 7.95 downward. All quotations nominal.

Potatoes

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—(AP)—(USDA)—Potatoes 40, on track 186, total U. S. shipments 976; steady, supplies moderate, demand and trading slow; sacked per cwt. Wisconsin round whites, U. S. No. 1, .80-85; commercial grade .77 1-2; Idaho russets, U. S. No. 1, 1.60-62 1-2; fine quality, large size 1.67 1-2.

Lime mixed with turtle oil or whale blood formed the cement with which the fortifications of St. George's, Bermuda, were once made. After 300 years they are still standing in good condition.

New York Stocks

By Victor Eubank

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—(AP)—The stock market exhibited some nervousness today in the face of renewed weakness in leading foreign exchanges and a rather heavy tone displayed by rail equities. Some amusement and traction issues improved along with scattered specialties. The close was irregular. Transfers approximated 350,000 shares.

With the British pound dropping a cent or more, and the principal European gold currencies off several points most traders were not disposed to extend commitments on the buying side and there was some selling on the theory that the week-end might bring bearish news.

Falling exchange rates were attributed partly to the fact that purchases have diminished greatly due to the uncertainty surrounding the gold clause decision expected soon from the supreme court. Fears have been expressed that, should the ruling be against the government, the present gold price might be substantially reduced. Thus, buying of gold abroad apparently will be at zero until the high court hands down its judgment, and there will be little demand for foreign monies.

While the majority of stocks were unable to resume their mild rally of the previous session, bonds were again in demand. Carrier loans, despite the softness of rail shares, pointed higher. Commodities, including grains and cotton, were a bit easier in the early dealings.

Shares of Armour of Illinois preferred got up 3 points, and Warner Bros. preferred and Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit advanced about 2 each. Paramount certificates, Loew's, Interboro Rapid Transit and Wesson Oil were fractionally firmer. Further unification hopes apparently helped the traction group. The theatrical section found a following on reports business was improving and that the Paramount reorganization plans were nearing completion.

Otis Steel preferred yielded 4 points and others, down fractions to more than a point, included Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Delaware & Hudson, N. Y. Central, Northern Pacific Case Consolidated Gas, U. S. Steel, American Can, Dupont and Radio preferred B. Such issues as General Motors, Chrysler, Standard Oils of New Jersey and California, General Electric and American Telephone were virtually unchanged.

Selig Returns From Trip To New York And Chicago

E. Jack Selig, local clothier, has just returned from a buying trip to Chicago and New York. While in Chicago, Mr. Selig attended the convention of the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers.

Mr. Selig states that the trend this spring will be toward sports clothing and ensembles. The outstanding coat of the season will be the yoke shoulder coat with shirred back. Double-breasted jackets are equally as popular as the single-breasted. White shoes and light weight felt hats will be a general favorite.

Mr. Selig is featuring these new styles in his establishment and states that this goods will be shown about February 1.

Miscellaneous 6

If you are in sympathy with the share-the-wealth program, you should certainly take advantage of the high quality and low prices we offer, because you may readily agree they are truly of that nature.

We still say it's foolish to pay more when you cannot buy better quality products.

When better Quality Motor Oils and Greases are made we will sell them.

We challenge you to buy Motor Oils and Greases of the same quality we offer you, without your having to pay double the price we quote.

Wake up, some of you sleeping motorists, and take advantage of the unquestionable high quality Motor Oils and Greases we are offering you, at such ridiculous low price.

Nationally advertised canned Motor Oils.

Canned Motor Oils as low as 15c per qt. Medium, heavy or X-heavy grades. 100 per cent Pure Pennsylvania Motor Oil 17 1-2c per qt. (or 50c per gal. in bulk; 5 gal.) In your container.

Nationally adv. Cup and Pressure Greases 10c per lb., in 5 or 10 lb cans.

Guaranteed high quality Motor Oils as low as 10c per quart or 35c per gallon. Satisfaction guaranteed or your money refunded.

Let us check your transmission or differential, if it needs grease, we will put the proper grease in for the small sum of 25c for 2 one pound shots.

Batteries six volts thirteen plates. Batteries Guaranteed 30 days for $1.00 and exchange. (Some of our customers have run our batteries from six to ten months after guarantee expired.)

We sell Motor Oil in larger quantities much cheaper. We also sell tractor fuel for tractor farmers.

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

NEW YORK, Jan. 26. — (AP) — Stocks irregular, rails sag. Bonds mixed, U. S. governments narrow. Curb uneven, specialties improve. Foreign exchanges heavy, sterling drops. Cotton steady, lower cables, local and southern selling. Sugar quiet, poor spot demand. Coffee higher, better spot inquiry.

CHICAGO.—Wheat easy; awaiting monetary developments. Corn steady; visible supplies diminishing. Cattle nominally steady. Hogs nominally steady; few sales $7.95 down.

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Considerable firmness developed in grain prices early today after a hesitant start. Opening unchanged to 3-8 lower, May 97 1-8—3-8, wheat afterward scored some advance all around. Corn started unchanged to 1-4 off, May 87 7-8—85, and subsequently climbed.

Wheat closed sluggish, unchanged to 1-4 lower compared with yesterday's finish, May 97 1-8—1-4, corn 1-4 off to 1-8 up, May 84 7-8—85, oats unchanged, and provisions unchanged to 12 cents decline.

Sugar

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Raw sugar was quiet today. In the absence of business prices were unchanged at 2.80 for spots with additional offerings at this level, but local refiners showed no interest above 2.78.

In futures initial prices were 1 point lower and a rather heavy tone prevailed later under liquidation and scattered local and commission house selling. Prices eased another point or two with March in the old contract selling off from 1.88 to 1.86 and September from 2.01 to 1.99.

In the new contract May sold at 1.89 and September eased from 1.99 to 1.98. The market closed at about the lowest and 1 to 2 points off in both contracts.

Sales in the old contract were 1,700 tons and in the new 700 tons. In the old delivery March closed at 1.87, May 1.92 and Sept. 2.00. In the new, March closed at 1.84, May 1.89 and Sept. 1.98 to 1.99.

Refined was unchanged at 4.30 for fine granulated with only a moderate inquiry reported.

Sugar futures closed barely steady, 1-2 lower; sales 1,700 tons. March 1.86—87; May 1.92; July 1.95B; Sept. 2.00B; Dec. 2.07B.

Livestock

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—(AP)—(USDA)—Cattle, 400 commercial; 100 government; calves 200 commercial; 100 government; compared Friday last week. Best yearlings 12.75; choice steers sold actively at 12.00 upward but late in week all in-betweens lost 50 and closing undertone turned dull on near-choice offerings, especially yearlings that had been bringing 1.00 to 12.00. Choice cows up to 7.50; part load strictly choice heifer yearlings 11.50; 723 lb., mixed offerings 11.65; vealers 1.00 or more higher.

Sheep, 5,000; for week ending Friday 4,800 directs; compared Friday last week; fat and feeding lambs around 15-25 higher, week's top lambs 9.60 paid early, top on low day 9.25. Yearlings scarce; aged ewes 4.00-5.25, bulk 4.50-5.00.

Hogs 8,000, including 7,000 direct; meager supply on offer; market nominally steady with Friday's average; scattered bids and sales at 7.95 downward. All quotations nominal.

Potatoes

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—(AP)—(USDA)—Potatoes 40, on track 186, total U. S. shipments 976; steady, supplies moderate, demand and trading slow; sacked per cwt. Wisconsin round whites, U. S. No. 1, .80-85; commercial grade .77 1-2; Idaho russets, U. S. No. 1, 1.60-62 1-2; fine quality, large size 1.67 1-2.

Lime mixed with turtle oil or whale blood formed the cement with which the fortifications of St. George's, Bermuda, were once made. After 300 years they are still standing in good condition.

New York Stocks

By Victor Eubank

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—(AP)—The stock market exhibited some nervousness today in the face of renewed weakness in leading foreign exchanges and a rather heavy tone displayed by rail equities. Some amusement and traction issues improved along with scattered specialties. The close was irregular. Transfers approximated 350,000 shares.

With the British pound dropping a cent or more, and the principal European gold currencies off several points most traders were not disposed to extend commitments on the buying side and there was some selling on the theory that the week-end might bring bearish news.

Falling exchange rates were attributed partly to the fact that purchases have diminished greatly due to the uncertainty surrounding the gold clause decision expected soon from the supreme court. Fears have been expressed that, should the ruling be against the government, the present gold price might be substantially reduced. Thus, buying of gold abroad apparently will be at zero until the high court hands down its judgment, and there will be little demand for foreign monies.

While the majority of stocks were unable to resume their mild rally of the previous session, bonds were again in demand. Carrier loans, despite the softness of rail shares, pointed higher. Commodities, including grains and cotton, were a bit easier in the early dealings.

Shares of Armour of Illinois preferred got up 3 points, and Warner Bros. preferred and Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit advanced about 2 each. Paramount certificates, Loew's, Interboro Rapid Transit and Wesson Oil were fractionally firmer. Further unification hopes apparently helped the traction group. The theatrical section found a following on reports business was improving and that the Paramount reorganization plans were nearing completion.

Otis Steel preferred yielded 4 points and others, down fractions to more than a point, included Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Delaware & Hudson, N. Y. Central, Northern Pacific Case Consolidated Gas, U. S. Steel, American Can, Dupont and Radio preferred B. Such issues as General Motors, Chrysler, Standard Oils of New Jersey and California, General Electric and American Telephone were virtually unchanged.

Selig Returns From Trip To New York And Chicago

E. Jack Selig, local clothier, has just returned from a buying trip to Chicago and New York. While in Chicago, Mr. Selig attended the convention of the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers.

Mr. Selig states that the trend this spring will be toward sports clothing and ensembles. The outstanding coat of the season will be the yoke shoulder coat with shirred back. Double-breasted jackets are equally as popular as the single-breasted. White shoes and light weight felt hats will be a general favorite.

Mr. Selig is featuring these new styles in his establishment and states that this goods will be shown about February 1.

CATTLE PURCHASE PLAN CONTINUES

Committee To Buy Stock At Locations On West Side Of River

Continuing the government cattle purchasing program in Ouachita parish this week, the purchasing committee during the first half of the week will buy stock at various places on the west side of the river, it was announced yesterday by E. R. Strahan, parish agricultural agent.

Only cattle in poor condition and unfit for rail shipment will be purchased, as the plan to include fat cattle in the purchase program and to ship the latter to the government concentration point at Alexandria has been abandoned. The plan was abandoned because it became apparent last week when cattle were purchased at Cheniere that a carload of fat cattle could not be purchased in the parish, because of drought conditions and lack of proper feeding, it was stated.

Places where cattle in poor condition will be purchased during the first half of the week are as follows:

Monday: 8:30 a. m., Harper's ranch, Bawcomville; 9:30 a. m., E. V. Breard's farm; 11 a. m., J. E. Rutledge's farm; 1 p. m., Traveler's Rest stock farm; 3 p. m., White's Ferry at A. C. White place.

Tuesday: 8:30 a. m., John Carlton farm, near Calhoun; 2 p. m., dipping vat, Indian Village, near Down's place.

Wednesday: 8: 30 a. m., S. L. Hendrix's store, ward 9; 10:30 a. m., T. T. Jones' place, Red Cut road; 1 p. m., Charles McCain's place; 3 p. m., Sam Wood's place, Jonesboro road, ward 7.

During the latter part of the week cattle will be purchased on the east side of the river at places which will be announced later.

ALABAMA PRESS TO MEET IN ORLEANS

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 26.—(Special)—The Alabama Press association voted unanimously today to hold a special convention in New Orleans in May to meet in joint session with the Louisiana Press association and three other southern state press associations.

The action was taken at the concluding session of the body following the presentation of an invitation by Isaac Chapman, Bastrop, secretary of the Louisiana Press association.

Other states to meet in the joint session are Arkansas, Mississippi and Florida. The joint sesion will be held in New Orleans in conjunction with the fiftieth anniversary convention of the National Editorial association.

With the band are comedians, vocalists, a magician and a bevy of talented co-eds together with an up-to-the-minute collegiate orchestra.

Y. W. C. A. ANNUAL REPORT IS MADE

New Board Members Are Also Elected At Meeting On Friday

At the annual meeting of the Y. W. C. A. held here Friday afternoon, reports showed that for the past year "204 women and girls had been touched" by the organization, 66 girls had taken up residence at the "Y" building and 16 transients had stopped over night. The meeting was presided over by Mrs. W. B. Clarke, president of the board of directors.

Election of board members followed the several reports given. The new members elected to the board were Mrs. E. C. Gibson, Mrs. C. K. Dickard, Miss Sadi Foster, Mrs. Allen Sholars, Mrs. Walter Rhodes and Mrs. C. P. Gray. Members re-elected were Mrs. Roy Hale, Mrs. S. A. Moss and Mrs. L. T. Morris.

The annual meeting had originally been called for Thursday but in respect to the death of Mrs A. C. Newton, who was a sister of Mrs. J. C. Sadler, first vice-president of the board, the meeting was adjourned until Friday.

Scientist Tells How Far In Space Man Can Hope To See

How far can man hope to see? Is there a limit which will hide from him the outer edge of the star fields now constituting all he knows of creation? Samuel G. Hibben, lighting research expert, discusses this fascinating subject in the following article written for the Associated Press.

* * *

By Samuel G. Hibben

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—(AP)—There appears to be a screen in space which finally may limit the vision of telescopes. It is an unbelievably thin screen, a texture of molecules.

The problem of piercing it begins with the human eye. The average eye in good daylight can see an object the size of a penny at a distance of somewhat more than 100 feet.

Two things stupendously extend the reach of man's vision. The first is the brightness of the object viewed, as a star. The second is the capability of a telescope to accumulate relatively large volumes of light, or to add up the radiation for an extended period of time and hence accumulate a record of a light source that might be fainter, easily, by a million times less than the eye could see alone.

When we build a great telescope we first attain a magnifying power which is roughly measurable by comparing the size of the telescope disc to that of the pupil of the eye. Since the pupil is about one-fifth of an inch in diameter, and the world's largest telescope now under construction is 200 inches it is apparent that the volume of light gathered by the telescope would be a million times greater than could enter the unaided eye.

If we add to this magnifying power the cumulative capacity of the photographic plate on which the light may be focussed night after night until the faintest image is eventually recorded, we can understand why the range of man's vision might seem to be limited only by the size and accuracy of the telescope.

With the present 100-inch telescope man can see 150,000,000 light years distance. With the 200-inch he will see probably a billion light years.

But when we think that still bigger telescopes would indefinitely extend our visual reach, barriers appear.

Foremost of all we must consider that a beam of light from a star would be dispersed or absorbed eventually should it encounter any material, however diaphanous, in its path.

True intersellar space may be likened to an almost perfect vacuum. Probably it is so nearly empty of what we know as matter, that no more than one molecule of substance could be found in each cubic inch of space.

So even in a "perfect" celestial vacuum, with but one molecule to dodge in each inch of light-travel, a beam on a billion year journey would have the possibility of encountering 350,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 stray molecular or atomic particles.

That cannot be said to represent a clear track for a ray of light.

Furthermore, although widely dispersed, there are certain masses of gas or clouds of unbelievably thin dust in certain places in the heavens.

At present therefore man's vision cannot be guaranteed of definite range. The screen of molecules grows with distance.

It is not necessarily an insuperable screen. There might be limits, as some astronomers suggest, to the amount of matter in creation, and so to the screen of molecules.

If that is true a great telescope some day might break through the screen. But possibly there would be nothing beyond it to be seen.

There are other forms of radiation from stars more penetrating than light. These other rays are not nearly so voluminous; nor are there at present instruments for detecting them, with the exception of cosmic rays.

It is not beyond the possibilities that science will develop instruments for measuring and interrupting the meaning of these rays to supplement the story told by light, or even to reach out farther into space than is done with light.

GAIN IS MADE IN AUTO TAG SALES

Nearly 1,000 Are Sold In First Rush Day Of Season

For the first time this season the sale of automobile licenses for 1935 was brisk Saturday at the motor vehicle bureau at 212 North Second street. The office was full of license buyers most of the day and it was thought that the total number paid might have reached 1,000, or one-fourth of the entire number that had been previously paid, although a tabulation of the sales for the day had not been made.

Saturday's license sales brought the number up to near the 5,000 mark, with an estimated 15,000 to be paid by automobile owners in the territory served by the Monroe bureau. There are six individual bureaus in the state, with the one located here serving this section of northeast Louisiana.

Eight more business days remain before the close of the non-penalty period, which ends February 5. This means that more than 1,000 licenses must be sold on each of the remaining days if all are to be obtained during the non-penalty period. Usually those who wait until the last few days must stand in line 40 minutes or longer before being able to reach the paying window, because of the fact that the lines frequently are long enough to reach out into the street.

NOTED PIANIST TO APPEAR HERE

Dalies Frantz Will Give Recital Under Auspices Of Coterie

Dalies Frantz, brilliant American pianist, who two years ago won the award of the Federation of Music Clubs as the most outstanding artist of the year, will appear in recital in Monroe on Tuesday, February 5, according to announcement made Saturday by a group of local music lovers who are bringing him to the city.

The recital will be given in Northeast Center's beautiful auditorium, and promises to attract one of the largest audiences that has ever assembled for a similar event in this city, it was stated by members of the Monroe Musical Coterie, who are lending their support to the plans. The Musical Coterie and the Junior Coterie will aid in the sale of tickets which are to be sold at a moderate price to give the largest number possible an opportunity to hear him.

Mrs. Louis Hullum, who heard Frantz in his recital at the music federation meeting in St. Louis when the artist was given the award for distinguished musical merit, said Saturday that "Mr. Frantz is one of the great musical artists of this country; though he is yet a young man he has made a great reputation for himself and thrilled the entire throng, virtually every one of whom was a competent musical critic, who crowded the St. Louis auditorium to hear him two years ago.

"Monroe is fortunate to be able to get an opportunity to hear him," Mrs. Hullum said. In fact, it is only because of an open date that it was possible to make arrangements for Frantz to appear here. He will give recitals in Louisiana only in New Orleans and Baton Rouge, besides the one in Monroe.

The Toronto Telegram, telling of his recent appearance in Canada, said of Frantz: "The audience recalled the brilliant young pianist five times. His Liszt was a mervelous performance—Liszt at his vividest, giving the piano its royal place as queen of solo instruments. Mr. Frantz might have been a fair-haired youthful Liszt for the fire and startling virtuosity of his work at the keyboard. Magnificent power and astonishing clarity in rapidest actave, scale, arpeggio and chordal passages, and the loveliest crystal tone in suave medodic phrases, patricularly delightful when countered by clarinet and solo violin."

Sheriff Calls Attention To Registration Places

Sheriff Milton Coverdale called attention of voters Saturday to the fact that poll registration books have been placed in a central location in each of the 29 voting precincts of the parish. The books will remain at these locations until February 1 and after that time will be returned to the courthouse.

Registration books are now being signed for 1934. Books for 1933 have not yet been received, but it is expected that they will be received within a few months and that they will be signed chiefly during the last six months of the year.

Poll registrations take the place of the poll tax payment, which was abolished under recent legislation. Those who now register on the sheriff's registration roll merely sign their names and are not required to make any payment.

Registration books were placed in the different precincts for the convenience of the voters. The sheriff's office at the courthouse is the regular place for signing the rolls and after February 1 they will be returned to that place.

RETURNS HOME

Sterlington P.-T. A. Holds Regular Meet

Activities of Sterlington Boy Scout Troop No. 67 were demonstrated at the regular meeting of the Sterlington P.-T. A., held Thursday. Tom Wafer, scoutmaster, had charge of the demonstration, which included exhibits of work done by the scouts. An interesting discussion of the "Management of Home and School Resources" was presented by Dr. Charles E. Kenney, principal of Neville high school of Monroe. A vocal solo was rendered by Mrs. O. K. Bailey, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Miller. The program was in charge of O. K. Bailey.

Prior to the entertainment features a short business session was held, when reports were received from various committees. Light refreshments were served by Mrs. Woodhead, Mrs. Knox, Mrs. Young, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Holliday and Mrs. Bailey. The president, Mrs. Gifford Wright, presided at the meeting.

LEAVES SANITARIUM

Carl Moore, 104 Georgia street, who was slightly injured in an automobile accident recently, was able to leave Riverside sanitarium Friday.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—(AP)—There appears to be a screen in space which finally may limit the vision of telescopes. It is an unbelievably thin screen, a texture of molecules.

The problem of piercing it begins with the human eye. The average eye in good daylight can see an object the size of a penny at a distance of somewhat more than 100 feet.

Two things stupendously extend the reach of man's vision. The first is the brightness of the object viewed, as a star. The second is the capability of a telescope to accumulate relatively large volumes of light, or to add up the radiation for an extended period of time and hence accumulate a record of a light source that might be fainter, easily, by a million times less than the eye could see alone.

When we build a great telescope we first attain a magnifying power which is roughly measurable by comparing the size of the telescope disc to that of the pupil of the eye. Since the pupil is about one-fifth of an inch in diameter, and the world's largest telescope now under construction is 200 inches it is apparent that the volume of light gathered by the telescope would be a million times greater than could enter the unaided eye.

If we add to this magnifying power the cumulative capacity of the photographic plate on which the light may be focussed night after night until the faintest image is eventually recorded, we can understand why the range of man's vision might seem to be limited only by the size and accuracy of the telescope.

With the present 100-inch telescope man can see 150,000,000 light years distance. With the 200-inch he will see probably a billion light years.

But when we think that still bigger telescopes would indefinitely extend our visual reach, barriers appear.

Foremost of all we must consider that a beam of light from a star would be dispersed or absorbed eventually should it encounter any material, however diaphanous, in its path.

True intersellar space may be likened to an almost perfect vacuum. Probably it is so nearly empty of what we know as matter, that no more than one molecule of substance could be found in each cubic inch of space.

So even in a "perfect" celestial vacuum, with but one molecule to dodge in each inch of light-travel, a beam on a billion year journey would have the possibility of encountering 350,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 stray molecular or atomic particles.

That cannot be said to represent a clear track for a ray of light.

Furthermore, although widely dispersed, there are certain masses of gas or clouds of unbelievably thin dust in certain places in the heavens.

At present therefore man's vision cannot be guaranteed of definite range. The screen of molecules grows with distance.

It is not necessarily an insuperable screen. There might be limits, as some astronomers suggest, to the amount of matter in creation, and so to the screen of molecules.

If that is true a great telescope some day might break through the screen. But possibly there would be nothing beyond it to be seen.

There are other forms of radiation from stars more penetrating than light. These other rays are not nearly so voluminous; nor are there at present instruments for detecting them, with the exception of cosmic rays.

It is not beyond the possibilities that science will develop instruments for measuring and interrupting the meaning of these rays to supplement the story told by light, or even to reach out farther into space than is done with light.

GAIN IS MADE IN AUTO TAG SALES

Nearly 1,000 Are Sold In First Rush Day Of Season

For the first time this season the sale of automobile licenses for 1935 was brisk Saturday at the motor vehicle bureau at 212 North Second street. The office was full of license buyers most of the day and it was thought that the total number paid might have reached 1,000, or one-fourth of the entire number that had been previously paid, although a tabulation of the sales for the day had not been made.

Saturday's license sales brought the number up to near the 5,000 mark, with an estimated 15,000 to be paid by automobile owners in the territory served by the Monroe bureau. There are six individual bureaus in the state, with the one located here serving this section of northeast Louisiana.

Eight more business days remain before the close of the non-penalty period, which ends February 5. This means that more than 1,000 licenses must be sold on each of the remaining days if all are to be obtained during the non-penalty period. Usually those who wait until the last few days must stand in line 40 minutes or longer before being able to reach the paying window, because of the fact that the lines frequently are long enough to reach out into the street.

NOTED PIANIST TO APPEAR HERE

Dalies Frantz Will Give Recital Under Auspices Of Coterie

Dalies Frantz, brilliant American pianist, who two years ago won the award of the Federation of Music Clubs as the most outstanding artist of the year, will appear in recital in Monroe on Tuesday, February 5, according to announcement made Saturday by a group of local music lovers who are bringing him to the city.

The recital will be given in Northeast Center's beautiful auditorium, and promises to attract one of the largest audiences that has ever assembled for a similar event in this city, it was stated by members of the Monroe Musical Coterie, who are lending their support to the plans. The Musical Coterie and the Junior Coterie will aid in the sale of tickets which are to be sold at a moderate price to give the largest number possible an opportunity to hear him.

Mrs. Louis Hullum, who heard Frantz in his recital at the music federation meeting in St. Louis when the artist was given the award for distinguished musical merit, said Saturday that "Mr. Frantz is one of the great musical artists of this country; though he is yet a young man he has made a great reputation for himself and thrilled the entire throng, virtually every one of whom was a competent musical critic, who crowded the St. Louis auditorium to hear him two years ago.

"Monroe is fortunate to be able to get an opportunity to hear him," Mrs. Hullum said. In fact, it is only because of an open date that it was possible to make arrangements for Frantz to appear here. He will give recitals in Louisiana only in New Orleans and Baton Rouge, besides the one in Monroe.

The Toronto Telegram, telling of his recent appearance in Canada, said of Frantz: "The audience recalled the brilliant young pianist five times. His Liszt was a mervelous performance—Liszt at his vividest, giving the piano its royal place as queen of solo instruments. Mr. Frantz might have been a fair-haired youthful Liszt for the fire and startling virtuosity of his work at the keyboard. Magnificent power and astonishing clarity in rapidest actave, scale, arpeggio and chordal passages, and the loveliest crystal tone in suave medodic phrases, patricularly delightful when countered by clarinet and solo violin."

Sheriff Calls Attention To Registration Places

Sheriff Milton Coverdale called attention of voters Saturday to the fact that poll registration books have been placed in a central location in each of the 29 voting precincts of the parish. The books will remain at these locations until February 1 and after that time will be returned to the courthouse.

Registration books are now being signed for 1934. Books for 1933 have not yet been received, but it is expected that they will be received within a few months and that they will be signed chiefly during the last six months of the year.

Poll registrations take the place of the poll tax payment, which was abolished under recent legislation. Those who now register on the sheriff's registration roll merely sign their names and are not required to make any payment.

Registration books were placed in the different precincts for the convenience of the voters. The sheriff's office at the courthouse is the regular place for signing the rolls and after February 1 they will be returned to that place.

RETURNS HOME

Sterlington P.-T. A. Holds Regular Meet

Activities of Sterlington Boy Scout Troop No. 67 were demonstrated at the regular meeting of the Sterlington P.-T. A., held Thursday. Tom Wafer, scoutmaster, had charge of the demonstration, which included exhibits of work done by the scouts. An interesting discussion of the "Management of Home and School Resources" was presented by Dr. Charles E. Kenney, principal of Neville high school of Monroe. A vocal solo was rendered by Mrs. O. K. Bailey, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Miller. The program was in charge of O. K. Bailey.

Prior to the entertainment features a short business session was held, when reports were received from various committees. Light refreshments were served by Mrs. Woodhead, Mrs. Knox, Mrs. Young, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Holliday and Mrs. Bailey. The president, Mrs. Gifford Wright, presided at the meeting.

LEAVES SANITARIUM

Lashed Her Loving Subjects With a Bull-Whip

"Obey Me or Die!" Was the Grim Command of the Island Baroness, Who "Stars" in the Mystery of Galapagos

"The Baroness, true to character to the last, drove Lorenz aboard the small launch, lashed him brutally with the whip, spat in his face and otherwise insulted him. Her parting words were: 'I hope you die!' "

NOW, for the first time, can be told the true, inside story of the astounding mystery of the Galapagos Islands!

The solution, with its eerie hints of murder, slow and horrible death from starvation, and brutal, uninhibited passions running rampant in a tropical paradise, fulfills all the weirdly romantic speculations made in many recent dispatches.

It is the story of a cruel, overbearing woman ruling over an island kindom in despotic fashion, and enforcing her commands with a black-snake bull whip and an enormous pearl handled pistol . . .

It is the story of idealistic, gentle, nature-loving men and women living together happily until the arrival of this demon in woman's form, and the story of dull, stupid men fighting a never-ending battle of life and death for the smiles of their queen . . .

But much more than this—it is the everlasting story of what happens inevitably when ultra-modern men and women attempt to throw off the shackles of conventions and revert to the existence of the cave people!

Newspapers recently published many stories of the experiments in modern living being made at Galapagos. These experiments were climaxed a few weeks ago when the mummified bodies of two men, apparently dead from starvation, were discovered on lonely Marchena Island, one of the Galapagos group.

The Secret Uncovered

This was the first inkling the world at large had received that all was not well among the South Seas moderns. It aroused much curiosity, and finally several different groups of scientists set out to investigate. One party uncovered the whole appalling story, and it is herewith related, exclusively.

It seems that some five years ago, a little group of two men and two women, all Germans, left their homes to live "perfect lives" on small, uninhabited Charles Island, in the Galapagos. They were Arthur Wittmer and his wife, Margaret Walbrol, "practicing" nudists, and Dr. Karl Ritter and Frau Dore Koervin.

Dr. Ritter had received his wife's consent to leave her for his new life in the tropics, and Frau Koervin, one of his patients, had likewise received permission from her husband to make the experiment. It seems that Dr. Ritter had been treating her malady with a diet of raw food. He had been very successful. Hence, they both determined to move to the South Seas, where they would have a perpetual diet of raw foods.

The respective spouses of Dr. Ritter and Frau Koervin attended a gay going-away party in Berlin, and then bade them good-bye.

The Galapagos Islands, which lie on the Equator about 800 miles off the coast of Ecuador, proved an ideal spot for the experiment. There are twenty-four principal islands in the group, and the Germans chose Charles Island as their place of abode.

Wittmer and his wife had taken their young son with them to the island, and some months later another child was born to them. The two families lived side by side, in huts they made themselves, and fed themselves from the vegetable foods they raised.

The climate and tropical sun proved ideal for their experiments in nudism, and in the letters they wrote from their retreat in the first couple of years there, they expressed themselves as "ideally happy."

Life was full and comfortable for these friendly couples until about two years ago. Then a strange trio landed on the rough beach of Charles Island and announced their intention of establishing a home there.

The leader of the trio, strangely enough, seemed to be a lean, fanatical young woman, who announced herself as the Baroness Eloise Bosquet de Wagner Wehrborn, of Paris. She had won her title through marriage to a French War ace, whom she had abandoned but would not divorce.

With her were Alfred Rudolph Lorenz, small, weak, tubercular and her lover, and their common friend, Robert Phillipson, strong, handsome and robust. All three were Germans.

The Baroness and her two friends soon became the talk of the islands. Her favorite costume was a pair of silk panties and an abbreviated "sun shirt." Whenever she appeared outside her home she wore a large pearl-handled pistol strapped to her side and carried an ugly-looking bull-whip.

The three lived in apparent harmony and foraged for their food, along with the other residents of the island. But one day their gentle neighbors were horrified to learn that a favorite pastime for the Baroness was to shoot harmless animals on the island, and then carefully nurse them back to health!

First Horror Revealed

She "never wished to kill," but she seemed most happy when she was ministering to some beast which she had critically wounded with her ever-threatening pistol. The practice revolted her nature-loving neighbors and they complained—futilely.

For a short time after this revelation the residents of Charles Island lived pretty much to themselves. Then one day an open boat drifted into a small bay on the island, bearing five men and a woman, all of them nearly dead from thirst and exposure to the tropical sun.

They managed to identify themselves as Pablo Rolando, his bride, Blanca Rosa, and four sailors. The Rolandos were on a honeymoon on a small yacht. It was wrecked and they and the four sailors were forced to put off in the small boat. They reached the island just when it seemed certain they could stave off death for only a few hours.

The Baroness, advised of the arrival of the strangers, immediately took charge and flatly announced that she was ruler of the island. The two other families had seen this announcement coming, and they were prepared to challenge the Baroness. But she proved too much for them.

She snarled her defiance and finally drew her pistol. Then, in no uncertain terms, she announced that henceforth she was to be the queen. Then, to show her newly assumed power, she ordered her neighbors to remain in their homes. Wittmer demurred. He received a sharp crack from the Baroness' whip.

Having established her mastery, the Baroness then ordered the honeymooners and their four sailors fed, and then that they be bound hand and foot. Two days later, before they had regained their full strength, the shipwrecked six were put back in their small open boat and forced away from the island at the point of the omnipotent pearl-handled pistol!

The six unfortunates apparently had been sent to their death, but scarcely two days later they were found and rescued by a tramp schooner.

Life a Nightmare

This action on the part of the Queen made amicable relations with her neighbors impossible from that day. However, she escaped punishment for what certainly had been an attempted murder— and what was believed by the other islanders to have been murder—because there was no other power on the island strong enough to punish her.

From that date life on Charles Island was a nightmare, according to the information exclusively obtained by reporters for this newspaper.

This unnatural state of affairs continued until just a few months ago. The Queen and her two consorts, Lorenz and Philippson, lived together in the shanty palace some distance away from the other islanders. Suddenly one night the quiet was broken by a terrific din and commotion coming from the palace.

Upon investigation it developed that Lorenz, the sickly tubercular, and his close friend Philippson were engaged in a terrible fist fight. Each was swinging stones and clubs and everything he could lay hand to. Presently they were battling along the beach and—dancing beside the struggling men, goading them on, striking them both impartially with her bull-whip, was the island Baroness.

The battle did not last long because Lorenz, horribly beaten, fell exhausted on the sands. And while the frightened and heartsick islanders watched, the Baroness, with a shrill, wild shriek, threw herself into Philippson's arms and madly kissed him!

Then, and only then, did it dawn on the islanders that the ghastly, uneven battle had been fought for the affections of the fiendish Queen!

Lorenz was carefully carried into the Wittmer home, where his bruises and cuts were treated, while he slept the sleep of the exhausted. And this midnight struggle marked the reaching of another milestone in the island experiment.

The Baroness and her new consort stayed to themselves for the next few days, while Lorenz recuperated. Finally he was strong enough to venture out alone. Philippson met him, and an instant later the two men were at each other's throats again. As in the earlier encounter, Lorenz was soon beaten down to the sun-baked earth, a defeated gladiator.

Whenever Lorenz was able after that, the two men fought. On one occasion the sick man put in a telling blow with a large club, which stunned Philippson, and that day the Baroness welcomed Lorenz back to her castle. His victory was short-lived, however, because his enemy soon chased him away. But the brief reunion was enough to instill an everlasting hope into his weary breast and lead him into battle, even when he knew his cause was lost before he had begun.

But this couldn't go on! Finally Philippson's alliance with the Baroness became so strong that he prevailed upon her to banish Lorenz from the island. And this she did. A Norwegian sailor named Nuggerud, who frequently put in at the little bay, finally agreed to carry the ailing and defeated man to the mainland.

Early one morning they set out. The Baroness, true to character to the last, drove Lorenz aboard the small launch, lashed him brutally with the whip, spat in his face and otherwise insulted him. Her parting words were: "I hope you die!"

Death in Agony

Her wish was granted, for it was the bodies of Lorenz and Nuggerud the fisherman that were found on Marchena Island. Apparently a storm had overtaken them, their boat had sprung a leak, and they had put in at the nearest land. Their water supply was soon exhausted and there was no fresh water on Marchena. They were unable to leave in their damaged boat. So they wasted away in the long, agonizing death of the starved and the parched.

The exiling of Lorenz really ended the Charles Island experiments. The Baroness and Philippson soon disappeared. It was said that they had been taken away in a boat, but later it was reported that they too had died from starvation on another island of the group where they had set up a new home. Their ultimate destinies may always remain a mystery.

A short time later Dr. Ritter died suddenly. It was said that he had eaten tainted food, but Frau Koervin insisted that grief over the disastrous chain of events on the island had killed him. She immediately set sail for Germany and her family.

So ends the "great experiment" of Galapagos—and a story of stark, naked realism which will live as a horrible lesson to mankind through the ages.

Life was full and comfortable for these friendly couples until about two years ago. Then a strange trio landed on the rough beach of Charles Island and announced their intention of establishing a home there.

The leader of the trio, strangely enough, seemed to be a lean, fanatical young woman, who announced herself as the Baroness Eloise Bosquet de Wagner Wehrborn, of Paris. She had won her title through marriage to a French War ace, whom she had abandoned but would not divorce.

With her were Alfred Rudolph Lorenz, small, weak, tubercular and her lover, and their common friend, Robert Phillipson, strong, handsome and robust. All three were Germans.

The Baroness and her two friends soon became the talk of the islands. Her favorite costume was a pair of silk panties and an abbreviated "sun shirt." Whenever she appeared outside her home she wore a large pearl-handled pistol strapped to her side and carried an ugly-looking bull-whip.

The three lived in apparent harmony and foraged for their food, along with the other residents of the island. But one day their gentle neighbors were horrified to learn that a favorite pastime for the Baroness was to shoot harmless animals on the island, and then carefully nurse them back to health!

First Horror Revealed

She "never wished to kill," but she seemed most happy when she was ministering to some beast which she had critically wounded with her ever-threatening pistol. The practice revolted her nature-loving neighbors and they complained—futilely.

For a short time after this revelation the residents of Charles Island lived pretty much to themselves. Then one day an open boat drifted into a small bay on the island, bearing five men and a woman, all of them nearly dead from thirst and exposure to the tropical sun.

They managed to identify themselves as Pablo Rolando, his bride, Blanca Rosa, and four sailors. The Rolandos were on a honeymoon on a small yacht. It was wrecked and they and the four sailors were forced to put off in the small boat. They reached the island just when it seemed certain they could stave off death for only a few hours.

The Baroness, advised of the arrival of the strangers, immediately took charge and flatly announced that she was ruler of the island. The two other families had seen this announcement coming, and they were prepared to challenge the Baroness. But she proved too much for them.

She snarled her defiance and finally drew her pistol. Then, in no uncertain terms, she announced that henceforth she was to be the queen. Then, to show her newly assumed power, she ordered her neighbors to remain in their homes. Wittmer demurred. He received a sharp crack from the Baroness' whip.

Having established her mastery, the Baroness then ordered the honeymooners and their four sailors fed, and then that they be bound hand and foot. Two days later, before they had regained their full strength, the shipwrecked six were put back in their small open boat and forced away from the island at the point of the omnipotent pearl-handled pistol!

The six unfortunates apparently had been sent to their death, but scarcely two days later they were found and rescued by a tramp schooner.

Life a Nightmare

This action on the part of the Queen made amicable relations with her neighbors impossible from that day. However, she escaped punishment for what certainly had been an attempted murder—and what was believed by the other islanders to have been murder—because there was no other power on the island strong enough to punish her.

From that date life on Charles Island was a nightmare, according to the information exclusively obtained by reporters for this newspaper.

This unnatural state of affairs continued until just a few months ago. The Queen and her two consorts, Lorenz and Philippson, lived together in the shanty palace some distance away from the other islanders. Suddenly one night the quiet was broken by a terrific din and commotion coming from the palace.

Upon investigation it developed that Lorenz, the sickly tubercular, and his close friend Philippson were engaged in a terrible fist fight. Each was swinging stones and clubs and everything he could lay hand to. Presently they were battling along the beach and—dancing beside the struggling men, goading them on, striking them both impartially with her bull-whip, was the island Baroness.

The battle did not last long because Lorenz, horribly beaten, fell exhausted on the sands. And while the frightened and heartsick islanders watched, the Baroness, with a shrill, wild shriek, threw herself into Philippson's arms and madly kissed him!

Then, and only then, did it dawn on the islanders that the ghastly, uneven battle had been fought for the affections of the fiendish Queen!

Lorenz was carefully carried into the Wittmer home, where his bruises and cuts were treated, while he slept the sleep of the exhausted. And this midnight struggle marked the reaching of another milestone in the island experiment.

The Baroness and her new consort stayed to themselves for the next few days, while Lorenz recuperated. Finally he was strong enough to venture out alone. Philippson met him, and an instant later the two men were at each other's throats again. As in the earlier encounter, Lorenz was soon beaten down to the sun-baked earth, a defeated gladiator.

Whenever Lorenz was able after that, the two men fought. On one occasion the sick man put in a telling blow with a large club, which stunned Philippson, and that day the Baroness welcomed Lorenz back to her castle. His victory was short-lived, however, because his enemy soon chased him away. But the brief reunion was enough to instill an everlasting hope into his weary breast and lead him into battle, even when he knew his cause was lost before he had begun.

But this couldn't go on! Finally Philippson's alliance with the Baroness became so strong that he prevailed upon her to banish Lorenz from the island. And this she did. A Norwegian sailor named Nuggerud, who frequently put in at the little bay, finally agreed to carry the ailing and defeated man to the mainland.

Early one morning they set out. The Baroness, true to character to the last, drove Lorenz aboard the small launch, lashed him brutally with the whip, spat in his face and otherwise insulted him. Her parting words were: "I hope you die!"

Death in Agony

Her wish was granted, for it was the bodies of Lorenz and Nuggerud the fisherman that were found on Marchena Island. Apparently a storm had overtaken them, their boat had sprung a leak, and they had put in at the nearest land. Their water supply was soon exhausted and there was no fresh water on Marchena. They were unable to leave in their damaged boat. So they wasted away in the long, agonizing death of the starved and the parched.

The exiling of Lorenz really ended the Charles Island experiments. The Baroness and Philippson soon disappeared. It was said that they had been taken away in a boat, but later it was reported that they too had died from starvation on another island of the group where they had set up a new home. Their ultimate destinies may always remain a mystery.

A short time later Dr. Ritter died suddenly. It was said that he had eaten tainted food, but Frau Koervin insisted that grief over the disastrous chain of events on the island had killed him. She immediately set sail for Germany and her family.

This left only Arthur Wittmer and his wife on the island. They are attempting to take up their happy life where it left off upon the arrival of the Baroness.

So ends the "great experiment" of Galapagos—and a story of stark, naked realism which will live as a horrible lesson to mankind through the ages.

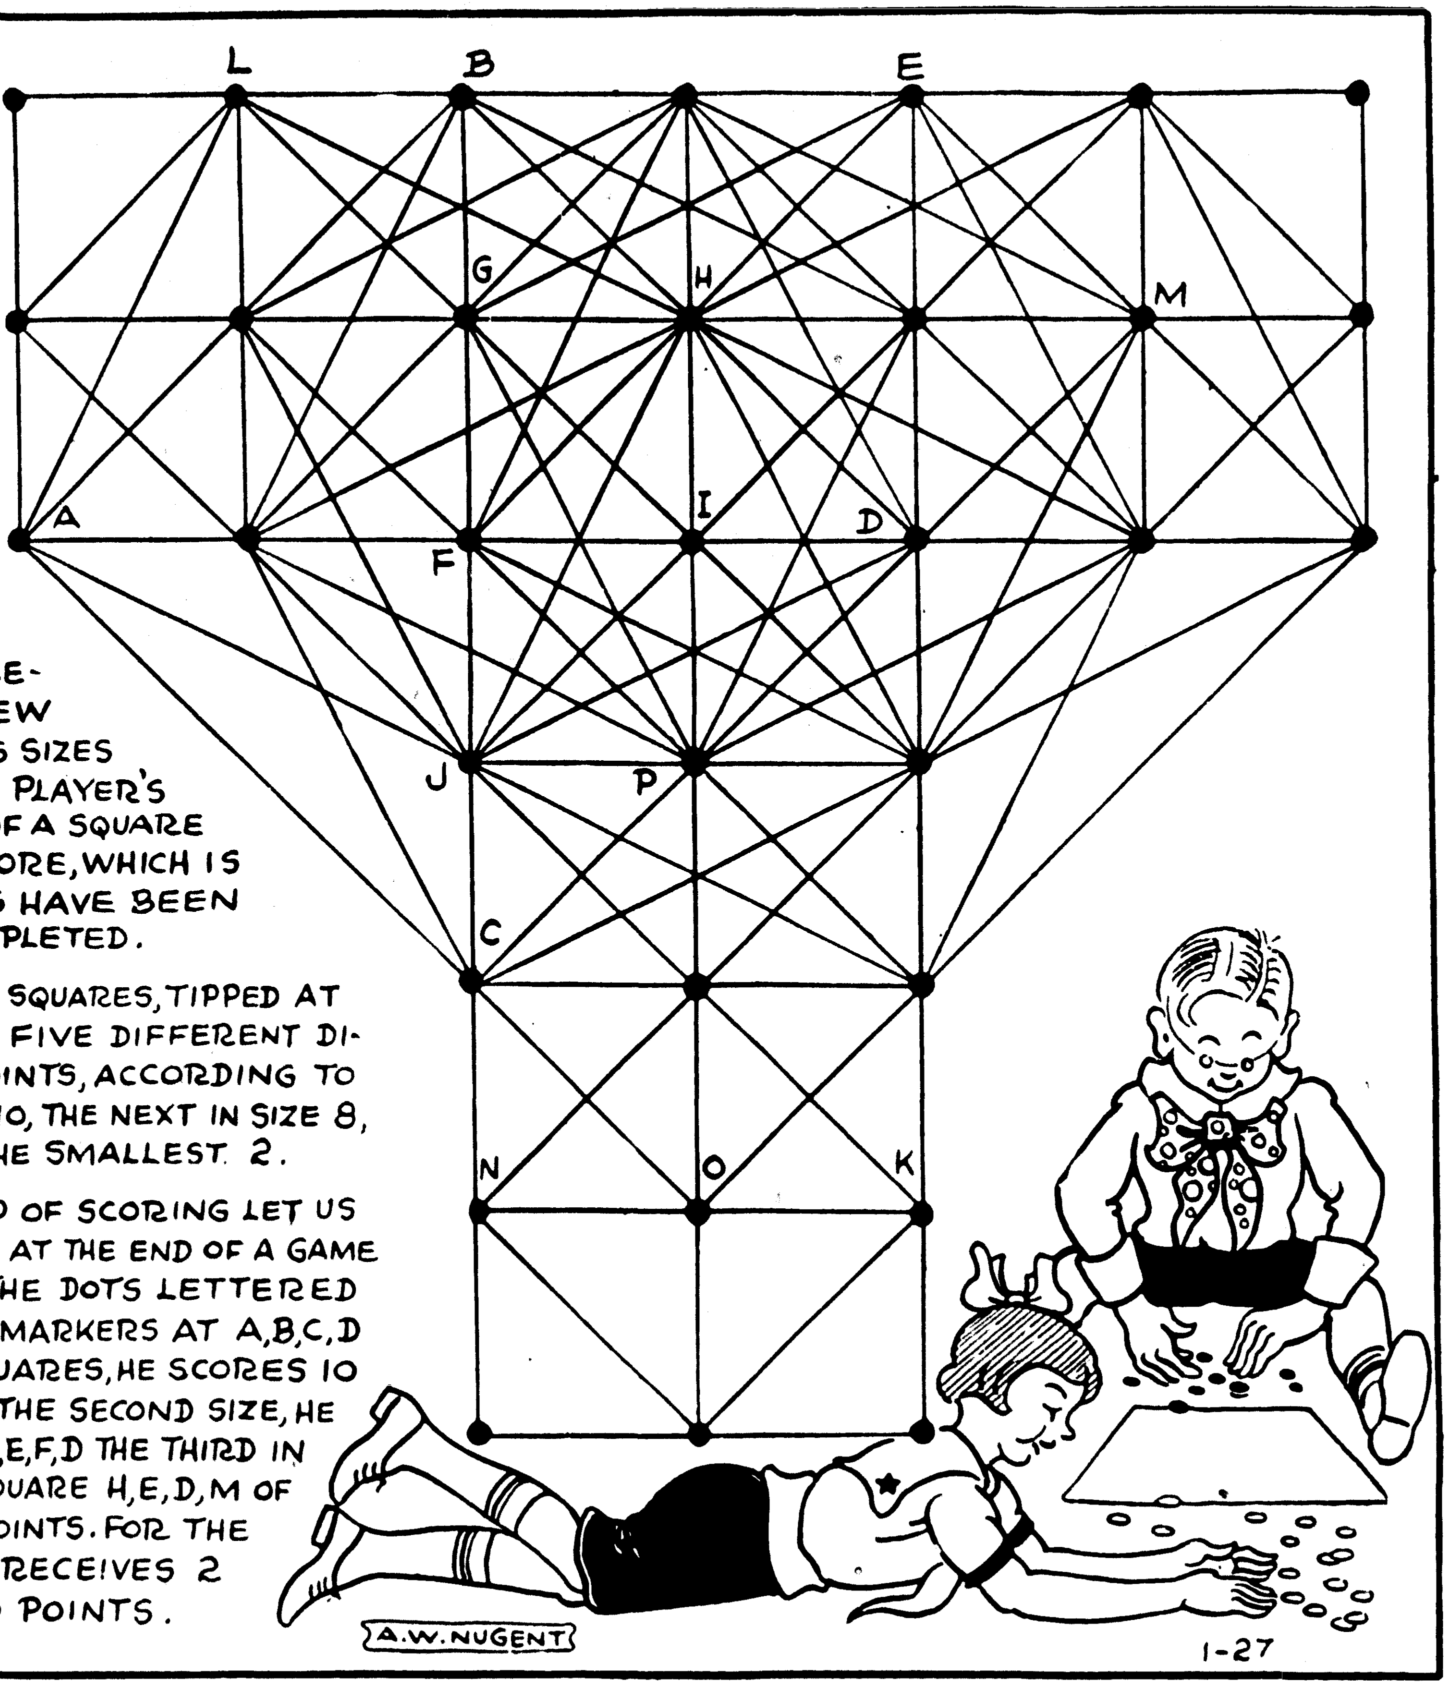
A GAME OF SQUARES

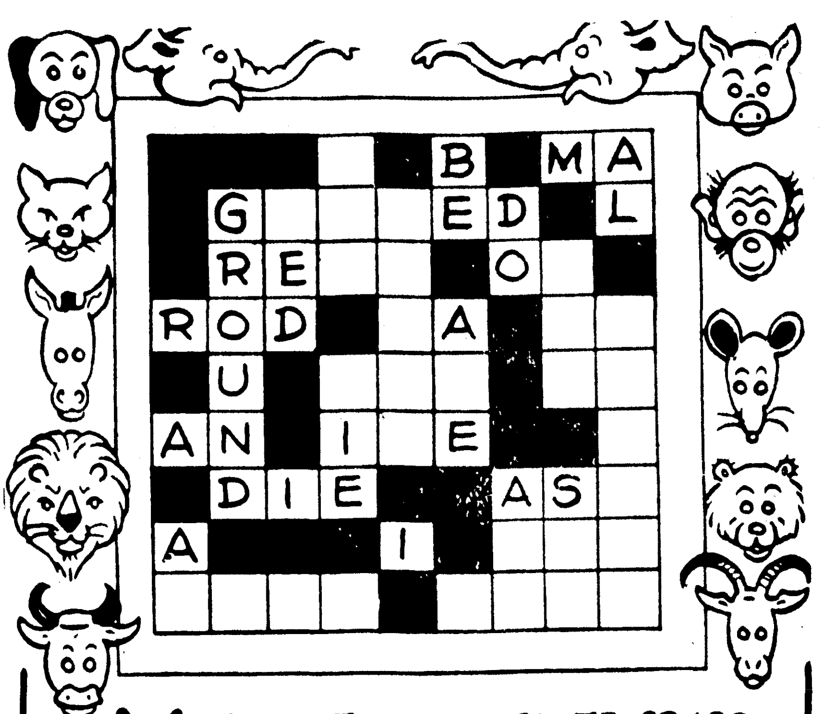


In playing squares each of two players provides himself with sixteen small buttons or cut-out pieces of cardboard. Each player's sixteen markers must be of different colors to identify them.

Take turns placing one marker at a time on the unoccupied dots . . . These placements are selected with a view to forming squares of various sizes described within the field. A player's markers at the four corners of a square capture that square for his score, which is counted when thirty-two dots have been covered and the game is completed.

There are squares within squares, tipped at various angles, and of five different dimentions. A square counts in points, according to its size; the largest counts 10, the next in size 8, the next 6, the next 4 and the smallest 2.

To illustrate the method of scoring let us assume that a player at the end of a game finds his markers occupying the dots lettered A,B,C,D,E,F,G,H,I,J,K,L,M,N,O,P. His markers at A,B,C,D outline one of the largest squares, he scores 10 points. His square A,L,H,J is of the second size, he scores 8 points. For his square B,E,F,D the third in size, he receives 6 points. The square H,E,D,M of the fourth size gives him 4 points. For the smallest size square G,H,F,I he receives 2 points and so his total is 30 points.



To finish this incomplete cross word puzzle print the names of nine certain animals in the empty squares reading across and down.

If you do this correctly the combined letters will complete the other cross words.

The Magic Penny

Place a derby hat on a glass with a penny between the edge of the glass and the crown of the hat. Hold the edge of the hat and lift it slightly as you drop a number of other pennies into the hat. When the penny falls into the glass it will appear as though one cent passed through the hat.

Please paste this entire square on a piece of thin cardboard and then cut out my picture around the outline.

Then bend my legs my head and my tail downward on the dotted lines.

If you do this correctly I will promise to stand on my own feet

Fasten a piece of thread, about ten inches long, through the dot on my back and move it to make me dance.

DICK TRACY
by Chester Gould
YOU SEE, GENTLEMEN - MY MEN AND I ARE SOMEWHAT DETECTIVE-MINDED OURSELVES.
OKAY- YOU CAN PUT THE DUKES DOWN.
YOU SEE WHEN YOU TWO STARTED UP THE STEPS TO THIS APARTMENT, I SENT MY MEN DOWN THE BACK WAY THROUGH THE BASEMENT WITH TEAR BOMBS.
NATURALLY, BEING POLICEMEN, YOU REALIZED THE FUTILITY OF ENGAGING MY MEN IN A GUN BATTLE THERE ON THE STAIRWAY WITH YOUR EYES FULL OF TEAR GAS.
BUT WHERE IS DICK TRACY? AND WHY IS THAT WOMAN TIED TO THAT DOOR?
AH - THE LITTLE LADY CAN NOW BE UNTIED. RELEASE HER, D-3. YOU SEE SHE WAS FASTENED THERE - JUST TO PREVENT YOU FROM SHOOTING THROUGH THE DOOR IN CASE YOUR PLANS HAD GOTTEN THAT FAR.
TRACY IS IN THERE! IN THAT CHLOROFORM-FILLED CLOSET. BY NOW HE'S PROBABLY....
OPEN UP THAT CLOSET, ARSON!
INDEED WE SHALL OPEN THE CLOSET!
ARE YOU IN THERE, DETECTIVE? ANSWER ME - IF YOU CAN - HM! THERE'S NO ANSWER, A-1.
TRUE! THERE IS NO ANSWER. JUST AS I EXPECTED, THE CHLOROFORM HAS HAD ITS EFFECT. OPEN THE CLOSET, D-3.
WHY ARSON - YOU DIRTY--!
GENTLEMEN, I NOW PRESENT TO YOU THE GREAT DETECTIVE - HIMSELF - THE ONE AND ONLY - STICK 'EM UP - BORIS ARSON AND YOUR RATS! STICK 'EM UP!
TRACY!
TRUE! I WAS IN A CLOSET FILLED WITH CHLOROFORM. BUT IF YOU REMEMBER, WHEN YOU SHOVED ME IN THERE - I FIRED A SHOT AT YOU THROUGH THE DOOR.
WELL, I IMMEDIATELY PUT MY MOUTH TO THE HOLE MADE BY THAT BULLET, AND BREATHED THROUGH THE OPENING. I FELT IF I KEPT QUIET EVERYTHING WOULD WORK OUT GREAT. PUT THE CUFFS ON THEM, PAT!
